PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS.

EAST SYDNEY ELECTORATE.

MR. G. H. REID'S MEETING.

Yesterday evening a meeting of the friends and supporters of Mr. G. H. Reid, one of the candidates for the representation of East Sydney, was held at the Temperance Hall. There was a good attendance. Mr. H. M'Master occupied the chair.

Mr. REID, who was received with continued demonstrations of applause, commenced by thanking the chairman for the kind manner in which he had introduced him to the meeting; and although the present gathering did not wear a very fierce aspect, that was not without its advantages to a man who made his first political address. (Applause.) He confessed that in arranging the order of his addresses, he had made a point of fixing his address on free trade for Monday night, so that some of his more enthusiastic protectionist friends, who gave him such a fierce reception recently on the other side of the city, might stay away. He might say at once that he had received so many encouraging promises of support that, although it might seem presumptuous in him to say so, he was not at all afraid that he had made a mistake in seeking election at the hands of the electors of East Sydney. (Cheers.) He had found that he had friends of another class—men who were very anxious that he should get into Parliament, but equally anxious that he should woo the suffrages of some other constituency. But he wished to say at once that in this contest he intended to nail his colours to the mast—(applause)—that he intended to become one of the members for East Sydney, and if defeated he would not stir one inch to seek the suffrages of any other constituency in the country. (Applause.) He felt perfectly convinced that if he was spared in health and spirits he would one day be one of their members. (Cheers.) And he was happy to say he was still young enough to wait for the distinction. (Applause.) No one could realise more that he did the importance of the position of a representative of the people, and no one could feel more than he did a sense of the solemn obligation which devolved upon such a man to devote his best efforts and his utmost zeal to the development of the progress and the welfare of the country. But he was quite aware that they had a right to expect something more than zeal from their representative; they had a right to expect some aptitude for political affairs, and some knowledge of the resources, the condition, and of the progress of the country. As a beginner, it was impossible for him to give them any proof of his fitness for the position to which he aspired; but they must remember that all the greatest statesmen who had ever lived, at one time of their career, stood in the same position. (Cheers.) And if beginners were never to get a trial, political life would soon become extinct, for unhappily our orators, our wise men, and our statesmen did not live for ever. He could give them some guarantee, however, that he was likely to prove a useful representative. He could point with some pride to some of the names on his committee. Many of those names were household words in the community for ability, sound judgment, and integrity. (Hear, hear.) Whether successful or defeated, he felt that the support of such men would certainly save him from disgrace. (Cheers.) He might claim to have some knowledge of the resources and condition of this country, for, as some of them might be aware, a work upon that subject, which was the production of his pen, was published by the Government of this country, and distributed in Europe and America; and the reception which that book had at the hands of the Australian and British Press, was he thought, as useful to the country as it was flattering to himself. (Cheers.) Now perhaps they would allow him to address them briefly upon some of the leading questions of the day; and first of all let him deal with the question of public instruction. (Hear, hear.) If it were true that all national wealth came from the soil, it was equally true that the happiness and honour, or the degradation and misery of a people sprang from the mind. (Hear, hear.) They might boast of their discoveries of gold, of tin, or of copper; they might boast of the richness of the soil and the beauty of the climate; but more important than all that was the education and enlightenment of the people who inhabit the country. (Applause.) The only difference between a barbarous and an illustrious race was not the difference in body or in soul, but the difference of education and enlightment. Holding those views they would be prepared to hear that everything which, in his opinion, tended to promote the spread of education would always find in him a warm supporter. (Hear, hear.) If every parent did his duty by his children we should have been spared all those bitter struggles over the question of education. But Parliament, having observed that many thousands of children were growing up in the darkness of ignorance, felt that something must be done to save them from that condition. And when we consider the thin settlement of our population over the vast interior of New South Wales, it very soon became evident that to carry out this work it was necessary to adopt some uniform system. Better far was it that there should be one State school in every district, than that there should be two rival schools in one district, and no school at all in another. (Cheers.) And the wisdom of the legislation to promote public instruction, which began in 1866, was proved by this one magnificent fact: that whereas in the year 1866 there were only 59,000 children attending all the schools of the colony, in the year 1879 that number had risen to 155,000 children. (Applause.) There was another aspect of this question. We should not conceal from ourselves that there was a very large section of the community who looked upon the Public Schools Act with the greatest disapprobation, and who considered it so far from meeting the necessities of the case that they declined to send their children into those State schools. He thought no man could pretend to be a sound politician who would not do everything in his power to remove such a dangerous source of dissatisfaction. It was the worst of political crimes to make capital out of the religious differences of any classes of the community. (Hear, hear). He trusted that, whatever his future career in political life might be, he would ever remain true to the principles in which he believed, and he hoped his name would never be associated with any attempt to stir up such dissensions in the community. He hoped, before long, if those differences were approached by those who had the power in a friendly and a generous spirit, we might be able to persuade the Churches, after all, that this system which gathers the children into common schools, and, at the same time, enables the religious authorities to visit the schools and instruct the children, was more likely to promote the spread of true religion than any religion which could be taught by a schoolmaster. (Hear, hear.) He believed that one visit from the clergymen, to the children in any of these Public schools, would produce a far better impression upon them than all the religious instruction at the hands of a schoolmaster in a month. So far as he remembered, in his young days, they might occasionally fear, and had always to respect the authority of the schoolmaster, but he never was a man whom they were likely to look upon as their best guide in religious matters; but, on the other hand, there was generally in the minds of the young a profound respect for those to whom they looked for spiritual instruction, and if the Churches, recognising the duty of implanting in the minds of the rising generation religious impressions, would only take advantage of the facilities offered, they would soon find that those disastrous results which many feared would not flow from our Public school system. There was another very important question. He alluded to the question of finance. They were all aware that for some years past the revenue of the country had advanced at a marvellous rate. It sprang from about 2 millions in the year 1870 to something like 4¼ millions in the year 1879. There was one thing they might have expected from this great increase in the public revenue, and that was, that they should never have to deal with financial difficulties. But, unfortunately, the expenditure of the country had increased at even a greater rate than the revenue, remarkable as that was. He thought one of the most important duties which any representative of the people could have in view was a very keen examination of the expenditure of the country. Nothing, he thought, could be more lamentable than that from a want of good management of the financial affairs of the State it became necessary to impose taxation in any form which might be dispensed with; and he firmly believed that with prudence and economy there was not the slightest need whatever for taxation in any form. He felt convinced from a study of the public finances that that was the case. But whilst he would oppose anything like extravagance, he would never be found to sympathise with that cheese-paring economy which sought to realize the highest financial statesmanship by saving some £20 or £30 from the salary of their public servants. To him it had always seemed lamentable that the time of Parliament should be wasted over such insignificant questions. (Applause.) There was another most important question—that affecting the public lands. There could not be the slightest doubt that the legislation in this direction, however well meant it might have been, had certainly not saved the public from a number of vexatious questions and conflicting interests in regard to the public estate of the colony. He would not enter at great length upon that aspect of the subject; but it had struck him from the first that the sound principles of progress which characterised the growth of every great nation had not been satisfactorily studied here. If they would study this question they would find that the graduating stages of national progress were after this fashion:—In the first stage they had vast squattages—vast territories covered with flocks and herds; and then as time rolled on, a smaller class of settlers grew up, and out of that smaller class in time came the farmers of the country. If there was a mistake in their land legislation it was that they attempted too soon to establish a great agricultural interest. (Applause.) He believed that even now it would be well if they endeavoured to throw open the public lands in the more settled districts of the country to a class of men with some capital, who might have a freehold something like that given under the present law, and have attached to it a leasehold of several thousand acres. He had no sympathy with the reckless alienation of the public lands of the country. (Applause.) He believed that there was one great principle which should always be kept in view—that the public estate of the country should never be parted with at a greater rate than the settlement of an industrious and thriving population demanded—(applause)—and he believed that out of this class, which he should like to see spreading through this country, would come in future years a class which they attempted to found too soon; because one remarkable effect of pastoral industry had been that the spread of their flocks and herds were rapidly changing the condition and character of the soil; whereas, in the first stages, and even in the Bathurst district, where there were some of the finest plains in the colony, some 50 or 60 years ago the soil was of the loosest formation. But the constant treading of stock had bound it together, and they had now a firmness and elasticity of soil which they would scarcely expect to find out of England. And so it was in the back districts of the country. Instead of the land there being useless for agricultural purposes, it was rapidly becoming fertilized, and it was only after this process that they would find the interior of the country suitable for prosperous agriculture. (Cheers.) There was a very interesting question in connection with the public lands, that was that the public should waive the payment of the interest legally due upon conditional purchases. It was a request which might have been well met with greater firmness. He thought that when that deputation from the Selectors' Conference waited on the Minister for Lands, he might well have been in a position to say that whilst all the other suggestions of the conference would receive most careful attention on the part of that department, there was one on which he felt it was his duty that they had not the slightest hope of receiving consideration from the present Administration. (Cheers.) If there was one point upon which the Government should be firm, it was one of this kind, which affected the public interest; and which, if encouraged, would become a source of danger to the whole community. (Cheers.) If they were not firm now, when there were no political parties, what would the danger be if they had in this country two parties nearly equally balanced. Then they would see the evils of claims of this kind. He trusted the people of the country would always show opposition to anything which tended to mix the politics of the country up with matters of private interest and private advantage. (Applause.) Now, he came to the question of immigration. He had always been a firm believer in the benefit to be derived in a country like this for some system of immigration. Situated as they were—so distant from the great centres of population, with a great territory scarcely settled, and enjoying a state of the highest prosperity, there should be only one wish in the heart of every patriotic individual — that as many as possible might enjoy the advantages which they possessed, and assist them in developing the resources of their country. The improvement in the means of communication between England and Australia had lately been so remarkable that they might soon hope to enjoy the advantages of a good stream of immigration without any effort on the part of the Government at all. (Applause.) If there was a class he should like to see introduced here more than another it was the class of agricultural labourers. (Applause.) But they did not want any addition to the population of this overgrown metropolis. Sydney, at the present time, in reference to the population of New South Wales, was twice as large as London was in reference to the population of the United Kingdom. Then there was another subject of very great importance—he alluded to the extension of railways throughout the length and breadth of the country. A few years ago there was nothing more remarkable than the want of enterprise in this direction, the rate of progress on their railways was slow in the extreme; and it was not until Sir Hercules Robinson—(cheers)—went somewhat out of his way to denounce that state of things that they made anything like improvement. But they were now on the right track. A good deal of vigour had been infused into the extension of their railways, and already they saw the result in the rapidly increasing importance of their trade with the interior. They ought to keep in view the extension of two or three great lines—such as the line connecting Sydney with the Great Northern Railway, a railway to Bourke, which would pierce the very heart of the Australian continent, and a railway to Hay, which was in the same position. When they had a railway uniting Sydney with Brisbane on the north and with Melbourne on the south, and also the extension to the western border, it would soon be seen that there was only one spot which could possibly be the centre of the Australian Empire; and it was their proud privilege to inherit that spot. (Applause.) They would allow him to say a few words in reference to the situation of the Legislative Council. There was nothing he would oppose more warmly than any change in the direction of making the Upper House elective. (Applause.) He believed that the nominee principle was one of the greatest safeguards which its people possessed. (Applause.) A nominee House might occasionally retard legislation, but it could only resist the public will for a limited period, and no sooner had the will of the people been made known than the Council had always respected its decisions. (Applause.) Another question was the payment of members. There were many who thought that if members of Parliament were paid they would be more under the control of the people who paid them. But in point of fact it was exactly the opposite. No man as a general rule was likely to put himself out of a good billet, and therefore the last thing a member of Parliament could wish was a dissolution of the Assembly. The example of Victoria in this respect might be taken as a warning. (Cheers.) The services of members of Parliament should be rendered without any remuneration; but when all the highest services a man could render to his country were appraised at £300 a year, he thought they reached a contemptible and disastrous condition. (Applause.) Coming now to the licensing question, there were, he maintained, great difficulties to contend with, in attempting to remove evils in connection with the liquor traffic. Whilst he sympathised with the advocates of temperance reform, he had too great a zeal for reform to advocate one which, if it could ever be accomplished, must be postponed for an indefinite period. And, therefore, he was no advocate for local option—(cheers)—which would never be adopted here, unless after a protracted and bitter agitation. But something might be done at once to lessen the evils. An Act was passed last session to suspend the further issue of licenses for the county of Cumberland. Why should not that Act be extended over a lengthened period, and to every town in New South Wales. No one would deny that in every town in the colony there was a far larger number of public houses than the public convenience could possibly require; so that no inconvenience would spring from this reform—though great advantage would accrue, because the trade would be relieved from the unhealthy competition which was fast degrading it; and it would be conducted on a far better system. Of course he was in favour of a Civil Service Act. He had been a member of the Civil Service for fourteen or fifteen years, and he had had many opportunities of observing the evils for which such an Act would probably be an efficient remedy. It was a disgrace to the country that its Civil servants had no place upon the statute book of the land; that men who were charged with the practical administration of the public business were not regulated by some Legislative provision. If he succeeded in obtaining a place in Parliament, his utmost efforts would be devoted to assist in passing any measure of the kind. Although there was not so much abuse of patronage as many thought, he had often observed instances which had caused him the keenest indignation. Nothing could be more unjust to a man than to place a person from outside the service over his head. It must be remembered that those in the Civil Service devoted their lives to it, and, as a rule, became unfit for any other employment. It was a heartless thing that a man who had served the country for many years should, at the suggestion of some private interest, or to serve some political purpose, be deprived of the reward of a faithful and honest career in the service of the country. (Applause.) He preferred to leave the question of free trade until another occasion, but there was one part of the subject to which he would like to refer—the question of intercolonial free trade. (Hear, hear.) That was a question about which something had lately been said by the Premier of Victoria. But what Mr. Berry meant was that he was anxious to effect that great political achievement of which he spoke some years ago, and to bring the whole of the colonies under the sway of his statesmanlike policy. He hoped the people of New South Wales would never think of intercolonial free trade unless it was based upon the broad principle of free trade with the world at large; and he was sure the people of New South Wales would never enter into any intercolonial arrangement hostile to the people or the commerce of the mother country. (Cheers.) Some people spoke of the British as though they did nothing but flood our markets with cheap manufactures; but men of sense ought to know that it was the British people who kept us in existence, who paid millions to us for the products of our soil. (Cheers.) The British people were the only great customers we had got. (Hear, hear.) If there was any people for whom we ought to have the highest affection and admiration, it was the people of the mother country. (Applause.) We should remember that we enjoyed the fee simple of this magnificent territory. We had one of the freest political systems in the world, simply because the mother country endowed us with a political Constitution. (Hear, hear.) He trusted that that would never be forgotten. There was a gentleman at the end of the hall who in the early part of the evening seemed to doubt his assertion as to the progress and prosperity of New South Wales. Perhaps that gentleman would allow him to give a few hard facts from the last Statistical Register, which would show that New South Wales was one of the most progressive and prosperous countries under the sun. He would begin with population. During the last ten years the population of New South Wales had increased at the rate of nearly 50 per cent. The growth of population in this country from 1788 to 1870 was increased by 50 per cent. during the past ten years. Since the year 1861 the area of unoccupied country in New South Wales taken up for pastoral purposes exceeded the combined area of England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales, Denmark, Belgium, the Netherlands, Switzerland, and Greece. (Hear, hear.) Surely that was a grand fact in the industrial progress of this country. Coming now to the live stock, he found that during the last 10 years they had increased from 19 million head to 32 million head. And whereas 20 years ago the colony of Victoria had as many sheep as New South Wales, at the present time the live stock of New South Wales exceeded that of Victoria, Queensland, and South Australia combined. (Cheers.) Then he came to the holdings of land—the freehold occupation of the country, and he found that while it took eighty-five years to increase the holdings of the country to an area of ten and a half million acres, in the past six years that result of eighty-five years of progress had been doubled. (Applause.) And even in respect to cultivation, in which New South Wales was perhaps the most backward of all the Australian Colonies, the increase of the past four years had amounted to 40 per cent. Now about bank deposits. We had often been told that one of the most disastrous results of a policy of free trade was that it took our money out of the country. It would somewhat reassure them to know that during the past fifteen years the bank deposits of the country have risen from six millions to the magnificent total of nineteen millions"—(cheers)—an increase of 300 per cent. And as for the neighbouring colony of Victoria, which for the same period had been, according to the protectionist theory, keeping the money in the country, we were actually the other day able to lend her £500,000 when Mr. Berry wanted to make both ends meet. (Cheers.) All or nearly all the industrial progress of the country can be discovered in the grand total of its trade and commerce; and every lover of New South Wales would be glad to know that the commerce of this country had increased during the last ten years from 15 millions to 27 millions sterling. The shipping had increased at the same rate—74 per cent. during those ten years. The export of wool had risen during the same period from 47 million lbs. to 128 million lbs. (Cheers.) Perhaps some one would say he had forgotten to speak about manufactures. We had heard a good deal about the insignificant dimensions of our manufactures, and we had heard that most of our artizans were out of employment. But we found that in spite of this disastrous state of affairs we had at the present time no fewer than 2500 manufactories, employing some 25,000 hands. Comparing the number of hands employed in the manufactories with those so employed in Victoria, against in each case the total population of the colony, he found that the sister colony had the advantage of only the fraction of a hand per cent. (Hear, hear.) It was because he had studied the resources and progress of this country with increasing interest and delight, because he had learned to love its loyal and generous inhabitants, that he took the earliest opportunity of offering his services to the public. (Cheers.) But let them never forget that, after all, their prospects of future greatness depended rather on the maintenance of the grand moral and physical qualities of our Anglo-Saxon race. They had reason to believe that the native-born will ever prove worthy of their parent stock. (Cheers.) Already our cricketers and our oarsmen had proved upon the flower of British manhood that Australians were true chips of the old block. (Cheers.) If there was one thing more than another which made him a lover of the people of New South Wales, it was this—they seemed to follow more closely than any of her daughters the illustrious steps of the mother country. (Cheers.) Adopting the genius of her political Constitution, they had caught the inspirations of her majestic power. They did not desecrate the soil of freedom with the chains of commercial slavery. (Loud cheers.) They emulated the manly and enlightened people of England, who, in freely diffusing her resources, had developed her strength—(cheers)—whose fleets sped along every ocean track filled with the comforts and blessings of civilization, and returned with spreading sails to her distant shores, laden with the rude offerings of a grateful world, which refresh her myriad energies only to flow again into the arteries of her universal commerce. (Loud cheers, which continued for some minutes.)

Mr. W. Clinch moved, and M'Millan seconded, that Mr. G. H. Reid was a fit and proper person to represent the electorate of East Sydney. The motion was carried by acclamation, and, after cheers for the Queen and for the chairman, the meeting, which was very quiet and orderly all through, broke up.

A crowded meeting of the electors was held last evening, at the Victoria Hotel, off Palmer-street, Woolloomooloo, to further the candidature of Mr. Charles Moore. Mr. Macintosh, who was in the chair, introduced Mr. Moore to the electors, who then briefly addressed them on the political topics now being discussed. He referred strongly to the necessity of urging on the great sewerage scheme, so as to promote the health of the people. He also alluded to the water supply question, the payment of interest by free selectors, which he would uphold, as they originally agreed to pay; the railway to the deep waters of the harbour, and other matters. His opinions, as delivered, were frequently applauded, and gave general satisfaction. It was then proposed by Mr. A. Dean, and seconded by Mr. J. Hardie, "That Mr. Charles Moore was a fit and proper person to represent them in Parliament." The proposition was supported by Messrs. Salier, Bayliss, M'Mahon, and Bradley, and carried unanimously amidst great cheers. A vote of thanks to the chairman and three cheers for the Queen brought the meeting to a termination, after which a large committee was formed to forward and secure Mr. Moore's election on the polling-day.

WEST SYDNEY ELECTORATE.

MR. ROYLANCE'S MEETING.

At the Native Rose Hotel, last night, Mr. Roylance addressed a large number of the electors of West Sydney, and the usual resolutions in support of the candidate were passed. Subsequently J. W. Roylance addressed the electors at the Turon Inn, at the corner of George and Harris streets, Mr. Cleary occupying the chair, and introducing the candidate in a highly eulogistic speech.

Mr. ROYLANCE prefaced his address by stating that he had been requested to come forward as a representative of the electorate at the instance of many of the working men and others with whom he had come in contact. The financial condition of the colony at the present time demanded most serious attention at the hands of the next Parliament. Various proposals had been submitted by the Government during the last session, notably the wool and coal tax, which had been signally defeated. Yet with a deficiency staring the colony in the face, Sir Henry Parkes had not given any indication of what the future policy of the Government would be in this respect. This being so, he could not promise to support the Government, not knowing what their policy would be. He thought that if the lands of the colony were placed on a proper footing the money required for all purposes would be raised by the rents received by the lease of lands combined with a fixity of tenure to both squatters and selectors. (Cheers.) Immediately connected with the well-being of the majority was the question of immigration. He was totally opposed to immigration for the next three years at least. Every department of labour in the colony, no matter what, was surcharged, and in proof of this he mentioned the fact that the Government had during the last month discharged hundreds of men, either through the scarcity of work, or, as some alleged, from their not having sufficient funds to carry on the required works; and the same thing was being done in private firms and among the employers in the city and country. Yet there were ships coming every month laden with four or five hundred immigrants, the chief among whom were skilled artizans and mechanics, gulled here with the vain hope of gaining employment, who remained until on the verge of starvation. Looked at in whatever light, the present system wanted sweeping out of existence. (Applause.) Regarding the education question, he was an earnest believer in and a stanch advocate of secular, compulsory, and free education, and while willing to allow the present Act to remain as it was, if it had to be altered it should be in the direction he indicated. The licensing laws of the country were in a most deplorable condition, and the scenes that had been enacted on the magisterial benches during the last two years were in his opinion simply disgraceful. He was in favour of the system of local option, believing the number of licensed houses required in any neighbourhood should be decided by the residents. He trusted this subject would receive the earliest attention. He was decidedly in favour of county boards as applied to local government, believing the Parliament would do its work better and more effectively, and deal with questions in a broader spirit, if relieved of the local wants, that could and ought to be well attended to by such boards. He need not say he was not in favour of the Chinese coming here at all, and thought that the approaching conference would fail in its object. If returned to Parliament, he would never rest until this matter was brought to the fore, and he would do all in his power to prohibit that race coming among us. Another subject in which he was assured they were all deeply interested was the eight-hours question. He would like to see this system more extensively adopted by private firms, and particularly on Government works and contracts. He hoped the day would come, and that it was not far distant, when this happy result would be arrived at, and he pledged himself, if returned, to do all he could to attain that much desired object, which would be an untold blessing to the working classes of the colony. He dwelt for some time on the necessity for the legalization of trades' unions, to protect the funds and remove the ban of outlawry which rested on members. They were often the most thrifty, sensible, and deserving of men who gained their bread by hard manual labour. He severely criticised the deplorable state of the mercantile and navigation laws of the colony, referring particularly to the loss of the Susanne Godeffroy, and the melancholy sacrifice of lives which might have been saved by proper supervision. He pointed out how hardly the seamen were dealt with, owing to the defective condition of the laws. In reference to technical education he said that ever since he had been in the colony he had worked, with others, in this direction—to gain for our youths and artizans a system of education that would enable them to compete with those of any other nation under the sun; a system of education that, while it taught the youth or artizan the first principles of his trade, would also be removed so far from the University point of view that the pupil would not be imbued with notions above his calling in life. He was impressed with the need existent for a thorough inspection of land boilers. While not in favour of a protective tariff, he was certain that it was the duty of the Government to foster and encourage all those industries, no matter what they might be, that would tend to develop the resources of perhaps the most natural richly-endowed colony under the sun. He thought it only right that workmen should receive compensation for injuries received through the negligence of employers or deficient appliances. These were his views; and if the electors did him the honour to return him to Parliament he promised to perform his duty fearlessly, faithfully, and to the best of his ability. He felt content to leave the result of this exposition of his views in their hands. The candidate answered several questions to the apparent satisfaction of his hearers, and the usual resolution was carried by acclamation. Cheers for the candidate and for the Queen brought the proceedings to a close.

An enthusiastic gathering of the electors of West Sydney assembled in front of the Lighthouse Hotel, Bathurst-street, last night, to hear the political views of Mr. Francis Abigail. Some 500 electors were present. Mr. Charles Field occupied the chair, and in highly eulogistic terms introduced the candidate to the meeting. Mr. Abigail, on coming forward, was greeted with loud applause. After reiterating his political views, the candidate referred to the great pleasure he felt from the fact that so large a meeting had assembled to hear him, when seventeen other candidates were holding meetings. It was then proposed by Mr. J. A. Clark, and seconded by Mr. Wilson,—"That Mr. Abigail is worthy of the confidence of the electors." This was carried unanimously, and the usual loyal manifestations concluded the meeting.

Mr. William Fraser Martin, one of the candidates for West Sydney, held a meeting last evening, at the Quarryman's Arms, Pyrmont. There was a large attendance of electors. Mr. Morrison was in the chair. Mr. Martin was well received, and met with a very favourable reception. Mr. David Elphinstone proposed that Mr. Martin was a fit and proper person to represent the electors of West Sydney, which was seconded by Mr. Amess. Mr. Kethel and Mr. David Brown also addressed the meeting on behalf of Mr. Martin. Another meeting was held at the Grosvenor hotel, Harris-street, Ultimo. There was a good attendance of the electors. Mr. Farwon occupied the chair. Mr. Martin met with a good reception.

SOUTH SYDNEY ELECTORATE.

MR. J. D. FITZGERALD'S MEETING.

Mr. J. D. Fitzgerald, last night, addressed a large meeting of the electors of the district of South Sydney, from the balcony of Fahey's Railway Hotel, Parramatta-street. Mr. J. J. Ryan presided, and briefly introduced the candidate.

Mr. FITZGERALD, after briefly explaining the reasons that had led to his candidature, said that the Colonial Secretary had told them that the Education Act was not yet settled. He deprecated the making of any such remarks, stating that he considered they were only made in order that Sir Henry Parkes might rest secure in his seat. In his opinion, the law with respect to this matter had been settled, and, having been brought into operation by a large majority of the people, he would not attempt to alter it in the slightest, so far as any retrograde movement was concerned; but if it were attempted to make it purely free and secular, such an attempt would meet with his support, although personally he did not believe in any education that had not religion for its beginning and ending. (Cheers.) But, seeing that the great majority differed from him in this opinion, he was prepared to submit to the will of the majority of the people, no matter how reluctantly he did so. (Loud applause.) He was totally opposed to immigration at the public expense, and would not allow a penny of the people's money to be spent for bringing persons here if he could help it, as he thought that the men who could not afford to pay their passage would not make desirable colonists. If the labour market was in so good a state that there was not a sufficient number of persons here to fill the vacancies, there were plenty of persons in England who would be glad to pay their own passages to get the high wages that would rule. (Cheers.) As he was opposed to European immigration, he was of course opposed to the Chinese coming here at all. He wanted to keep them out altogether, and thought it would be useless to impose a poll-tax. The only thing they could do was to make the country as hot for them as possible by severe taxation, so as to make them demand as high a price for their goods as possible. When they got these prices up to those of Europeans the Chinese must starve. In reference to free trade and protection, he argued that there was no such thing as either free trade or protection, although there might be discriminating duties. He would do all in his power to compel the Government to patronise colonial industries, even at 10 or 15 per cent. increase over the import price. They would thus be taxing the whole people to sustain colonial industries, while individuals would be able to get their own requirements at as low a price as possible. With regard to the question of the remission of interest, he expressed himself as totally opposed to it, and thought that if any selector found he had made a mistake, he should thrown up his selection and seek a new one. If he had had it any length of time, he would surely have made sufficient money to make up the interest he had paid; and, if not, the sooner he was out of it the better. (Cheers.) He would, however, do away with the residence qualification for selectors, as he thought every man had a right to a share of the land. He also advocated raising the squatters' rents to something like 6d. an acre, instead of keeping them at ¾d. as at present. He thought all Government employés should work for only eight hours, although he did not see how the principle could be applied to every industry in the colony, as in some instances it would be impossible to insist on it. He would support a bill for the purpose of regulating the positions of Civil servants, so as to make them as free as possible from Parliamentary influence. He was in favour of local option in the licensing of public-houses, and would support a measure which would deal with the kind of liquors that were sold. He would like to see the licensing of public-houses placed in the hands of a responsible board—a board not composed of men like those who came down to the courts twice a week for the express purpose of supporting or refusing a license, but numbering good men among its members. He referred to the aldermanic candidates in terms of disapproval, pointing out what a mess they had got the city into, and asking them to vote for men who would work for them and do good for the city, and for the colony as a whole. If they took example by the House of Commons they would not go far wrong, but they should put in men who were nearest to those who had made that House of Commons what it was; and if they thought he was one of that kind they should vote for him on his merits, and not because he was a practical or theoretical man.

Mr. T. J. RYAN moved, and Mr. J. W. MURPHY seconded, a proposition in favour of Mr. Fitzgerald as a fit and proper person to represent the electorate. The proposition was carried unanimously.

Mr. J. B. Olliffe addressed a meeting of South Sydney electors yesterday evening, at Frost's Royal Exhibition Hotel. Mr. George Pate occupied the chair. There were about 700 persons present, and they gave the candidate a fair hearing and were evidently well satisfied with his address, and the answers he gave to the various questions put to him. Mr. Olliffe spoke for over an hour, and was very explicit as to his political views. At the close of the address Mr. J. H. Murray moved a vote of confidence, Mr. Durfer seconded the resolution, which was carried unanimously. Three cheers for the candidate concluded the proceedings.

A large meeting of the friends and supporters of Alderman G. L. Carter, one of the candidates for South Sydney, was held last evening at Wadsworth's Emu hotel, Regent-street. Mr. G. Hurcomb was voted to the chair, and spoke warmly in favour of Mr. Carter, whom he introduced. Mr. Carter was received most enthusiastically, and went fully into all the leading questions of the day, and explained his views upon them, which appeared to give entire satisfaction to the meeting, and in addition to the report already published in our columns, Mr. Carter said he would assist upon an Amended Stamp Act, so as to relieve hard-working industrious persons attached to building societies from being specially and arbitrarily taxed. He was firmly determined to have all machinery and boilers belonging to the shipping and land inspected, and he alluded to some boilers to his own knowledge, which had been in use for over 20 years, and liable at any moment to cause a terrible explosion. He would advocate that some arrangement should be brought into operation whereby Civil servants of the age of 60 years should retire, and not be allowed to remain in the service until they are thoroughly worn out. The candidate received three hearty cheers when he finished his address. Alderman Meeks, John Lesson, Alderman Farr, W. Clark, and other gentlemen addressed the meeting in favour of the candidate. The meeting broke up with three cheers for the Queen, and three for the chairman and candidate.

CENTRAL CUMBERLAND ELECTORATE.

The Minister for Works, the Hon. J. Lackey, addressed the electors of Central Cumberland last night, at the Royal Hotel, Liverpool. About 400 of them assembled to hear him, and the meeting was presided over by Mr. Louis Haigh, Mayor of the town.

Mr. LACKEY, who was very well received, said that he had great pleasure in appearing before them again as a candidate for their suffrages at the election which was soon to take place. The circumstances which had brought it about were well known to them. The Mayor had been kind enough to say that he held the respect of a great number of the electors of Central Cumberland. There was, in his opinion, no higher ambition a man could have than to achieve this, and it was a matter of sincere satisfaction to him that the electors had invariably extended their support to him. He hoped that as their representative he would never lose their confidence, or sacrifice their esteem. (Hear, hear.) The present election had not been brought about by any political crisis, nor by any leading public question, on which it was necessary to appeal to the constituencies, but was caused by the expiration of the late Parliament and inauguration of a new one. During the late session an Electoral Act was passed, giving to constituencies throughout the length and breadth of the country more extended and complete representation than they had before. Representation in many parts had previously been inadequate, for, sparsely populated years ago, they had since, by the extension of railways and other causes, become thickly inhabited; and it was found that the representation of twenty or twenty-five years ago was altogether insufficient at present. It was with the intention of removing this anomalous state of things and getting a more complete representation of electors, that an Electoral Bill was passed which increased the number of members from 72 to 108. This alteration had not made any vital change in the circumstances of Central Cumberland, for it had only added to it one of two districts nearer Sydney to bring its number of electors up to the standard of districts with two representatives. This slight addition was necessary, and he did not think the inclusion of Ryde and Hunter's Hill in the electorate would affect its interests prejudicially. They were aware that a great number of political questions were occupying the public mind; that large questions had been dealt with, and that others had to be dealt with; and he thought the electors here present would not hesitate to concede some meed of acknowledgment to the Parliament which had just expired, for the work which it had done. (Applause.) It would be within the recollection of many here that important measures had been passed, and that laws had been added to the statute-book which had been waiting from year to year for the support of a majority of the representatives of the people—laws which had only in the last session of Parliament been added to the legislation of the country. Amongst them were measures which he was sure would commend themselves to those who had the interests of the country at heart. The amendment to the Land Bill was a measure which was necessitated by a variety of circumstances, for it was well known that under the Lands Act of 1861, several anomalies crept in, which made the working of that act prejudicial as far as the interests of a great number of the people of the country were concerned. We knew that in several instances collisions took place between pastoral tenants and the agricultural settler. The land laws were worked in a very unsatisfactory manner, and it was found desirable that some clause should be inserted in the Lands Act which would have the effect of allaying this difficulty, and of settling the points so long in dispute between one class and the other. He thought it would be admitted that this was a very good settlement of a long vexed question, for it was desirable that these two classes should work hand in hand together and not in a spirit of antagonism. (Applause.) And now neither the squatter on the one hand, nor the selector on the other, would have his interests sacrificed. He thought that if this measure alone had been passed by the late Parliament, that body would have deserved the thanks of the people; but other measures had been passed which might be thought to be even more beneficial in their results. While on the land laws he must express his opinion on a question which was agitating the public mind—the disposition of selectors to get rid of the interest on the balance which they owed to the revenue of the country. He thought that the conditional purchaser had had advantages which placed him outside the pale of anything like that. (Applause.) Under the Lands Act of 1861 the conditional purchasers had very large advantages for selecting the pick of the land in all parts of the country

They had the power and the right to go on any unalienated land or leased land and select from 40 to 640 acres for settlement, and so the best lands of the colony were selected. Then the selector had the right of grazing over three times the amount of land he selected, so that in all he had the grazing right in something like 2560 acres. Then he was required to pay down only 5s. an acre, and the 15s. balance, which he was allowed to pay at any time, was allowed to lie at 5 per cent. interest—favourable terms, seeing that he was allowed the pick of the best lands of the country, and availed himself of it. Along the coast, from the Tweed, the Clarence, and the Macleay, down to Bega and Moruya on the south, the bulk of the best lands were selected; and these lands, selected for £1 an acre, had in many cases which had come under his own experience increased in value to £20, £25, and £30 an acre. The conditional purchaser had made a very good bargain for himself, and it was altogether unfair and inequitable for him to come forward now and ask for a remission of the balance of his interest. (Loud applause.) It was highly injudicious that the general public should be taxed for the purpose of making up this balance, which the conditional purchasers fairly owed to the country. (Applause.) Still the interest in which they were engaged was a most valuable one, for nothing could possibly engage the human hand or mind more profitably to the State than the cultivation of the lands of the colony. The operation of the Lands Act passed by the last Parliament was to put down dummyism; in that it provided for a five years' personal residence before any transfer could be made. It did away with blackmailing, and gave facilities to the bona fide selector; and reduced the amount to be expended on improvements from £1 to 10s. an acre; and he thought that these amendments would contribute largely to the benefit of those engaged in the cultivation of the land in different parts of the colony. During the late sitting of Parliament another measure of considerable importance was passed—the Public Schools Act. Several alterations had been made which would add largely to the benefit of the young people of the country; and he hoped that during the process of this law no ill-feeling would be engendered between classes, for it would benefit future generations as well as this. He hoped it would cement in unity and in the bonds of true nationality the young people now growing up—(applause)—and that parents throughout the land would support it. The educational facilities it held out to young people were greater than in any country in the world, and it would confer large advantages on the colony—advantages which would in years to come redound to the honour and glory of the Parliament instrumental in passing it. The Act would be found comprehensive in its character, and giving facilities in a variety of ways to the young people, from an improved, advanced, Public school system to the half-time which would prevail in the sparsely populated parts of the colony. It provided also for a higher education, to enable men to fit themselves for the University. He owed them an apology for the shortness of the notice of this meeting; but it had been explained that the late Parliament had done all that it had to do, and that the dissolution came in the ordinary course of events, there being no necessity for another session before Parliament expired by effluxion of time. The increase of members would give them steadier work, but still he thought that no Parliament could have given more careful attention to the work of expenditure than the last had done; and he would say a few words about the claims this Government had upon the people of this country. The facilities which had presented themselves for carrying out the measures he had alluded to would never have existed but for the coalition between the parties led by Sir John Robertson and Sir Henry Parkes—a coalition which had been instrumental in pushing on legislation and improving public works. For many years many important measures had been neglected, but recently they had been taken up and carried out, for Parliament had been munificent to the Government, and their public works system had consequently been since larger and more comprehensive than ever before in the history of the colony. These works had been instrumental in bringing about the prosperity of the country, by the facilities afforded for settlement on the land, and the impetus given to trade. (Applause.) During the last two or three years the railway system had been carried out with unprecedented vigour, and the result was that commerce and trade were fostered. Comparison between this colony and Victoria might be interesting. In 1879 Victoria had a population of 858,500, as compared with 714,012 of New South Wales. The revenue of Victoria was £4,621,520, and of New South Wales £4,475,059. The proportion of revenue raised by taxation was £1,272,721 in New South Wales and £1,730,088 in Victoria. The rate of taxation per head of the population was £1 15s. 7¾d. in New South Wales, and £1 19s. 4½d. in Victoria—a sensible difference. (Laughter.) The value of exports was £13,086,819 for New South Wales, and £12,454,170 for Victoria. The value of imports was £19 17s. 8½d. per head of population in New South Wales, and £16 18s. 5½d. in Victoria. The value of trade per head in New South Wales was £38 4s. 3½d., and in Victoria £30 18s. 9½d. The miles of railway in course of construction numbered 286 here on December 31, 1879, as against 74½ in Victoria. The miles of telegraph lines open were 7517½ against 3156 in Victoria. The public debt of New South Wales was £14,937,419, against £20,050,753 of Victoria. The rate of indebtedness per head was here £20 6s. 10½d.; and in Victoria, £22 5s. 10¾d. These were important statistics, showing the relative state of the industries of the different colonies, and their export trade; and, seeing that our population was considerably less than that of Victoria, the balance was considerably in our favour, notwithstanding all that we heard of the effect of the fiscal policy of the neighbouring colony. The resources of New South Wales were sufficiently great to hold out inducements to a population larger than it had now. The pastoral occupation of the country did not stand alone in producing revenue, for other resources were growing rapidly in importance, and notably our mineral ones. In 1879 the returns were as follows:—Gold, 109,650 ozs., £407,219; coal, 1,583,381 tons, £950,879; shale, 32,519 tons, £66,930; copper, 4142 tons, £257,352; tin, 5921 tons, £372,349; silver, 53,164 ozs., £18,071; iron, 1118 tons, £10,550; antimony, 76-16 tons, £1046; lead, 18-13 tons, £535; mixed, 25 tons, £525. In a few years these would contribute much more largely than at present to the revenue. Then as regarded the cultivation of the soil, very large returns were yielded from this source to the general revenue. The following were the yields for 1879:—Wheat, 3,613,266 bushels, worth £750,000; maize, 4,701,856 bushels; oats, 516,937 bushels; barley, 131,541 bushels; rye, 16,873 bushels; potatoes, 62,227¼ tons; tobacco, 596,793 pounds; sugar, 153,823 cwts; wine, 733,576 gallons; oranges, 2,763,811 dozen—worth £70,000. All these put together showed the immense resources that the country had, and the great inducements it offered for settlement. The character of the soil and climate varied from those required to produce wheat to those required to produce sugar, a feature almost unparalleled in any country. From the north to the south of the colony was grown wheat as fine as any in the world, and while we had such a climate and soil it was most undesirable and unfortunate that there should be any clashing of classes to prevent the cultivation of the soil and the successful working of an industry which was producing a large amount of the wealth of the colony in the shape of wool and cattle and fat stock. (Applause.) Another evidence of the progress of the colony was the extension of railways all over it, whose construction was good, and which were worked less expensively than those of other colonies. In South Australia the yield of wheat was only 8 bushels to the acre, while here it was 15 bushels, and it seemed strange that the former should be such a great wheat-producing colony as against this, until one recognised the general use of labour-saving machinery there, and the thrifty mode of farming adopted. He was glad to find that similar courses were being adopted here, for surely we could produce wheat enough, not only for our own use, but for export. (Applause.) He had been instrumental in giving cultivators of the soil every facility for bringing their produce cheaply to market, and there was no colony among all the Australian ones where the railway charges for wheat were so low. There were at the present time 850 miles of railway open for traffic in New South Wales (exclusive of the private line from Deniliquin to Moama), and before the close of the present year it was expected that the following extensions would be completed:—Gerogery to Albury, 18 miles; Junee to Narrandera, 61 miles; Wellington to Dubbo, 29 miles; total 108 miles, swelling the total mileage open for traffic to 958 miles. If this were accomplished, and there seemed to be no doubt that it would be, there would have been opened in 1880 223 miles of railway—the largest number of miles opened in any one year in any of the Australasian colonies. At the commencement, the progress of railway construction in the colony was necessarily slow, on account of the great engineering difficulties experienced in piercing our vast mountain ranges so as to reach the productive country of the interior. Since we had got fairly out into the open, however, railway construction had advanced with rapid strides, and the progress we had made would be apparent by the following statement of the mileage opened for the following periods:—Period, 1855 to 1864 (inclusive), years 10; miles opened, 143; annual average, 14 miles. 1865 to 1874 (inclusive), years 10; miles opened, 260; annual average, 26 miles. 1875 to 1880 (inclusive), years, 6; miles opened, 547; annual average, 91 miles. The railway capital expended to the present time on lines opened and in course of construction amounted to £12,500,000, and Parliament had made provision for an expenditure of £5,664,160 additional, swelling the railway capital to £18,164,160. The following was a summary of the progress made with the construction of new lines:—Extension Tamworth to Tenterfield, a distance of 210 miles. Progress made: Plans for the whole distance approved by Parliament; 63½ miles to Uralla now under construction; tenders invited for a further length of 78½ miles to Glen Innes, to be opened 4th January, 1881. Extension Gunnedah to Narrabri, a distance of 56 miles. Progress made: Plans approved by Parliament; tenders for the construction have been invited; to be opened 14th December, 1880. Extension Junee to Hay, a distance of 167 miles. Progress made: Plans approved by Parliament; 61 miles to Narrandera nearly completed; to be opened at end of 1880. Contract let for extension to Hay (106 miles), 36 miles of which will be opened in October, 1881, and the remainder on the 1st June, 1882. Extension Wallerawang to Mudgee, a distance of 85 miles. Progress made: Plans approved by Parliament for 39 miles; contract let for 23 miles; to be completed on the 1st March, 1882. Extension Dubbo to Bourke, a distance of 222 miles. Progress made: Plans approved by Parliament on 9th July, 1880. Tenders for construction to Nyngan, a length of 100 miles, have been invited to be opened 21st December, 1880. Total: 680 miles in various stages of progress. The effect of the opening of new extensions was not at first, as might be expected, so remunerative as the older lines: but the tendency of railway construction was to produce traffic, and develope the resources of the colony, and the new lines, after a short time would become self-supporting, as the older lines had proved to be. It was gratifying to find from the returns received for 1880, that so far, in comparison with 1879, a very large increase of traffic had taken place on our railways. The gross earnings in 1879 were £952,366, the earnings for the present year would, it was estimated, amount to £1,120,000, showing an increase of £167,634. He thought that these results were satisfactory ones, as far as the interests of the colony went; and he hoped the progress made would be continued. He would do what he possibly could to extend railways and useful public works for the benefit of the great mass of the people of the country; and indeed as long as he had been their representative he had tried to serve them, and the colony generally, to the best of his ability. He would not refer to the offices he had held further than to say that he was proud that the Parliament of the country had placed sufficient confidence in him to make him one of the body appointed to carry on the Executive Government of the country, as this fact reflected credit on the constituency he had the good fortune to represent. He felt a deep sense of obligation to the electors of Central Cumberland for the patient hearing they had given him, and would assure them that if they did him the honour to return him again, he would go back to Parliament with a sincere desire to promote the welfare, the advantage, and the prosperity of this community. (Loud applause.)

In answer to a question, Mr. LACKEY said he was not in favour of an absentee tax, but would rather tax the property of absentees, so as to make it pay for the protection the Government afforded it.

Mr. N. G. BULL moved, and Mr. MURRAY seconded, "That Mr. Lackey still retains the confidence of this electorate, and that he is a fit and proper person to represent us in Parliament."

This was carried without opposition, and a vote of thanks to the chairman having been passed, and cheers for the Queen having been given, the meeting terminated.

PADDINGTON ELECTORATE.

MR. W. J. TRICKETT'S MEETING.

A public meeting of the electors of Paddington was held last night, in the Paddington Council-chamber, for the purpose of hearing Mr. W. J. Trickett, Mayor of Woollahra, and one of the candidates for the representation of the constituency in the new Parliament, express his opinions on the current political topics of the day. Mr. William Taylor, Mayor of Paddington, occupied the chair, and there was a good attendance. The chairman briefly introduced the candidate to the meeting, and asked that an impartial hearing should be given to him.

Mr. TRICKETT, who was received with loud applause, said he had very much pleasure in appearing before them, and meeting them all for the purpose of explaining his political views, and giving them an opportunity of judging of his fitness or unfitness to represent them as a member of Parliament for the electorate of Paddington. (Hear, hear.) Last night he had had the honour of addressing one of the largest assemblies that had ever met together in the Borough of Woollahra, and he had there fully explained his views; and he would therefore be under the necessity of recapitulating much of what he said then. He would endeavour to state fairly, fully, and honestly, and with no trimming, what his opinions were—(hear, hear)—and at the end of his remarks he should have pleasure in answering any questions which might be put to him in the same straightforward way. (Hear, hear.) Last night it had been necessary for him to blow his own trumpet a little; but on this occasion his worthy friend the Mayor of Paddington had done it for him. He (the chairman) had referred to several local matters in which he (Mr. Trickett) had taken part. Whatever he had done during the seven years he had been an alderman, and the three years he had been Mayor, had been done conscientiously for the benefit of the district; and he was happy to say that his services had been approved of and carefully acknowledged by the bulk of the electors of the Woollahra municipality. (Applause). Before he came to the political part of the business, he would refer to two or three local matters which he had taken a part in furthering for the benefit of the eastern suburbs. For the last eighteen months, Mr. Taylor, several other gentlemen—for he did not wish to take the whole of the credit to himself—and himself had scarcely let a single week pass without calling at the necessary public offices for the purpose of furthering the objects of water-supply and tramway communication to our eastern suburbs. (Hear, hear.) These were two matters which, in his opinion, would help in a great measure to make the eastern suburbs what they ought to be, the best suburbs out of Sydney. (Applause.) They had also gone several times to the Minister for Justice to endeavour to get a local Court of Petty Sessions. These were the things they ought to have; and if they had local men to take an interest in local affairs, they would be able to get this Court of Petty Sessions, which would also be a great boon to the community. (Hear, hear.) There was no doubt that a supply of water was a very urgent necessity. Only last week he had visited the Mayor of Sydney and Mr. Trevor-Jones in reference to this matter, and he was then assured that the necessary pumping engines were on their way out by the mail steamer from America; and that only one week would elapse from the time they were landed until the water was being pumped into the high-pressure reservoir at Waverley. (Applause.) He took the credit to himself for having suggested the use of these engines. While dealing with the water supply, he would touch upon the question of Mr. Gipps' Kenny Hill scheme, which had agitated the public mind for some time past. There was no doubt that the Romans of old had obtained their water by high pressure. They did not bring it along a low-water level, and pump it thence to wherever it was required, as that would be making double the labour. All he could say with regard to Mr. Gipps' scheme was that, if his levels were correct, they carried conclusion upon the face of them. However, the Government had appointed one of their officers to check these levels; and, at a recent meeting of the Woollahra Council, he had got a sum of money voted towards meeting the expense of having a report independent of either Mr. Gipps or the Government. That was the proper way to get at the right basis of affairs, and to say whether that was the right scheme or not. (Hear, hear.) As his introduction into political life had been by means of municipal action in his address to them that night he would first deal with local self-government. That was an institution which, he was sure, every right-thinking man in the community must agree with him should be extended from one end of the colony to the other. (Hear, hear.) It meant that the people who lived in the outlying districts, who should be the best judges of their own requirements, and the degree to which local properties were benefited by local works, ought to have the means of getting the rates from these properties, and dealing with the money as they considered best for the district. (Hear, hear.) There could be no doubt about that. There was a great objection to the Government being called upon to do everything; in fact, it was a very great mistake. The principle that the central Government should be expected to do everything for the country, and that the local community should do nothing at all, was wrong. The people of a locality ought to know best what was required, and ought to pay for any improvements that might be required and have the handling of the money. (Hear, hear.) The establishment of such a system would be another great safeguard against corruption. They would not then have Ministers of the Crown making appointments and promising bridges and culverts in order to obtain votes, as had been going on for many years past, simply because the reason would not exist. (Hear, hear.) A short time ago he read an article in the Echo, where it stated that, to a certainty, if it were not for this system of self-government existing in Victoria, that colony would be in a far worse state than it is now from the effects of Berryism. The Ministers there were not able to get influence by localism; although they did shove their relations into billets. (Applause and laughter.) At the recent Municipal Conference, which sat in Sydney, several valuable suggestions had been made and communicated to the Government, and would doubtless be embodied in any Municipal Act which might be introduced in the Assembly. That conference had been suggested by one of the country districts; but it had been fallen in with throughout the country, and the gathering was one of the most representative that could have been wished. The Colonial Secretary, upon whom the deputation from the conference waited, promised that the statements by them would receive that consideration to which they are entitled. While dealing with the question of municipal reform he had heard it stated, and read in the newspapers, that it was not right to put an alderman in as a member of Parliament. He failed to see that because a man had perhaps served the electors satisfactorily, in a small way, he should be debarred from coming forward and being elected as a member of Parliament. (Applause.) While serving the country at large he could, at the same time, keep a watchful eye upon that electorate which sends him into Parliament. (Hear, hear.) The Upper House, as at present constituted, was a nominee body—that was, those gentlemen who were members were appointed because of former services they had rendered to the community. He did not seen any reason for a change; because, in case of popular excitement, those gentlemen could take a fair and impartial view of any important question which might come before them, and thus render a great service to the community at large. (Hear, hear.) Following closely upon that, he should just touch upon payment of members. He would always be opposed to it. If we could not get gentlemen in this community who would come and sit in our Parliament and take their share in the government of this great country for the honour alone, it was time for us to knock over representative government altogether. He hoped we should never have it in this country. (Hear, hear.) With regard to the unpopular question of the "Heathen Chinee," he said that some years ago they were subjected to a poll-tax, which had a very beneficial effect; but the time had now come to put a stop to them coming here any more. (Hear, hear.) When we read the figures which represented the population of their country, and remembered that it was not a great distance from Australia, it was something alarming; and he quite agreed with other speakers that the colonies should join together for the purpose of regulating this Chinese immigration. (Hear, hear.) He went further than that. He said that if the other colonies did not join with us in having a poll tax imposed, then New South Wales should go to the front and act upon her own responsibility in stopping the immigration. (Applause.) We were a free people; we were a British people, and we wanted to remain a British people. The ways of the Chinese were not our ways, nor their thoughts our thoughts. They work cheap and live cheap; and he would undertake to say that no tradesman, not even if he were an unmarried man, would be able to compete with them. Their low wages and wretched style of living enabled them to undersell any European. Independent of that, their habits were demoralising. If he had the honour of being elected he would support a bill to restrict Chinese immigration, which was distasteful to the bulk of the community. (Hear, hear.) He then came to the question which was the better system of immigration. It was a very vexed question, but why he knew not. He objected to indiscriminate immigration. We wanted a class of immigrants to cultivate our land, and help to make Australia a great agricultural, as well as it was now, a great pastoral country. (Hear, hear.) This kind of immigrants he regarded as most desirable, and also artisan and labouring men, who would give a fair day's work for a fair day's pay. These were the men who were bound to get on in this country. (Loud applause.) We had spent a great deal on immigration during the last two or three years, and the immigrants had cost between £15 and £16 per head to fetch them here; but he maintained that if these immigrants came and established trades, or businesses, or farms, or anything of that kind, and got on in the world, they very soon repaid their passage money through the Customs; and he could not but regard it as a good investment to the State. (Hear, hear.) There was another very important question—viz., free trade and protection. He was bound to say that he was a free trader; and he was bound to say that free trade meant great trade, and great trade meant great success, and that was the state of things we were suffering from at the present time. (Applause.) [At this stage of the meeting a person whom the chairman addressed as "Alderman Whitelaw" commenced to interrupt Mr. Trickett by asking senseless questions, and continued more or less unruly until the proceedings closed.] He saw amongst the audience labourers, bricklayers, and carpenters, and he asked them what good protection would do them? Their wages would remain the same, while the cost of living would greatly increase. Protection meant simply this—that it was as beneficial to the few as it was disastrous to the many. (Hear, hear.) They need not go very far to compare the results of free trade and protection. Which was the most prosperous colony—free trade New South Wales, or protectionist Victoria? And why were so many Victorians coming over here and telling us about bad times. (A voice: They send us tweed over here.) All the better for the tweed manufacturers. In this matter he thought it best to let well alone. We were doing very well at present under the free trade system; and why the red rag of protection had been flaunted before the working men, he was at a loss to know. He should next deal with the question of taxation. Of course, as they were all aware, this was a most difficult question to deal with. The true rule of taxation of course was that every member of the community should contribute to the costs of the State in proportion to the benefits he derives from the State; but like all other rules, it looked very well in theory, but was rather difficult to carry into effect. It was said that we wanted some more taxation; and in his opinion the solution of the difficulty must be that we must look to our lands for it. A larger rental should be obtained from the pastoral tenants than was at present paid. The average rate per annum paid by the squatters for their land was very little over a farthing an acre. This was altogether disproportionate to the benefits they derived from those splendid tracts of country. He could give them one instance. A squatter in the interior had an estate of leased land, comprising 37,000 acres, which carries 25,000 sheep, and produces an annual income of £8000 per year. For this he paid a rental of £85 per year. (A Voice: "Shame!") This rental was altogether out of proportion to the benefits he derived from his station. This was only an isolated case; and if the rentals of the stations throughout the country were raised to a proper figure, and a fair tenure given, the revenue would be enormously increased. (Applause.) He would support a proposal to have the country divided into pastoral and agricultural areas, if it were feasible, and was strongly opposed to the remission of the free selectors' interest. He took it that this attempt on the part of a few of the selectors to repudiate their contract with the State would not be tolerated for a moment—(hear, hear)—especially at such a time as the present, when we wanted more revenue. It amounted to this, that one class of the community wanted us quietly to give up a sum of £200,000, which, capitalised, represented a sum of £5,250,000. To do this would be to injure our national credit in the money markets of Europe. (Applause.) With regard to the present licensing system, it certainly required alteration. He was strongly in favour of a Board of some kind taking the power out of the hands of the magistrates, in order that justice might be done. (Hear, hear.) He was in favour of the extension of the railway to the waters of the harbour as expeditiously as possible, and also for providing railway communication throughout the colony. Law reform would meet with his earnest attention, with the object of considerably lessening the expense to suitors. He would take an active interest in, and support, any measure having for its object the protection of the lives of seamen and the inspection of unseaworthy ships. He was strongly in favour of the present Education Act in toto. (Loud applause.) He had given that Act his serious consideration, and as an instrument for the purpose of imparting a national system of education to every child in this country, considered it the nearest approach to perfection it was possible for any Act to be. (Applause.) He concluded by saying that he came into this contest as an honest individual, as a plain individual, and he came there pledged to no party, seeking the support of no man. He stood there on his own merits, and if a majority of the electors of Paddington—and he was sure he would have a majority—(applause)—were of opinion that he had sufficient intelligence and sufficient words to make himself heard and understood in that Assembly in Macquarie-street, let them send him there—(applause)—but if a majority thought otherwise—(A voice: "Oh, you will be elected," and applause)—though he had been invited to the contest by a very large requisition, and promises of support—and if he was not elected, he should still think that he had a very large number of friends amongst them, and would retire to his profession with the full conviction that he had endeavoured to do his duty. (Loud and prolonged applause.)

On the motion of the Rev. R. Fletcher, seconded by Mr. Brown, a motion was carried, with enthusiastic applause, that Mr. Trickett was a fit and proper person to represent the electors of Paddington in the new Parliament. A vote of thanks to the chairman, and cheers for the Queen, the candidate, and the chairman, brought the proceedings to a close.

MR. WILLIAM HEZLET'S MEETING.

A large and influential meeting of the residents of Randwick and Coogee was held in the Council-chambers, Randwick, last evening, for the purpose of hearing Mr. W. Hezlet's political sentiments. The room was well filled, and the candidate was accorded a most patient hearing. The Mayor of the borough, Mr. John See, occupied the chair, and introduced Mr. Hezlet. Mr. Hezlet then addressed the meeting in an able and vigorous manner, and without any unnecessary verbiage rendered an account of his stewardship during the period he occupied a seat in Parliament, and also shadowed forth his views and intentions with respect to the forthcoming Parliament, if elected. He assured the electors that he had no cause to regret any vote he had given, or to apologise for having given it, as he had conscientiously and honestly considered, and voted as seemed to him best. He had voted for tramways, and had been moderately successful in crushing down opposition to the bill for their construction. The Water Supply Bill has received his warm support; and that portion of the Education Bill (from the 27th clause) which required to be considered after his election to Parliament, was supported by him with all his might. The Electoral Bill had been supported by him through all its clauses, and the Licensing Bill and Pastoral Tenants' Bill had received careful consideration at his hands. Of the tardy administration of justice in the Supreme Court he spoke most strongly, as also of the lengthy absence from their duties of two of the judges. The remission of interest to free selectors was next dwelt upon in a forcible manner by Mr. Hezlet, who stated that, though his own interests were most largely identified with free selectors, yet if no other hand in the Parliament were held up against remission of interest to that body, his would be; and he desired all the world to know what his views were on this matter. He was opposed to the levy of a duty on imported articles, and believed in the construction of our public works with materials within the colony, of which we had abundance. He was in favour of the extension of municipalities all over the colony. He also believed in the construction of railways, and that the great trunk lines should be constructed first, and the work pushed on with as much vigour as possible. Where the population was sparse he would favour the construction of tramways, as they would be equal to the requirements, and the cost very much less than railways. He was not in favour of the present system of immigration, but would vote for such as would be the means of introducing the yeomanry from the old country, who would prove a most desirable class of colonists. The introduction of Chinese he was altogether opposed to, and would vote for their exclusion. Several questions were then put, and replied to by the candidate in a satisfactory manner, upon which Mr. Alderman C. Kidman moved, and Mr. Alderman Kiss seconded,—"That Mr. William Hezlet is a fit and proper person to represent the constituency of Paddington in the forthcoming Parliament." This was carried unanimously. The meeting terminated in the usual manner.

BALMAIN ELECTORATE.

A large gathering of electors was addressed at Dick's Hotel, Beattie-street, Balmain, last evening, by Alderman J. Taylor, one of the candidates for the Balmain electorate. Captain M'Clemens occupied the chair.

Alderman TAYLOR, who was well received, assured the electors that he had no personal object in seeking to get into Parliament. His sole object was to see the Balmain electorate properly represented, and he considered that he had sufficient colonial experience to serve that electorate. With regard to the local wants, one of the most important that he would support was the bridge between White Bay and Glebe Point. (Applause.) He considered that Balmain had strong claims for a more efficient water supply; and, with that object in view, he would support a thorough investigation of Mr. Gipps's Kenny Hill scheme. In reference to the water question, he noticed that one of his opponents had made a statement at the School of Arts on the previous evening, that the credit was due to Mr. Trevor Jones. Now, Mr. Trevor Jones was merely the servant of the Corporation, and he (Alderman Taylor) had documents in his possession showing that it was upon his motion that the improvements were effected and the water brought into Balmain. (Applause.) In support of that statement, he read a letter written by Mr. Trevor Jones, that day, for publication, in which Mr. Jones said:—"I very much regret that in the affair of bringing the water to Balmain any credit should be attributed to me, as was done by the Mayor of Balmain last evening at an election meeting, as in that matter I was merely carrying out the resolution of council, carried 14th September, in the name of Alderman Taylor. As regards the change made in the position of standpipes, his Worship the Mayor of Sydney, who has alone the power of so doing, took the trouble of visiting the locality to determine the sites, subject to my advice, as to altitude and other professional details." He (Alderman Taylor) claimed that the 15,000 inhabitants of Balmain alone, without Leichhardt, had an undoubted right to better provision in the way of public reserves. (Cheers.) There was great necessity for improved school accommodation in the district—(hear, hear)—and Balmain also had a fair claim to a participation in the tramway system. (Applause.) With regard to political matters he declared himself sound upon free trade. While he was willing to assist colonial industries, he was decidedly opposed to protection through the Custom-house. (Cheers.) There were three candidates for this electorate, but there was very little difference in their opinions, except upon the question of the payment of members, which Mr. Garrard supported. He (Alderman Taylor) would not go into Parliament to take payment for his services, and we had only to look to Victoria to see the evil of the payment of members. (Hear, hear.) The land laws were in great need of codification and simplification, and he doubted if even the Minister for Lands thoroughly understood the land laws himself. He (Alderman Taylor) was decidedly opposed to the remission of the interest due from the free selectors. (Cheers.) He thought that the squatters should have a more certain tenure of the lands, but they should be compelled to pay a higher and more adequate rental. (Applause.) With proper management in that way the lands of the colony could be made to yield sufficient revenue for the next 10 years without additional taxation. (Hear, hear.) He was in favour of an absentee-tax, which was the only means of reaching many of the wealthy property-owners. There was Sir Daniel Cooper, for instance, who drew £200,000 a year from the colony, and paid nothing in return beyond the paltry municipal taxes. He was opposed to assisted immigration, and thought that, with the constant and cheap communication with England, emigrants should have to pay their own passages if they wanted to come here. No doubt England wished to get rid of her surplus population; but if she wanted to send the people here, and they would not pay for themselves, she should pay their passages for them. (Hear, hear.) Certainly they should not be brought here at the expense of this Government. (Cheers.) He opposed Chinese immigration, and advocated a bounty-tax. There was great need of an amendment in the licensing laws. The Government should appoint a board of three or five competent men, and he regarded the local option principle as the best that could be adopted in the interests of all concerned. (Hear, hear.) He thought that the time had come when the powers of the Marine Board should be amended to give them power to prevent unseaworthy vessels going to sea. At present any hulk could be sent to sea in a rotten condition if seamen could be found to go in her; and it was desirable that the Marine Board should have the power of checking such a reckless risk of human life. (Cheers.) He was in favour of extending railways wherever they could be made remunerative, and would support the Illawarra railway in particular, if he was returned. (Cheers.) He was also in favour of tramways, and would like to see as much Government work done as possible, in order to give employment to the working classes. He advocated municipal government and thought that all local works should be done by local bodies, who might receive a certain amount of Government assistance. On the question of taxation, he was opposed to going to the Custom-house for increased revenue. The land revenue and the stoppage of the immigration vote would be sufficient for us without increased taxation. As far as assistance to colonial industry was concerned, he could assure the electors that he had for years done his best in that direction. Even if we paid 25 per cent. more for the manufacture in the colony of locomotives, carriages, &c., we got it all back again indirectly, and he contended that that was not protection, because there was no protective duty. He supported freedom of the Press. (Applause.) The education question was settled by the last session of Parliament, and he would not be any party to disturbing it. (Applause.) As far as the eight hours' system was concerned he thought that that was a matter between the employer and his employés. (Hear, hear.)

The usual vote of confidence in Mr. Taylor was carried on the motion of Mr. Steadman, seconded by Mr. Loughlin.

NEWTOWN ELECTORATE.

A public meeting of the electors of Newtown was held at the Council-chambers, Camperdown, on Wednesday evening, and Mr. Turkington occupied the chair. Mr. W. J. Foster delivered an address, in which he dwelt at length on his views with reference to the Education Act. He was in favour of the present Act in its entirety, more especially that clause relating to the abolition of State-aid to Denominational schools. He was also in favour of extending public libraries throughout the colony. He was also in favour of local option. The sewerage system was the main question on which he had decided to contest the election, as that was a measure which tended most to the public good, and he would take an early opportunity of testing the feeling of the new House on that question if elected. Chinese immigration he was totally opposed to. He was in favour of extending municipal government throughout the entire colony, and in favour of direct taxation. He was a free trader, and was in favour of extending the railways from one end of the colony to the other. Cheap railway trains, specially for the working men, should be run to and from Sydney night and morning, at a minimum charge; so that the working men could live in the suburbs and get to and from their work without being called upon to pay the present rates. He was strongly in favour of the eight-hour movement, and would also favour the early closing of the public-houses. He was opposed to the Constitution Amendment Act, and opposed the bill when introduced into the Upper House. He was entirely opposed to payment of members. The usual vote of confidence was moved by Mr. M. Blanchard and seconded by Dr. Brookes, and supported by Mr. J. H. Beale. A strong committee was formed to secure Mr. Foster's return.

CANTERBURY ELECTORATE.

Mr. Courtney held a very successful meeting on Thursday night, at Donaldson's Hotel, Five Dock. Mr. Thomas West, Mayor of Five Dock, occupied the chair, and introduced the candidate with a few lively remarks, saying he was proud to recognize in Mr. Courtney a countryman of his own, and one who was well qualified to act as one of their representatives, saying that he intended to give his support heart and soul to him and Mr. Pigott. Mr. Courtney spoke for about an hour, dealing with the political questions of the day, in a manner which appeared to give much satisfaction to the audience, his address eliciting frequent bursts of applause. At the conclusion of his speech a motion of confidence was moved and carried unanimously. Cheers were then given for the Queen, the chairman, and the candidate, and with the customary vote of thanks the meeting terminated.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In the accounts of Mr. Pigott's meeting at Enfield, I am reported to have contended that any legislative scheme for the remission of interest should also provide for a refund to those selectors who had paid up their balances. I contended for nothing so absurdly impracticable. I said that though, theoretically, such a provision seemed a necessary corollary to remission of interest, yet, as a matter of practical politics, it was utterly out of the question. Moreover, in my remarks on remission of interest, I sought not so much to defend the claim put forward under that name as to vindicate it from the hard names put upon it of repudiation, robbery, and burglary. Such a claim, I argued, had in a degree been invited by the latest legislation upon the land question, which unmistakably established a precedent for the revision of State bargains with the free selectors. And those who do not come within the scope of the concessions then made should not, I urged, be classified with thieves if they press for a further application of the new and dangerous principle of retrospection, which has been incorporated into our land laws. I am, &c.,

THOMAS C. O'MARA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

PARRAMATTA ELECTORATE.

PARRAMATTA, FRIDAY.

Mr. C. Byrnes addressed the electors again to-night, reiterating his former remarks. He stated that the Civil servants had every right to the franchise, but for their own convenience should ask to be disfranchised, to avoid the importunity of candidate, for votes. He was often cheered.

Mr. Taylor also addressed a meeting, repeating his former utterances. The chances are now more in favour of Byrnes. It is expected that the election will be very close. The interest is intense, and many voters are coming from other parts.

NEWCASTLE ELECTORATE.

NEWCASTLE, FRIDAY.

Mr. George A. Lloyd addressed a crowded room, at the Duke of Edinburgh Hotel, the Junction, this evening. Mr. Curtain occupied the chair. Mr. Lloyd said that an important crisis had arrived in the history of the colony, when an enlarged Parliament was to be elected. He drew a glowing picture of the progress of the colony, as shown by her railways, telegraphs, and pastoral, agricultural, and mining interests. They were exporting copper, tin, and coal in increasing quantities, and growing wheat enough for their own consumption. They desired free trade, a free Church, and free education, and all these they possessed. He gave the reason why they should vote for him, mainly on account of his past services. Mr. Bowdell moved the usual resolution of confidence in Mr. Lloyd, which was carried by a large majority; and a committee was formed to secure Mr. Lloyd's return.

Mr. Lloyd addressed the electors of Bullock Island last night from the balcony of the Glasgow Arms, where a large full-length portrait of the candidate was illuminated. Mr. J. S. Rodgers occupied the chair. Mr. Lloyd remarked on the remarkable increase in the value of property at Bullock Island since the erection of the bridge and the hydraulic cranes, the tenders for both of which were taken by the Government of which he was a member. The Easby had been loaded there last week, with 1800 tons, in eighteen hours. He enlarged on the necessity of law reform, the extension of municipalities, the importance of wise regulations under the land law, and taxation of a legitimate character. When the speaker had finished he was asked some questions on immigration, leasing of the public wharfs, and trimming the coals, to which he gave satisfactory replies. Mr. Hardy moved,—"That Mr. Lloyd is a fit and proper person to represent the city, and that every influence should be used to secure his return," which was carried unanimously; and a committee was formed to look after the matter.

WEST MAITLAND ELECTORATE.

WEST MAITLAND, FRIDAY.

Mr. James Fullford, candidate for West Maitland, has published his address to the electors, setting forth his views at great length. Regarding education, he is favourable to the present Act. He is in favour of free trade principles; and as to immigration he is opposed to the present system, and would support a scheme that would attract small capitalists. He was opposed to the Chinese, believing them an undesirable class. As to local self-government, he was in favour of a more comprehensive system; and in regard to the licensing system, he thought reform necessary. As to the land, he believed in nationalising rather than alienating, and was opposed to the remission of interest to selectors.

HARTLEY ELECTORATE.

LITHGOW, FRIDAY.

Mr. R. P. Abbott held his first meeting this evening, and addressed the electors from the Cosmopolitan Hotel. There was a good attendance, and Mr. W. Pitt was voted to the chair. Mr. Abbott stated that it was some time since he was asked to stand for that electorate, and after mature consideration he had consented to do so. He had been informed that the recent member had intended to withdraw from Parliamentary life, as his interest had been transferred to another colony. This Mr. Hurley had denied. (A voice: "Tell us about yourself.") Well he would do so. The first matter he would speak of was Chinese labour, and it had been industriously promulgated that he had employed Chinese labour. This he would emphatically deny. He was entirely opposed to anything of the kind, and would always continue so. (Hear, hear.) There was no party question of interest before the constituencies, so that nothing could be said on that point. He had read Sir Henry Parkes' speech over, and he could say that there was no point in it that he could not support, no matter what Ministry brought it in. He would next touch upon the Education question. This was as effectually settled as the State aid to religion, and he would be no more a party to opening up one than the other. Anybody who would be mad or fool enough to attempt to open up the question would find that his effort would only make firmer the similar idea. He would say more on this subject if it were necessary. With regard to the land laws of the country, if the legislators who framed the present Act could have foreseen the result of their efforts he did not think we would be under the present system. Amendments were made of late, and he considered that these were of advantage. The lowering of the value of improvements was a good move. The Government intended to raise the rents on the pastoral leases, by which they hoped to get £100,000. The proposed remission of interest he was entirely opposed to, and he thought the electors of this district were also opposed to the repudiation of this just debt. (Hear, hear.) It was only raised in the districts where dummying prevailed, and he would say that if his election for Hartley depended upon his agreeing to this proposal he could not give his sanction. He was strongly in favour of opening up the country by railways—both branch and trunk lines; and while on this head he would speak on the excessive railway freights charged. He thought all produce should be carried cheaply and equitably. He was in favour of the Illawarra and Newcastle railways, and thought that all railways should terminate in Sydney waters. Relative to immigration, he would say that unless the right people were selected he would be opposed to bringing out the off-scourings of the cities of Europe. He was in favour of the eight hours system, and was opposed to protection. He was not in favour of an absentee-tax, and thought if any tax should be levied it must be a property-tax; but the revenue had proved itself elastic, and he did not think any fresh taxation was necessary. He was entirely in favour of an extended system of local government, as foreshadowed by Sir Henry Parkes. It would do away with the begging for bridges and roads. In his old constituency he had 150 miles of country to attend to, and 5000 electors to look after, and he was not able to do more than one man's work, so he could not go up at the last Parliament, and it was through not canvassing that he was defeated. He was in favour of a central Board for licensing, and thought there was nothing more disgraceful than the scenes that had been enacted over licensing in Sydney during the past few months. He would not touch upon the question of Judge Windeyer and the Press. He was in favour of amending the Merchant Shipping Act, than which nothing was more defective. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. George Donald said that he felt we could have no better man, and until he had heard Mr. Abbott he had not pledged himself. He would now move that Mr. Abbott was a fit and proper person to represent the electoral district of Hartley.

Mr. E. Hughes, who was received with a volley of groans, seconded the motion, which was then put, but only a few hands were held up, and several scores were held up against it. Mr. Hurley then attempted to address the electors, but was received with groans, hisses, and hooting, and had to desist.

ORANGE ELECTORATE.

ORANGE, FRIDAY.

Last night Mr. Thomas Dalton, one of the candidates for Orange, addressed a crowded meeting at the School of Arts. On the motion of Mr. M'Fadden, seconded by Mr. Leeds, the chair was taken by the Mayor, who introduced the candidate, and strongly advocated his return. Mr. Dalton, on rising, thanked the electors for their cordial reception. He appeared in compliance with a largely-signed requisition. He was well known and identified for many years with every form of advancement in Orange. He would support the Municipalities Act, and extend the municipal system if it aimed at establishing shire councils to take charge of the roads and bridges of the district, so as to relieve the central Government. He would support the Licensing Bill in principle, but not the whole measure; even the publicans desired a new measure. One-third of the existing public-houses was ample, and supervision was required. He would advocate a Civil Service Bill, and expunge political influence and appointments. He considered that an additional Land Act was required, giving greater facilities to outside agricultural districts. Power was required to select four sections in such localities. He would give fixity of tenure, and advocate a land tax on holdings exceeding 2500 acres. He opposed the remission of interest on selectors' balances, and thought, in spite of the Premier's statement, that additional revenue was required. Though a professed free trader, he believed in fostering native industries by bonuses, and that Government contracts should be confined as much as possible to the colony. He protested against taxing the productions of the country. He would not support the present system of immigration, but was in favour of a steady flow of population. The further influx of Chinese should be prohibited. There were 12,000 now in the colony. He was strongly in favour of railway extension, and would advocate a line from Orange to Wilcannia via Forbes. He would advocate the readjustment of freights to Sydney, to counteract the present centralizing tendency, and put country traders on an equality with Sydney. In regard to education, he was a Denominationalist, and in favour of payment by results. He pointed to eminent Protestants who held the same view on the education question.

THE BOGAN ELECTORATE.

DUBBO, FRIDAY.

Sir P. Jennings addressed the electors of the Bogan at Dubbo last night. Fully 500 persons were present. Alderman J. S. Brown occupied the chair. The candidate expressed his views on the questions agitating the public mind. He first dealt with the Public Instruction Act, and said that the measure was so clearly the wish of the majority of the people that it would be mischievous and futile to attempt to disturb it. For himself, he would be very explicit. Though the Act did not express his views on the question, he would state without any reservation whatsoever that he would not, directly or indirectly, be a party to disturb it. He would neither join any organisation nor organise any movement against it. The Act had been passed in a constitutional way, and the minority must bow to the opinions of the majority. The Act should have a fair and honest trial on its merits. He was not in favour of a recurrence to the Denominational system, and would not vote for any measure having that tendency. The Public Instruction Act was supported by a preponderance of public feeling, and he should loyally accept it. He spoke in favour of local self-government, believing that a well-devised system would make people more self-reliant, and reduce the expenses of the central Government. He was in favour of endowing their large municipalities to the extent of two pounds for every one pound raised by rates. He would give these Boards control of licenses, and all license fees and the charge of the administration of local Acts—such as a Dog Act, Pastures Protection Act, &c. Regarding the land question, he was against the remission of interest, which would principally benefit land jobbers. If there were exceptional cases of hardship among the selectors—the result of drought, &c.—they could be met on their merits. He was favourable to the American homestead system, and, above all, he thought the law should be such as to seal these feuds which existed between selector and squatter. He thought no new taxation was necessary, and believed in the stamp duties, as it was a direct tax. He was opposed to the taxes upon stock and wool and coal. Taxes on exports were only allowable when a country had a monopoly of the article taxed, but the cases were a handicap on their own producers. He did not think fresh taxation was necessary. If it were found to be so he thought a small tax on incomes would be the fairest. This would reach property which ought to pay something towards the revenue. He was opposed to the indiscriminate introduction of the Chinese or other Asiatic races. Any large body of them with their own observances, isolated as they would be from other colonists, would be a source of grave danger to the State. In San Francisco he had seen 40,000 Chinese, and they were in that large place a city within a city. They were dangerous to the common body of citizens. He spoke on several minor matters, and credited the coalition of Sir John Robertson and Sir Henry Parkes as having been productive of much useful and desirable legislation. The speaker was enthusiastically received, and was repeatedly cheered. Alderman Phillips moved that Sir Patrick was a fit and proper person to represent the Bogan, and Alderman Bertram seconded the motion. This was carried unanimously. The candidate left this morning for Warren, which he will reach on Saturday night.

BATHURST ELECTORATE.

BATHURST, FRIDAY.

Mr. F. B. Suttor is advertised to address the Bathurst electors on Monday night. Alfred Pechey, returning officer for West Macquarie, has resigned his position, with the intention of opposing Mr. Pilcher for that electorate. Mr. Combes, Mr. Webb, and Mr. Sydney Smith are advertised to address the electors of East Macquarie in different places next week. W. Suttor, a candidate for Bathurst, is again addressing the electors to-night, and the political excitement is gradually working up.

MOLONG ELECTORATE.

MOLONG, FRIDAY.

Mr. Jno. Smith, of Gamboola, addressed the electors last night, at the School of Arts, the Mayor being in the chair. The candidate spoke at length on the principal topics of the day, and there was a unanimous show of hands in his favour. About 300 persons were present.

MUDGEE ELECTORATE.

MUDGEE, FRIDAY.

Mr. Richard Rouse arrived in town this afternoon, and was met by a large number of persons in buggies, and accompanied by a band. On arriving at the Post Office Hotel, he addressed a few words of thanks for the splendid reception given to him. He addresses the electors this evening.

YOUNG ELECTORATE.

MURRUMBURRAH, FRIDAY.

Mr. Henniker Heaton opened the campaign last night at Murrumburrah. Dr. M'Dougall was in the chair. Mr. Heaton spoke for one hour, and the large audience repeatedly cheered him. Mr. J. F. Jenkins, J.P., moved and Mr. John Bourke seconded a vote of confidence, which was unanimously carried, and a strong committee formed to secure Mr. Heaton's return.

Mr. P. W. Crowe addressed the electors at Marengo last night. About 100 persons, chiefly selectors, met him at Cain's Hotel. He spoke for one hour and a quarter on the leading questions, embracing the land question and adjustment of our finances. He advocated a new land law, having a £1 per acre improvement clause, the abolition of interest, and an alteration in the present vexatious Courts of inquiry. He favoured retrenchment in the Civil service, such retrenchment to be made after due inquiry as to the work performed by all the officers. He should not be a party to wholesale dismissals, and greatly regretted that in the minds of many the Civil servants had not that justice meted out which numbers of them highly deserved. He would impose a tax on the produce of other colonies coming here, so as to give the farmer a better market for his produce. He would oppose a tramway, as he looked upon such a scheme as a useless expenditure, and fragile for a large agricultural and pastoral district like Young. A railway would receive his most unqualified support. He considered the scheme of taxation propounded by the late Government as unjust and tending to sap the foundation of our own industries. He advocated an absentee and property tax as the best means of raising revenue to supply our deficit.

He was loudly applauded; and, at the conclusion of his speech, a vote of confidence was proposed by Mr. Michael Crowe, seconded by Mr. M'Cann, and carried amidst great cheering, without dissent. In answer to the only question in reference to Chinese immigration, he thought New South Wales ought not delay in taking steps to keep the Chinese from our shores. Mr. P. Crowe then called for three cheers for her Majesty the Queen and three for Mr. J. Henniker Heaton. Both were enthusiastically responded to. Mr. Crowe speaks again to-night at Wombat.

Mr. W. J. Watson addressed the electors here last evening. Dr. M'Dougall was in the chair. The candidate spoke at length on various questions. He is a stanch free-trader and an opponent of the remission of interest on conditional purchases. He opposes the payment of members of Parliament, and is a strong supporter of the present Education Act, which he ably defends against the charges of godlessness. He asserted that if the clergy wished to avail themselves of its privileges they had the opportunity of giving religious instruction in the Public schools. He subsequently addressed a large meeting at Harden, Mr. D. F. Brady in the chair. The candidate was well received at both places, and votes of confidence were passed.

YASS, FRIDAY.

Mr. Fitzpatrick arrived here yesterday, and will address the electors of Yass next Tuesday night, to-day at Tangmangaroo, and Bowning to-morrow. On Monday, he visits the outside polling places. He is likely to have a walk over. No political excitement or enthusiasm visible.

WAGGA WAGGA, FRIDAY.

Mr. A. G. Jones addressed the electors from the balcony of the Australian Hotel this evening, the chair being occupied by W. G. Evans, builder. There was a large crowd of people present in front, and the leading people of the town and district occupied the balcony. In an address lasting for something over an hour and a half, Mr. Jones reviewed the leading political questions in the order of his published address, prefacing this review with an examination of cases of opposition manifested to him at Narrandera, which he stated arose from the strongly antagonistic interests of Narrandera with Wagga, with which latter place his sympathies lay, though he should, if elected, consider the interests of the whole. He condemned the financial proposals of the Government, especially their proposal to tax produce, and advocated the extension of railways, and the reduction of the rates of carriage of produce, comparing the rates of carriage by water from Melbourne to Sydney, and arguing that the farmer of this country was heavily handicapped in the high rates which had to be submitted to to get his produce to market. On the Chinese question he would impose a £20 poll tax, and also make employers of Chinese labour pay £5 per head per annum for all Chinese in their employment. On the Licensing Bill he was in favour of lower license fees for small country publicans' house, and of making large establishments and clubs pay heavier licenses. He entered into an exhaustive examination of several land bills, and severely handled the Premier's recent utterances on the remission of interest question, and by quotation from the Premier's speeches in the past exhibited his contradictory and inconsistent course. He contended that if there was repudiation in the matter the Government were the party to break first away from their contract. He held that the area of selection should be increased to 5000 acres as a maximum, with the same grazing rights and privileges as now, and would endeavour to get the reduction of the number of reserves, which were made, and nowhere more conspicuously than in this neighbourhood, for the benefit of a few. At the close of his address a number of questions were asked, and the usual resolutions declaring him a fit and proper person were carried, no amendment being proposed.

MURRAY ELECTORATE.

DENILIQUIN, FRIDAY.

The election campaign for the Murray is now fairly commenced. The candidates are Messrs. W. Hay and A. Wilson, squatters; and Messrs. Barbour and Killen, the latter coming forward in the interest of the selectors. Yesterday evening Messrs. Hay and Wilson addressed a large and orderly meeting of electors at the Town Hall; the chair being taken by Mr. Hunter, builder, of this town. Both of the candidates named expressed their views at length. Mr. Hay said he would have been content to have left the representation of the district to a younger man or to a townsman, if one had come forward; but, having a large interest in the district, he thought it his duty, when asked, to come forward as a candidate. It had been thrown in his teeth that he was a squatter; but he was really less a squatter than a landowner. All he possessed was in the district, and he naturally felt great interest in its progress. So far as the Education Act was concerned, he was prepared to see that the youth of the colony were thoroughly well educated in every branch. Religious questions had never disturbed any election in this district, and it was not his duty to stir up any question of the kind on the present occasion. Regarding the Land Act, he was opposed to the abolition of interest on conditional purchases, and regarding the area of the latter, he thought it would be better to recognise at once a system of combined agriculture and grazing, and to do away altogether with grazing right, and instead of it grant an extension of area to 2500 acres; fencing to be the only improvement required, and payment 1s. per acre for twenty years. He would allow residents of towns to select on the same terms, provided they had resided in a town for three years, without requiring any further residence on their selections. He would be in favour of restricting auction sales of Crown lands to what was necessary for the requirements of the State, but not to abolish them altogether, as that would interfere with the progress of required permanent works, and render heavy taxation necessary. He was in favour of granting large subsidies to municipalities, but did not think that it would be advisable to force local government upon sparsely-settled districts, as the natural roads were in ordinary times equal to the requirements of the traffic. In any local government bill he thought it should be left to the option of any district to come under it or not, as was thought most advisable. Should increased taxation be necessary, he would not object to a fair and equitable land-tax, but before this he would like to see the Government get a fair rental for Crown lands leased for pastoral purposes. He was in favour of arrangements being made, if possible, for the free interchange of the products of adjoining colonies. Mr. Wilson expressed similar views on most questions. Referring to the abolition of interest, he thought the Government should obtain a return showing the present owners of conditional purchases. He knew cases where 30,000 acres of conditionally-purchased land were in the hands of one man. No Government could give up interest without a searching inquiry being made. He was in favour of conditional purchases being increased to three times their present area, the only improvement required being fencing. He would support the present Education Act, and was in favour of increasing the rents of Crown lands, and, if necessary, a land-tax, because he believed that property should bear its fair share of taxation. He was strongly in favour of a local government measure, as he believed the money would be spent to better advantage under the supervision of local bodies. In answer to a question both candidates expressed themselves in favour of restricting Chinese immigration, should there be a prospect of a large influx.

CAMDEN ELECTORATE.

PICTON, FRIDAY.

Mr. Garrett held a meeting here last night. Mr. W. R. Antill, J.P., was in the chair, and introduced the candidate in very eulogistic terms. Mr. Garrett, on coming forward, spoke largely upon the various local topics interesting to the constituency. The 28th clause of the Public Instruction Act he would strenuously uphold. The Land Act, he thought, required further amendment; and he was quite opposed to the remission of interest to free selectors. He was thoroughly averse to the introduction of Chinese, and would aid Sir Henry Parkes in preventing them from flooding the country. He was thoroughly in favour of free trade. At the conclusion of his address a vote of confidence was proposed by Mr. R. A. M'Innes, J.P., and seconded by Mr. Charles Dunn, J.P., and carried unanimously by a large and enthusiastic meeting. The usual vote of thanks to the chairman, and three cheers to the Queen, closed the meeting.

MONETARY AND COMMERCIAL.

FRIDAY EVENING.

This week, as a whole, has been the worst for business in the Stock and Share market we have had for some time. The limited number of transactions has not, however, affected prices to any noticeable extent, and holders are not disposed to make any concessions. Bank shares were very firm to-day: 11¾ was refused for City, 12 wanted; Commercial, fully paid, had buyers at 104, sellers at 105; new issue still scarce, and wanted at 88; Joint Stock realised 15¾, and offered at 16; Mercantile wanted at 5¾, for sale at 6; buyers of New South Wales at 53½, sellers at 54½; New Zealand inquired for at 20½, holders asked 5s. more; Queensland National in demand at 7½, held for 7¾; no Oriental for sale; Union salable at 64, offered at 65. Steam shares rather dull: Australasian were dealt in at 18¾, and offered at 18½; Clarence and Richmond (old) salable at 4, held for 5—sellers of preferential at 18; buyers of Hunter River at 7, sellers at 8; Illawarra wanted at 5½, offered at 6; North Shore Ferry easier, 17s. would have been accepted. Insurance shares firm: Accident asked for at 1s. 3d., for sale at 1s. 4d.; for Australian Fire, 8s. 9d. was refused; General were not offered; City wanted for 1s., held for 1s. 4d.; Mercantile in demand at 1s. 6d., sellers at 1s. 8d.; New South Wales dearer, 75s. declined, 80s. required; Pacific unchanged, buyers at 62s. 6d., sellers at 64s. 6d.; Sydney Fire obtainable at 74s. 6d.; Sydney Marine dearer, and wanted at 33s.; United salable at 44s., offered at 45s. Australian Gaslight firm, 14½ paid for old, 4¼ refused—5½ asked for new issue. Pyrmont Bridge wanted at 6¾, held at 7. Shale and Oil inquired for at 9s. 9d., held for 10s. 3d. Volunteer land orders taken at 140. Coffee Palace declined to 20s. buyers, 23s 6d. sellers. Coal shares about the same: Bulli had buyers at 11½, sellers at 12½; Wallsend asked for at 14½; Waratah advanced to 7½ buyers, 7¾ sellers; Vale of Clwydd salable at 16s. 3d., held for 16s. 9d. Great Cobar Copper are still tending upwards, 79s. 6d. declined, 81s. demanded. Krohmann's Gold slightly stronger, 2s. 9d. offered, 3s. 6d. asked; Star of Peace could also have been disposed of at 2s. 9d., sellers asked 4s.; Band and Albion dull, 5¼ would have been taken. There were no sellers of Debentures.

The Import markets evinced signs of an improvement in trade as the week progressed; and a good business is anticipated during the remainder of the month. Breadstuffs have a hardening tendency, especially for Adelaide flour, as the mills there have run out of wheat, and there will not be much done until the new crop is in. Victorian flour is offering freely at £10 10s. for good brands. In building materials we note a better inquiry for cement, 19s. 3d. to 19s. 6d. is required for trade lots of Knight Bevan's. Candles are firmer, 8½d. to 8¾d. paid for small quantities of D.R.J. There is a strong market for dried fruits—currants moving at 6½d. to 6¾d., according to quantity and sample; Eleme and Sultana raisins also bring full prices. Coffee is without improvement, and 11½d. a full price for plantation; chicory sells at 3d. in bond. Fish is rather quiet, 1-lb. salmon held for 7s. 9d.; sardines have been sold at 7s. 10½d. for halves; white herrings very scarce. There is a much better feeling in teas, 2500 boxes, ex William Manson, changed hands in one line, on terms reserved; also business done in half-chests to the extent of 500, at fully late rates. The stock of cornsacks here is almost in the hands of one firm, and as the Melbourne market has been almost bought up, it is difficult to name a figure for a parcel; we question if 9s. 6d. would be accepted. Kerosene oil is dearer, 1s. 8d. to 1s. 9d. required for imported; linseed steady at 4s. to 4s. 1d. for half-and-half in drums. Fencing wire is again coming into demand, and holders are very firm. Galvanized iron has a moderate sale at £23 10s. to £25 10s. There is a limited inquiry for brandy, Hennessy and Martell's bulk dull of sale; case of the former brand very firm at late quotations; second quality, in wood, in limited request. Bottled ale firm at up to 10s. 6d. The demand for bulk beer is not large, but there is very little good on hand, and new brew may be expected here in a week or two. Sugars remain firm—new Mauritius anxiously looked for. The local produce market was in a very depressed condition this morning. At the Darling Harbour railway terminus copious supplies of forage were forward; but, although the attendance of buyers was good, the sales passed off very languidly. Prime oaten hay brought from 5s. 1d. to 5s. 3d.; medium, from 3s. 6d. to 4s.; inferior, from 2s. 6d. Lucerne brought from 3s. to 3s. 6d.; old wheaten hay in bundles, 3s.; new in sheaves, from 2s. 3d. to 2s. 6d. Straw brought from 2s. 6d. to 2s. 8d., the qualities being first-class. Potatoes were knocked down for whatever was offered, prices averaging from 1s. 3d. to 2s. per cwt. Business at the wharfs has not altered since yesterday. Lucerne hay is still offering at from £2 to £2 15s., no really choice forward. Maize is easy at from 2s. 1d. to 2s. 2d. Melbourne onions are worth from £25 to £26 per ton, in demand; Hunter River, from £11 to £13. Best butter has a slow sale at 6d. per lb. Cheese worth from 4d. to 8d; bacon, from 4d. to 6½d.; lard, from 3d. to 4d.; pigs (alive), from 2½d. to 3¼d. per lb. Poultry sells fairly at recent quotations. Eggs easier, offering to-day at 10d. Tobacco leaf is worth from 4d. to 8d. per lb.; honey, from 2½d. to 6d.; beeswax, from 6d. to 10d.; millet brooms, from 8s. to 10s. per dozen.

Messrs. Harrison, Jones, and Devlin, Mr. Barker, Messrs. Mort and Co., Mr. Bridge, and Messrs. Maiden, Hill, and Clark held sales of produce to-day. The tone of the London market affected the value of hides, and a decline of fully one-eighth of a penny all round was submitted to. Tallow ruled about the same as last week, but there was more demand for shipping lots. Calfskins sold at 1s. to 4s. 2d.; yearlings at 3s. 3d. to 7s. 9d.; horsehides, 2s. 9d. to 6s. 6d.; opossum skins, 3d.; bear, 3d.; kangaroo, 3d. to 2s.; wallaby, 2½d. to 4d.; goat, 3d. to 1s.; pig, 1s.; beeswax, 10½d.

The Cotopaxi (s.) sailed to-day for London, via Melbourne and Adelaide, with 6550 ingots tin, 2298 ingots copper, 972 ingots and 17 cases nickel, 59 bags silver ore, 9 casks pyrites, 12 cases pearlshell, 24 packages sundries, 296 casks and 157 kegs butter, 936 bales wool, and 2 bales hair, and 2 bales skins.

Messrs. M'Dermott, Brothers, and Searr report the sale of Dubbo Downs Station, Herbert River, Western Queensland, on account of Mr. William Frost, consisting of 950 square miles of country, with 1000 head of mixed cattle, stock horses, right of brand, and working plant—purchaser, Mr. W. K. Poberdy. Also, on account of Mr. James Lee, Larras Lake, Molong, New South Wales, 140 rams at £4 4s., and 99 at £2 2s.

The Customs duties received to-day were as follow:—Spirits, £1865 5s. 4d.; wine (still), £79 19s. 10d.; ale, porter, and beer (in wood), £17 10s.—(in bottle), £68 8s. 3d.; tobacco and snuff, £72 2s.; cigars, £133 13s. 9d.; tea, £500 2s. 3d.; sugar (unrefined), £435; molasses, 4d.; dried fruits, £106 14s. 8d.; hops, £14 16s. 9d.; specific duty, £152 18s. 6d.; pilotage, £43 1s.; harbour and light dues, £1: total, £3429 12s. 8d.

THE RATION PUBLIC IS NOT TO BE CONvinced by mere assertion. It wants proof. Accordingly when it learns that four thousand physicians guarantee the purity and efficacy of an alcoholic invigorant, and see on every hand its wonderful cures of nervous debility, kidney and bladder ailments, rheumatism, indigestion, and torpidity of the liver, the public puts its entire faith in the article. The above explains why UDOLPHO WOLFE'S SCHIEDAM SCHNAPPS enjoys such unbounded popularity.

THE MOST FLATTERING TRIBUTE TO THE merits of UDOLPHO WOLFE'S SCHIEDAM AROMATIC SCHNAPPS is to be found in the fact that, although repeatedly pirated, and often imitated, nothing has ever been produced that even simulates this matchless preparation. All the adulterated compounds and noxious nostrums, the diluted cordials and sickly elixirs that have been fostered on the public, bear no more the shadow of a semblance to this excelling invigorant than the strongest artificial light to the great luminary of the day.

The Sydney Morning Herald.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1880.

In his speech to the electors of East Sydney, Sir HENRY PARKES pointed out what a large number of questions there are of a non-political character which in the interest of the country should be dealt with. Political questions are always the most exciting; but they are not always important in proportion to the excitement they create, and there can be no doubt that in the heat of party strife many matters have been neglected which a public prudence would have caused to be attended to. Unfortunately citizens, when acting in their public capacity, are not always as prudent about the affairs of the State as they are about their own, and are more easily led away by excitement than by solid interests.

The object of representative institutions is to get good government, and the object of good government is to promote the greatest distribution of well-being, the fullest development of the capabilities of the country and its people, and the realization of the highest ideals of life. A good deal of this, however, is forgotten when attention is disproportionately concentrated on the preference of one patriot over another as chief ruler, or on some point of political organization.

We cannot, however, always be having burning questions to the fore, nor indeed is it very desirable that we should; and, when such questions are for the time disposed of, there comes something like a temporary lull in politics. At such times it is natural to ask whether the executive and legislative leisure could not be directed to attend to some of the neglected matters, and to remember the forgotten. Accordingly Sir HENRY PARKES asked the electors of East Sydney whether it was not time now "to make the land itself as pleasant as possible for people to live in?" We should say quite time, perhaps a little past the time, but still better late than never; and a serious and determined attempt to fetch up arrears would deserve the grateful acknowledgment of the people. "I should think," said Sir HENRY PARKES, "the sober-minded people of this country would want its Government to address themselves to the real business of the country." Quite so, and we trust that at this election the sober-minded people will prove themselves to be in a majority.

The neglect, however, of what is really important business is very largely due to the fact that attending to it is of more advantage to the people than it is to those who govern. It is not the man who honestly devotes himself to the well-being of the country who gets promoted into power; it is the tactician who knows how to take the utmost advantage of the questions that stir the popular passions for the hour. A rising politician does not care to waste his time over unproductive labour, and instinctively turns his attention to those questions which have profit in them. Take, for instance, such questions as the conservation of our forests, the improvement of our rivers and harbours, the development of fisheries, the organization of the Civil Service, the promotion of technical education, the simplification of the transfer of property, the improvement of the criminal law, the improvement of the mercantile and shipping law, the reform of the licensing system, the simplification of the mining laws, and the improvement of our municipal system. These are all matters of great importance to the social welfare of the people; they were all referred to by Sir HENRY PARKES as awaiting treatment. They have all been repeatedly discussed in the Press, and each one of them has one or more enthusiasts in the community who are constantly pressing on public attention the ideas that they think important. We might add to the list such questions as sewerage and water supply, the laying of cities and towns, the multiplication of parks and pleasure-grounds, the better distribution of public and private charity, &c. But important as these matters are, and patriotic as every man is who devotes himself to one or more of them with a sincere desire to promote the public good, still everyone can see that to champion these causes is not the high road to position, power, pay, patronage, or popularity. And this is partly the reason why they have been so neglected. Let anyone read over the speeches of ex-members, and see what they most pride themselves on having done, and what they think will most commend them to the favourable notice of the constituencies, and he will easily see how many important matters are left to take care of themselves. It is fortunate, therefore, for the country that, owing to peculiar circumstances, and the temporary subsidence of party spirit and party government, many of these questions have now a chance of being attended to. Let us hope that the expectation that has been aroused will not be disappointed, and that we shall not have had this list of subjects paraded before us only to see them march solemnly into oblivion.

Let not those, however, who are fond of exciting questions imagine that the session of Parliament is going to be humdrum because a number of unexciting topics will be introduced, over which there will be no fighting, but which will call merely for hard work, patient attention, and sound judgment. There is still enough left of disputable matter to satisfy even a patron of Donnybrook fair. To begin with, there is the eternal land question, which seems likely to remain a subject of controversy till there is not an unsold acre left to quarrel about; and even when it is all sold there will still be room for wrangling as to how much land any man should be allowed to have, and how much he should be made to pay for the privilege of having it. Then there is the fiscal question, as to who is to pay for the cost of the Government, and whether some people are to be taxed to support other people's industries, and to contribute to other people's incomes. Then there is the question of railway extension, which becomes practically a struggle between different districts to get the first pull at the public purse; then the question of protecting the labour market against Chinese competition; and then the question as to what degree of restraint should be put upon that class of publicans who want to make money out of the vices and the infirmities of the population. There is quite enough in these subjects to create lively times in the Assembly, to say nothing of the personalities which always crop up when a number of persons are competing for popularity. There is no reason therefore for fearing that Parliamentary business is going to be dull because there is a promise that it may be useful.

We learn from an Adelaide telegram that Sir Henry Parkes has suggested that "the propriety of the confederation of New South Wales, Victoria, and South Australia, as having more in common than the other colonies, should be made one of the subjects of discussion" at the conference on border duties. Unless the representatives of the colonies at the conference were specially authorised beforehand to discuss this question, there might be some difficulty or embarrassment in raising it, or at least in attempting to come to any practical conclusion or understanding upon it. But the more the matter is considered the clearer does it appear that the only permanent and satisfactory method now open for the settlement of the question of border duties is the establishment of federal union, so far as concerns the collection and distribution of revenue obtained through the Customs. The border duties' question is no longer simply a question of border districts' trade; it is already to some extent, and it will become increasingly as every year passes, a question affecting the general trade relations between the colonies. The extension of railways, and the cheapening and quickening of inland carriage, will work a revolutionary change in the conditions of intercolonial intercourse; and if duties are collected at the seaboard on goods shipped from colony to colony, whilst no duties are collected on the borders upon goods carried overland, the coasting trade will be supplanted in a large measure by a trade across the borders, wherever the saving of Customs duty will cover the difference in cost of carriage. Articles that may be imported free at Sydney but cannot now be shipped to Melbourne without having to pay there the heavy ad valorem duties of the Victorian tariff, might be imported here and sent into Victoria by rail at a lower charge if the border Customs were abolished, and Melbourne houses would order goods from England via Sydney. This would have been impossible in the days of dray carriage. The old-fashioned border conventions were practicable then, because the transactions they provided for were matters of comparatively small magnitude. But the problem to be solved, as it now presents itself, is of immensely wider range, and greater prospective importance, and as any arrangement for free trade across the borders would affect the coasting trade between the colonies, the revenues arising from it, and ultimately the trade with countries beyond the seas, no such arrangement should be made without a settlement relating to the coasting trade also. Sir Henry Parkes has apparently recognised the force of this consideration in suggesting that at the conference confederation should be a subject for discussion.

It is well that the whole matter should be thoroughly discussed amongst the leading men of the different colonies. Even if no immediate practical result should follow, the ground will be in some degree cleared for future action by the simple process of bringing into view the difficulties to be surmounted. Let it be once perceived on all sides that the day for conventions on the old basis has passed, and that intercolonial trading relations by sea as well as by land must now be considered if free intercourse inland is to be established, and the delegates or representatives will find themselves in face of the question how to frame a uniform tariff, and how to deal in a uniform and authoritative manner with alterations which time and the course of events may require to be made in it. If such a tariff were prepared by the representatives at the coming conference, the Legislature of any of the colonies might refuse to sanction it: and it is by no means to be presumed that the Legislature in any of these colonies would consent to hand over its power of fixing the Customs duties to an intercolonial authority without the check of revision or ratification. But it is plain that if duties are to cease upon intercolonial trade, and all Customs receipts upon goods imported from beyond the seas are to be thrown into a common fund, and distributed amongst the colonies according to their respective populations, there must be one tariff for all, and some one body must be appointed to frame it.

It is suggested that the colonies to be confederated are New South Wales, Victoria, and South Australia, "as having more in common than the other colonies." This, however, is only a partial view of the case. Unless South Australia on joining the confederation were required to resign her claims to the Northern Territory, there would be very much in common between that colony and Queensland. It may be said that Queensland will depend greatly in the future upon tropical industries; but that is equally true of South Australia so far as concerns the Northern Territory. Queensland has got the start in sugar-growing, but arrangements are in progress for beginning that enterprise on a large scale in the Northern Territory; and even in this colony sugar production is one of our most thriving agricultural enterprises. Both New South Wales and Victoria may steer clear of the difficulties connected with the employment of coloured labour; but there is much in common between South Australia and Queensland in that respect, if those colonies are to develope the agricultural capabilities of their most northerly districts in the most advantageous manner. This difficulty may be evaded by not inviting Queensland to take part in the conference; but it it will not be effectually met by that method. If Queensland is to be perpetually excluded from the compact, there is an end to the matter; but if there be any recognition of the possibility that Queensland may hereafter be permitted to come in, it would be more generous, not to say more politic, to ask that colony to take part in the preliminary negotiations.

The great puzzle, however, is to understand how Sir Henry Parkes and Mr. Berry are to be expected to agree upon a common basis of action. Mr. Berry prophesied some years ago that the protectionist principles which were dominant in Victoria would be accepted by all these colonies, and that then federation would be a practicable thing. Probably he is of the same opinion now, for instead of relaxing protection he is carrying it out with increased stringency. Sir Henry Parkes on his part has emphatically declared his entire and unalterable adhesion to the principles of free trade, and his determination to resist the establishment of protection in this colony. It would not be opposing protection in New South Wales to consent to a common tariff for the three colonies which should be founded on protectionist principles; nor could a loyal adherent of protection in Victoria, and one who believes in protection as the future bond of colonial union, consent to a common tariff from which all protection had been eliminated. The very prospect of the discussion calls up the remembrance of Prince Bismarck's simile—a quarrel between a dog and a fish. "Only plunge into the sea of protection," says Mr. Berry, "and we will soon settle the whole dispute." "Just struggle up out of the depths, and meet me on the solid ground of free trade," says Sir Henry Parkes, "and I shall consider the difficulty practically at an end." But if each has determined to keep to his own element, what then? The chief result of the Conference will be to show that the times are not yet ripe for united action, and that we had better fall back once more upon the logic of events, as the best thing to carry conviction to the minds of our neighbours.

The Academy of Art was on Thursday formally consigned to the tomb. But it did not die as a failure; it died as a success, and passed its work on to a more vigorous institution. Those who brought it into being and sustained it in life were content to see it pass away, as it had done its work, and there was no longer any special necessity for its maintenance. It took up a neglected cause, and made a beginning with systematic art study in New South Wales; and, aided by propitious circumstances, did a great deal in a short time—very much more, indeed, than could at first have been anticipated. When in 1871 Mr. Edward Reeve invited a number of persons favourable to the establishment of an Academy of Art to attend a meeting, and when Mr. Mort regretfully expressed his opinion that they had very uphill work before them, and probably would not succeed, no one could foresee that in 1880 we should have such a respectable collection of pictures, and such a convenient Art Gallery, and such facilities for the accommodation of students. Could the early subscribers have foreseen what was to happen they would have gone to work, not with any feeling of depression, but with the utmost enthusiasm. The result should be an encouragement to others who devote themselves to a good cause in its infant days. Of course the International Exhibition had a great deal to do with the development of our Art Gallery. But for that, the Academy might have had to struggle on in a small way for many years. It was from the London Commission that the proposal came to send out a large number of pictures. It was from the foreign commissioners that came the earnest appeal for a separate and suitable building in which to show their own pictures. To this request, strongly backed up by the Art Committee, and acquiesced in by the Government, we owe it that we have the present Gallery. If we had not had the Exhibition, we should not have had the pictures; and if we had not had the Gallery, we should not have bought the pictures. The tribute paid at the meeting on Thursday to Messrs. Du Faur and Montefiore for their services was but the simplest justice. They have laboured in season and out of season, and they have their reward.

According to our recent telegram, there appears to have been a reaction of feeling in France with respect to the strict execution of the March decrees, and the expulsion of religious orders from the country. We cannot profess to be sorry for this, because the Government, inflamed against the Jesuits, has been pushing its revenge to a point which injured the principles of civil and religious liberty. But the exact cause of the reaction of popular feeling is not at present very intelligible. Hitherto the Chamber of Deputies has rather urged the Government forward than held it back, and has twice sent up a measure to the Senate in favour of the policy which the Government adopted; and it was only because the Senate rejected that law that the Government acted on the strength of old, and practically effete, decrees. The Government (which on Wednesday was met by an adverse vote, and resigned, but has been reinstated in spite of it) had been recently reconstructed by the expulsion of M. de Freycinet, whose moderate and tolerant speech at Montauban had given umbrage to M. Gambetta, who had indulged in a much more warlike tone at Cherbourg. The defeat of the Government may partly be due to a reaction in the Chamber of Deputies against the dangerous tendency towards violent language and conduct; but, according to our telegram, the execution of the French decrees formed the heaviest count in the indictment. If the decision thus come to means a return towards toleration, moderation, and a pacific foreign policy, it is a distinct gain for France, and gives greater assurance for the stability of the Republic. Its great danger lies in violence and excess; but the difficulty, where parties are so fierce, where there is so much that insists on being remembered, and so much that were better forgotten, is to preserve an equilibrium of judgment and temper.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

To-day's issue of the Herald comprises twenty pages, the same number that constituted last Saturday's paper. The two supplements, one of eight pages, the other of four, are rendered necessary by the increased demand upon our space, occasioned in some measure by the meetings, &c., in connection with the elections for the new Parliament.

In the Supreme Court, yesterday, his Honor Mr. Justice Hargrave, Primary Judge, dealt with some ecclesiastical matters in chambers, and settled the issues for trial in the ecclesiastical suit, "Bardsley v. Glover and wife." His Honor Mr. Justice Windeyer, after disposing of common law matters in the public chamber in the Divorce Court, dispensed with service of the proceedings on the co-respondent in O'Sullivan v. O'Sullivan and M'Guire. In the Jury Court, before his Honor Mr. Justice Windeyer and a jury of four, the libel action, Finnegan v. Sullivan, was settled. The defendant apologised, and consented to a verdict with nominal damages and costs as between attorney and client. In the action of "Lyons v. Hoffnung and others," the trial of which in the Banco Court has occupied his Honor Sir William Manning and a jury of four during nine days, the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff, with damages £5959 19s. 9d. The plaintiff was suing as the official assignee of the insolvent estate of Messrs. Hardy, Brothers, furniture dealers. In "Jaques v. Doyle," an ejectment action tried before his Honor Mr. Justice Windeyer in the Jury Court, a verdict was, by his Honor's direction, given for the defendant.

The appointment of the following places to be polling places for taking the poll at the election of members to serve in the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, for the respective districts named in connection therewith, have been cancelled:—Woollombi, Warri Station and Merool Creek; Yass Plains, Davis Town, Cockle Creek.

Yesterday, Messrs. Harrison, Jones, and Devlin formally opened their new capacious wool and produce stores, at Elizabeth-street, Circular Quay, conducting their produce sales there for the first time. The company of buyers and others having disposed of refreshments, Mr. John M'Elhone proposed "Success to the Firm," and the toast having been duly honoured, Mr. Jones responded, and the business of the day proceeded.

Mr. Elkington, mayor of Balmain, has handed to us for publication the following letter, having reference to the postal arrangements of that borough:—"November 5th, 1880. Sir,—Referring to the deputation from the Municipal Council of Balmain which waited on the Postmaster General on the 29th ultimo, to suggest a better system of clearing the letter-receivers in that borough, I am directed to inform you that it has been decided to have all the receivers in Balmain cleared by a mail-boy attached to the post-office there, who will take the correspondence to that office, and afterwards bring a mail to Sydney. This arrangement will not only entirely obviate the delay that now exists in letters for Balmain being taken to Sydney, but will admit of three clearances of the receivers every day. I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant, S. H. Lambton, Secretary."

Mr. T. R. Smith, lately member for the Nepean, and who is a candidate for re-election, has been on a visit to the neighbouring colony of Victoria, and was taken seriously ill on his return journey. Dr. Wren, of Wagga, was called to attend him. Although Mr. Smith is confined to his bed, he has arrived home, and is progressing favourably.

The secretary to the Western Suburbs Musical Society writes:—"In your issue of the 10th instant, in connection with Mr. C. B. Foster's concert, you observe 'that a musical taste is extending to the various suburbs'; also 'that there are societies at the Glebe, Petersham, Ashfield, and elsewhere.' Kindly allow me on behalf of the Western Suburbs Musical Society to state that, although we number amongst our numerous members many Ashfield musical folk, yet at present the head-quarters of the society mentioned are at Burwood, whilst undoubtedly the credit of organising and keeping together a very efficient orchestra belongs to a Burwood gentleman. It is the intention of the committee to alternate the holding of quarterly concerts between Burwood and Ashfield, and we hope ere long to be able to render musical compositions in Ashfield, in a building worthy of such an important suburb."

The Boys' Own Annual and the Girls' Own Annual, two very seasonable books, forwarded by Mr. Madddock, are likely to become great favourites with young people. They are profusely illustrated, and contain about 800 pages of matter, treating on almost every variety of subject interesting to boys and girls. The books are full of pleasant reading and instruction regarding amusements, games, and accomplishments. The staff of contributors to the annuals is large, and the list of artists contains the names of some first-class men.

The season for Christmas and New Year cards is once more approaching, and the windows of some of the principal stationers in the city contain very elegant specimens. The display of cards and satchets at several establishments is very attractive.

There is a very strong impression among some experts in the matter (says the Sydney Mail) that the present fine breeding of racers is deteriorating that class of horses. It will be remembered that the Duke of Westminster's Bend d'Or wrested the Derby from Robert the Devil on the post, and it was generally believed that another few yards would have seen his defeat. The complete collapse afterwards of the Duke's horse at Doncaster led at once to a discussion on the stamina of the English racehorse. Mr. Wilfred Blunt, an Arabian traveller, has been urging the stewards of the Jockey Club to restore the weight-for-age races for horses exclusively of Arabian blood. While ridiculing the idea of Admiral Rous, that a second-class English thoroughbred could give five stone to the best Arabian, and beat him one mile or twenty, he confesses "that next to the Arabian the English is the finest bred horse in the world, and of all now the fastest." Mr. Blunt asserts that the speed comes from the Arab blood, and he says, with anything like the same process of selection, the purebred Arabian would beat the impure. For two centuries Newmarket has been breeding a "galloping machine;" but the organism has now become so delicate as to be upset by the slightest cause. As a sire he considers the constitution of the English racehorse unsatisfactory; in spite of his size, his back and loins are weak for a weight-carrier, his action wants finish, his shape is far from perfect, and his temper uncertain. The thoroughbred Arab is in nine cases out of ten sounder in wind and limb, his strength is one-third again as strong as any horse of his size, his beauty universally conceded, and his temper admirable. As a racehorse, a sire for hunters, but particularly as a breeder of carriage stock, Mr. Blunt recommends the Arab. The horse he would advise for introduction for breeding purposes is the thoroughbred Anazeh Kebilan. The Times also refers to the subject of overtraining and light breeding, and says: "Much may be due to the continuous process of perfecting; the theoretical object of English horse-racing, the improvement of English horseflesh in general, will be lost sight of if the racehorse becomes so delicate as to be like the outrigger boat, useless for any purposes but one, and liable to all sorts of disarrangements." The Australian-bred racehorse, whether from climatic or other influences, is more delicately bred than are those in England, and is more suitable no doubt to our lighter turf and rarer atmosphere; but is it not worth consideration whether it is wise to go on breeding light two and three year olds, who "come like shadows, and so depart," or whether a lasting weight-carrier is not, after all, the best horse for sport as well as work?

An immigrant in New Zealand has written to the Cape Times inquiring whether it would be advisable for himself and others similarly situated to transfer themselves to the Cape Colony. The Times in reply says, in substance, "No. Not unless you have capital," and further remarks: "The rates of wages are fairly high, and in many towns steady tradesmen would be certain of a good living; but there is no agency at the ports to assist immigrants in search of employment, or to collect information to guide their plans. The hours of labour are light, rather too much so. In agriculture white labour is in slight demand; and men with a little money would have a chance of doing well in market-gardening and in dairy-farming near our towns. At the diamond mines we should say that there are as many white men as the demand justifies; perhaps more. There is no extensive system of public works; in fact, the lengthening of the Table Bay breakwater is being proceeded with just in time to employ some of the discharged railway hands, and as far as our present knowledge goes, we should be sorry to encourage immigrants who have been disappointed in New Zealand to try their fortune in the Cape Colony, except in small numbers, and with some little stock of money. Our London agency should keep us supplied with as much European labour as we can conveniently absorb, and with a supply of agriculturists fully co-extensive with the power of the Government to find land for them. The country wants immigration, but, to be of any value, the movement must be organized, and it would be a sad business if the New Zealand fiasco were repeated here."

The Maryborough Advertiser says that not 100 miles from Majorca a rather lively episode occurred in a State school. One of the scholars, a little industrial school child, had called the master's son "a spy." The domine, being made aware of the bestowal of this epithet upon his hope and heir, proceeded to inflict condign punishment upon the offender. During his efforts to chastise the boy, the delinquent laid hold of his master's watch-chain, and dashed the watch to the ground. The preceptor, being then considerably exasperated, knocked the boy's head against the wall. The head female teacher then remonstrated with the irate gentleman on the ground that the boy was being treated rather too harshly, but was answered in a very discourteous manner, whereupon the whole of the children in the school rose from their seats and left the building en masse.

A curious point came before the Supreme Court of Queensland, in Chambers, on Tuesday last (reported in the Courier). In the matter of Tutty v. Tutty, Mr. Swanwick moved to make absolute an order nisi, granted for a prohibition against Philip Pinnock, police magistrate, Courtenay Spry, J.P., and sergeant Doyle, to restrain them from taking further proceedings under an order for maintenance made by the said justices, requiring the defendant to contribute certain sums of money towards his wife's support. Mr. Power appeared to show cause. It appeared that some time ago the Brisbane Bench ordered Tutty, the defendant, to pay to sergeant Doyle certain sums periodically for his wife's support. Subsequently Tutty instituted proceedings for a divorce, and obtained a decree nisi for a dissolution of his marriage, to be made absolute in six months. He paid the usual instalments to Doyle up to the date of the decree nisi; but as he did not do so afterwards proceedings were again taken against him, and an order was made by the Bench for him to continue the payments. It was against this order that Tutty now appealed to the Chief Justice, who, after hearing argument, sustained the appeal by making the order for prohibition absolute, as prayed. His Honor, in giving his decision, said the magistrates should stay their hands when it was judicially proved to them that a matter was under investigation by a higher Court, and in this case they had such notice. He could not make an order for costs, as it was a case of first impression; but in any other case of the kind the justices might render themselves liable for costs.

A most impudent attempt to extort money from a lady by means of a threatening letter, in which she was accused of impropriety, was brought to light in Melbourne on Friday last. A rather coarse-looking man, named George Griffiths, described as a farmer, 30 years of age, and a native of Tasmania, was placed in the dock at the City Police Court, charged with sending a communication of a threatening nature to the wife of a clergyman, named Attenborough, residing in King-street. The circumstances, as given by the Melbourne Daily Telegraph, are briefly that Mrs. Attenborough received, on the 13th of last month, a letter signed "C. D. E.," in which she was informed that if she did not send the sum of £2 to the General Post Office, addressed to "C. D. E.," certain information affecting her moral character, which the writer possessed, would be divulged to her friends. Mrs. Attenborough, upon receipt of the letter, placed it in the hands of the detectives, and detective Lomax, who is attached to the Post Office Department, instructed Mrs. Attenborough to write a reply enclosing two notes, and this was registered and posted by the detective on Thursday, and arrangements made for the capture of whoever should call for it. On Thursday afternoon a man called at the delivery window, and inquired if there was anything for "C. D. E.," and was informed there was not. He called again yesterday morning, and the registered letter was handed to him, and, having signed for it, he was in the act of opening it, when he was arrested by detectives Lomax and Rett. He then said the letter was not for him, and showed the detective an order to receive letters signed "C. D. Edwards" (corresponding with the initials "C. D. E."). He was then locked up, and the detectives proceeded to where he lived and instituted a search, with the result that various papers were found bearing writing similar to that contained in the threatening letter. The offence he is charged with is punishable with 14 years' imprisonment.

During the inquiry which was held in the Bathurst gaol on Monday, November 1, touching the cause of death of a vagrant confinee, one of the wardens (says the Times) stated that when administering wine to the deceased during his sickness in the cell the man said that he had not a penny and not a friend in the world, and looking at the wine said, "Ah, I have spent enough on this stuff to build many gaols like this. I have spent thousands on thousands in drink in my time." The unfortunate man was a miner, and during what he called his "lucky" days he had made as much as from £25 to £30 per day in nuggets, all of which, with much more, he had sunk in a "wet shaft"—otherwise, his stomach—dying at last in want among felons.

The following is the order of musical service at St. Andrew's Cathedral, for 25th Sunday after Trinity:—Magnificat, Arnold in A; Nunc Dimittis, Arnold in A; Anthem, Stand up and bless the Lord, Sir John Goss.

The first of the series will take place on Monday, November 15, at 8 p.m., near to Captain Cook's statue, when the following programme will be submitted under the leadership of Mr. W. H. Smith, bandmaster:—March, "Standard Bearer," E. Newton; "Quadrille," H.M.S. Pinafore, C. Godfrey (arranged by W. H. Smith); Polka Mazurka, "La Traviata," C. D'Albert; Waltz, "Casino Tanze," Gung'l; March, "Marmion," arranged by R. Smith; Quadrille, "Museum;" Polka, "Holiday," E. C. F. Hare; Galop, "The Rink," C. D'Albert, arranged by W. H. Smith; God Save the Queen.

A POLICE MAGISTRATE SHOT AT DUBBO.

[By Telegraph.]

(from our own correspondent.)

DUBBO, Friday.

A terrible crime was committed here last night about half-past 9 o'clock. A woman, named Wilkie, deliberately shot at and wounded Mr. John Oxley Norton, Police Magistrate. It seems that the woman, who resides at M'Cawley's hotel, Wingewarra-street, had some words with Mr. Norton, and she went into her room, took up a Derringer pistol, and shot him through the temple; but, as there is no point of exit, it is believed that the bullet is still in the skull. Drs. Tibbits and Tennant are in attendance on Mr. Norton, but they say that there is no hope of his recovery. He is now paralyzed, and though not insensible cannot speak. All sorts of reports are current. It is said the crime was the result of jealousy. On people going into the room after the report of the shot was heard, Mrs. Wilkie impassionedly said—"I shot him." She confessed to the doctor that she had done so, and handed him the pistol. She is now in the lockup. The occurrence took place just after Sir P. A. Jennings's election meeting had closed. Mr. Norton had been at the meeting, and had left just previous to the conclusion. When the news of the event reached the people as they were leaving the Masonic Hall it caused the greatest excitement, and for hours hundreds were congregated outside the hotel where the shooting took place. A general feeling of regret is expressed at Mr. Norton's sad fate.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

ADELAIDE, Friday.

At the annual meeting of the shareholders of the Adelaide and Glenelg Railway Company, a somewhat acrimonious debate took place. Mr. Townsend, chairman of the directorate, implied that if the directors had kept pace with the times they would not have the opposition of the Holdfast Bay line. He also said the offices of the company were grossly mismanaged at one time. Mr. Sabine, in replying, said that although it had been shown there had been a loss of £600 during the past year, still the other company was losing more than that. He was certain that two lines would not pay for years to come. Mr. Graves suggested that the best way to get over the difficulty was for the two companies to amalgamate.

The report as to the crops in the north is very unsatisfactory and disheartening. The greatest sufferers will be the farmers in West Flinders range, from Red Hill to Winningoure. On the whole there is little hope that the amount per acre will be in excess of the average of the last three years.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

VICTORIA V. SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, FRIDAY.

A cricket match—Victoria v. South Australia—was played to-day on the East Melbourne ground. The attendance was very moderate, not more than a few hundreds. The weather was fine. The Victorians went first to the wickets, and at 6 o'clock, when the stumps were drawn, had only six wickets down for 304 runs. Baker made 83, D. Campbell 55, Horan 97, and not out. The Victorians played splendidly, and defied all the bowling. The Adelaide team fielded well, four out of six having been caught; but their bowling was nothing in particular. The following is the score:—

Elliott, c Goodfellow, b Hide	6
Tobin, b King	15
Horan, not out	97
Coulthard, c Richards, b Giffin	31
Campbell, c and b W. Slight	55
Baker, c Richards, b Gooden	83
Pateman, b Hullough	4
Sundries	14
Total	304

Very little interest is attached to the match, and it is considered that the South Australians are over-weighted.

PARRAMATTA JOCKEY CLUB RACES.

The Parramatta Jockey Club Races, postponed from Prince of Wales' Birthday, will be continued to-day. Special trains will leave Sydney for Parramatta at 10.50 a.m., 11.30 a.m., 1.20 p.m., and 1.40 p.m., returning as required after the races are over.

CRICKET.

The practice of candidates for selection in the Intercolonial Match was continued yesterday afternoon, on the Association Ground, Moore Park, 11 out of the 16 putting in an appearance. The batting (for there was little attempt at anything else) was on the whole very good, and Jones, A. Gregory, Hiddleston, C. Bannerman, and Sheridan were in excellent form. The match which is to commence this afternoon between 11 chosen from the intercolonial 16 and 15 players, the majority of whom are colts, ought to attract a large attendance on the Association Ground, as the contest is likely to prove interesting. Play is advertised to commence at 2 o'clock, and it is to be hoped that the members of the respective teams will make an effort to be punctual.

AQUATIC NOTES.

William Trickett, the brother of the champion sculler, and Michael Rush, well known as a sculling celebrity, contest a match this afternoon, over the champion course, for £200 a side. The scullers only a few weeks since met in a match at the Rocky Mouth Regatta, and Rush won; but as Trickett was fouled, the event was unsatisfactory to his backers—hence the present match. Trickett has been the favourite for some time past; but judges are sanguine that Rush will win. Trickett did a private time trial over the course on Wednesday, so that his friends might have an opportunity of judging of his powers. Yesterday evening was appointed for the putting in the final deposit towards the stakes, and this was duly done at Punch's Hotel, where there was a large gathering of persons who take an interest in professional racing, but very little business was done in the way of betting; six to four on Trickett appeared to be about the closing rate.

A private match between the yachts Guinevere and Harpy, over a course 10 miles outside Sydney Heads, takes place to-day. The race will start at 11 a.m. from Farm Cove.

LAYCOCK'S VICTORIES.

The Brisbane Courier, which journal has always "gone for" Hanlan, throws out a peculiar hint as to Laycock's easy victories. We give our contemporary's remarks on account of his suggestion that a probable "ring" has been formed, which, however, we do not for a moment deem at all likely. The Courier says:—"Laycock's career of victory goes on unbroken, and his contest with Hawdon on the Tyne—to come off on Saturday—seems to be a perfectly foregone conclusion for Laycock, as Hawdon is simply one of those main strength 'deep diggers' that get on well enough sometimes in heavy boats, but who have no conception of that elegant, swift, 'classical' sweep of the sculls which, while apparently brushing only the surface of the water, is so telling in pace. Laycock's succession of wins appears almost too good to be true, and will give rise in some minds to a suspicion that a grand coup in the other direction is intended hereafter to come off. There is a fixed belief in some quarters that no Australian sculler has yet mastered the full mystery of the sliding seat, or realized the extent to which the skilful adaptation of mechanical contrivance has supplemented and set aside the old need for brute strength and endurance. The money will, however, be heavily 'on' for the Trickett and Hanlan race on the 15th, and we shall then all of us doubtless be fully enlightened as to which thimble the pea is really under."

PROPOSED BRIDGE BETWEEN THE GLEBE AND BALMAIN.

A public meeting was held last night at the Glebe Town-hall, St. John's Road, convened by Mr. Thomas J. Dunn, the Mayor of the Glebe, in pursuance of a requisition from a number of ratepayers and residents in that borough, in order to obtain an expression of public opinion as to the advisableness of petitioning the Government to build a dam or bridge across Johnston's Bay from Glebe Point to Balmain. The Mayor occupied the chair, and introduced the subject for consideration of which the meeting had been called. The first resolution,—"That it is advisable in the interest and welfare of the inhabitants of the Glebe and Balmain and the surrounding districts that a bridge be erected across Johnston's Bay, from Glebe Point to Balmain"—was moved by Alderman Turner, who said that, in his opinion, a bridge on the site proposed would be of the utmost convenience to at least 9000 persons resident at the Glebe, and probably to not fewer than 13,000 inhabitants in the borough of Balmain, enhancing very considerably the value of property on both sides of the water, and affording means of communication by which the beautiful districts of Callan Park, Iron Cove, Hunter's Hill, Field of Mars, Kissing Point, and other places as far as Parramatta, would become better known and more easily accessible, and, by consequence, more frequently visited by residents in Sydney generally as well as those of Glebe and Balmain. Alderman Graham seconded the motion; which was also spoken to by Sir G. Wigram Allen, who said that a good deal of influence had been brought to bear upon the question of a bridge uniting the Glebe with the Balmain borough. For years past his friends on the Balmain side had been urging him to move in the matter, while, on the contrary, the Glebe Municipal Council was adverse to the proposition, believing that the increased traffic would cut up their streets to an extent which would far outweigh any benefit derivable therefrom; so that he was in a strait between the two, for which cause he had abstained from taking any part in the suggestion or promotion of the scheme, as well as for the reason that, having property on both sides, he might be suspected of taking up the question with a view to his private interests. These views he expressed at Balmain many years ago, but as now the Glebe borough is favourable to the project, it will have his support. Aldermen Walker, Thornley, Lucas, and other gentlemen spoke in favour of the motion; which, on being put by the chairman, was carried by acclamation. It was further resolved, that the Mayor and aldermen of the Glebe municipality should form themselves into a deputation, to confer with the Mayor and aldermen of Balmain, and to obtain their co-operation; and a vote of thanks to the chairman closed the meeting.

FAST TIME BY RAIL.—Fast trains are more and more plentiful now, and a mile a minute on American railways is no longer matter for special wonder. The New York, New Haven, and Hartford railroad's evening express makes several miles below this city every night at the rate of 64 miles an hour. One train on the Pittsburg and Fort Wayne road recently ran 65 miles in 71 minutes, and another ran 130 miles in 120 minutes, or 65½ miles in an hour, right along, if the figures are correct. A special train on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western road, with the president of the company on board, ran 80 miles in 80 minutes. It is worth noticing that the very fastest trains run as specials and carry officers on the roads, who would be very likely to look out for their own safety, and there is reason to believe that by-and-by the schedule time of our regular trains will be even better than what officials extras make now on special occasions.—Hartford (Conn.) Courant.

The wines of the Caucasus, which till recently were confined to their native valleys owing to the lack of means of communication, have of late years become widely known in Russia. An article by a Russian chemist in the Herold of St. Petersburg informs us that the red Caucasian wines are now one of the cheapest and most popular beverages to be had in all the chief Russian towns. The complete list of the wines is a long one, and among them there are some excellent qualities. The Herold, in fact, declares that some of the red wines are equal to the best Bordeaux. The writer, however, does not propose to discuss these exceptional brands, but gives the result of a chemical analysis of the cheapest and commonest kinds. The "black Caucasian wine" (sold at 40 kopecks, or 1s. 2d., the bottle) is in taste and appearance comparable to the common Dalmatian wine, the "vino vero di Spalato." It is excessively dark in colour, "very astringent," and "pretty sour." It contains 4·5 per cent. of alcohol. The red Kacheti wine (sold at 60 kopecks, or 1s. 8d., the bottle) is less dark than the above, less astringent, and only "pleasantly sour." It is to be compared to the common wines of northern Italy, and contains 6·1 per cent. of alcohol. Neither wine contains any saccharine matter, and the proportion of alcohol contained is only half what exists in the commonest Hungarian, Austrian, and Rhine wines. In view of this latter fact the writer considers the price of the Caucasian wines to be too high; but he believes that, with greater care and knowledge applied to the manufacture of the wine, its good qualities might be very greatly increased, and its bad ones proportionally diminished.

THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH OF EASTERN AUSTRALIA.

The Synod of the Presbyterian Church of Eastern Australia commenced its annual meeting on Tuesday, the 2nd instant, at 7.30 p.m., in St. George's Church, Castlereagh-street, Sydney. The Rev. W. S. Donald, the retiring Moderator, conducted Divine worship, and preached a suitable discourse from Psalm 122, verse 6. Immediately thereafter the Synod was constituted with prayer. The roll of Synod was made up as follows:—Sydney: Rev. G. Sutherland; Mr. A. W. T. Gregg, elder. East Maitland and Raymond Terrace: Rev. J. S. M'Pherson; Mr. S. Porter and Mr. M'Queen, elders. Aberdeen and Singleton: Rev. J. A. Nichol. Clarence Town and Dungog: Rev. W. S. Donald. Manning River: Rev. S. P. Stewart; Mr. J. Murray, elder. Hastings and Macleay: Rev. J. Davis; Mr. A. Bain, elder. Grafton: Rev. I. Mackay; Mr. F. Macintyre, elder. Brushgrove: Rev. W. Grant. Rocky Mouth: Rev. D. M'Innes; Mr. D. Shearer, elder. Richmond River: Rev. H. Livingstone; Mr. H. Mackenzie, elder. Ministers without charges: Rev. D. K. M'Intyre and Rev. P. Macpherson.

BILLS, OVERTURES, AND RECORDS.

Committees on bills and overtures and anent the general business of the Court, and also for examining the records of presbyteries, were appointed, and instructed from time to time to report to the Court.

THE MODERATOR'S SERMON.

The thanks of the Synod were cordially and unanimously accorded to the retiring Moderator for the efficient and impartial manner in which he performed the duties of his office, and also for the appropriate sermon preached by him.

The Rev. J. S. M'Pherson was elected Moderator for the next twelve months.

THE STATE OF RELIGION AND MORALS.

The Synod devoted one whole sederunt to devotional exercises and the hearing of reports anent the state of religion and morals within its bounds and jurisdiction. Interesting reports were given in on this subject relative to individuals and congregations.

SABBATH-SCHOOLS.

The Rev. J. Davis gave in a carefully prepared report on Sabbath-schools in connection with the Church in various parts of the colony. New schools had been added in some cases, and instances were given of many families belonging to congregations who carefully trained up their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

CHURCH EXTENSION.

The report on Church extension was read by its convener, the Rev. G. Sutherland. It gave an account of the labours of catechists, who were acting as home missionaries, and further of various openings that presented themselves for evangelistic efforts.

WIDOWS AND ORPHANS' FUND.

The Rev. J. S. M'Pherson laid on the table and read the report anent the fund for the support of the widows and orphans of ministers. Some recommendations made by the committee were ordered to be sent down to presbyteries to receive their sanction or otherwise.

FOREIGN MISSIONS.

The report on Foreign Missions was given in by the Rev. Isaac Mackay. It gave an interesting account of the missionary work going on at Amoy, Swatow, and Formosa, at each of which native evangelists were employed by this Church. It also detailed the information received by the convener from the correspondence opened by him with the convener of the committee for the conversion of the Jews in connection with the Free Church of Scotland, and further with the Board of Foreign Missions of the Irish Presbyterian Church. The Synod instructed the convener to remit a donation of £50 to the Jewish Mission of the Free Church of Scotland, and also a donation of £50 to the India Mission of the Presbyterian Church of Ireland, in addition to the sums already paid for the maintenance of four missionaries.

FINANCES.

The report on finances showed these to be in a healthy condition. Two additional congregations were in the course of the year put on the Sustentation Fund. An interesting discussion took place anent the best methods of increasing the funds of the sustentation, and at the same time regulating the distribution of these.

AGENT OF THE CHURCH.

The Rev. G. Sutherland, agent of the Church, gave in a report of what had been done during the past year in that department relative to sites granted for churches and manses.

INCORPORATION ACT.

An Act of Incorporation for the Church, drawn up by a lawyer was read, clause by clause, and ordered to be sent down to presbyteries and sessions for their consideration; and thereafter to be returned to a special committee, and when fully matured to be sent to the Legislature and passed into law.

ANNUAL COLLECTIONS.

The Synod ordered the various congregations within its bounds to make four special collections during the next year—viz., for church extension on two different occasions, for the Professorial Fund, for the Widows and Orphans' Fund, and for the Synod Fund.

TRAINING OF STUDENTS

Professor Sutherland reported anent the training given by him in Psychology, Church History, and Theology to the students placed under his charge. The Rev. P. M'Pherson also reported as to the course of instruction in Latin, Greek, and Hebrew which he imparted to the students who had been attending his classes during the year. The professors were cordially thanked for their labours and diligence.

CORRESPONDENCE WITH SISTER CHURCHES.

The Rev. G. Sutherland read the correspondence which passed between this Church and the Free Church of South Australia, and also a letter of fraternal greeting sent to the clerk of Synod from the clerk of Synod of the Presbyterian Church of England, who accompanied his letter with a copy of the blue-book of that body, and asked for a similar favour on the part of this Synod. One of the letters to the Free Church of Victoria had been miscarried, so that the fraternal greetings of that Church were not received. The Synod, however, instructed its correspondent to reopen correspondence during the present year, with the Free Church of Victoria.

DEPUTIES.

The Rev. W. Grant was appointed a deputy to the Richmond, Rev. G. Sutherland to the Clarence, Rev. H. Livingstone to the Bellinger, Macleay, Hastings, Manning, and Barrington; Rev. J. Davis to the Hunter, and Rev. S. P. Stewart to Parkes, Molong, &c.

STATISTICS.

There was laid on the table a carefully drawn up digest of statistics anent the various congregations, churches, Sabbath-schools, libraries, trustees, sites, &c., within the bounds of the Synod. A map, showing the situation of the localities referred to in the digest, accompanied these statistics, and helps materially to explain the places referred to.

CLOSING ADDRESS.

The Moderator delivered a closing address, briefly reviewing the work which had engaged the members of Synod during the session. Thereafter he engaged in praise and prayer, and adjourned the Synod to meet at St. George's Church, Sydney, on the first Tuesday of November, 1881, at 7.30 p.m., and closed the proceedings with the benediction.

THE CHINESE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Surely, we have advocates enough in Mr. Hingston and Mr. Bradley pleading the Chinaman's cause without adding Mr. Granville Sharp, of Hongkong, to the list?

Mr. Hingston we can all understand, for his book was intended to sell, irrespective of its merit as to its truthful conclusions; for I will only call attention to one or two of his remarks to shew how unreliable that gentleman is. When going into ecstasies over the benefits the Chinese race would confer on Australia if the Chinaman were freely admitted, he says, in effect, the Chinaman would acclimatise the oyster in the waters of Hobson's Bay, Victoria, and produce an article of commerce where now all lies waste and unproductive. Now, the beds of Hobson's Bay were literally coated with hundreds of tons of that living edible years before Mr. Hingston visited Australia; shipload after shipload has been set there, every appliance known in modern times adopted, and thousands of pounds spent in trying to acclimatise the oyster in those waters by better men than Chinamen, and all without success. The reason has been discovered in the existence of numerous animalculæ, the oyster's most bitter enemy, which destroy the spat as soon as it is produced. If the Chinaman can annihilate this native enemy in the waters of Port Phillip, or do what British enterprise, capital, and industry cannot do, then introduce him; but never under false pretences, that he may be turned loose to compete in our labour market with the British workman and his wife. Mr. Bradley also can be understood pleading the Chinaman's cause at the bar of our Legislative Council, and trying to make black white, or, in other words, trying to prove that the Celestial was really what the word implies in our language, and not the terror and the enemy of our labourer and mechanic.

But what is Mr. Granville Sharp's object in his fulsome praise of the Chinamen, and of their wives? Is this gentleman preparing the minds of the New South Welshmen and of the Queenslanders for the wholesale importation of John Chinaman to these colonies? We must remember that there is at this present time an embryo measure before the Queensland Parliament for constructing a railway across this island continent; also, that the scheme was projected in England, and that when under discussion in London hints were given that their profits were sure, because tens of thousands of Chinamen would be imported to do the work.

Mr. Hingston said that Chinamen were the destined labourers of the world; but until our own British labourers and mechanics are all provided for I for one will never consent to the Chinaman having a share of the profits of our own people's great inheritance—the freehold lands of Australia. Let those who want cheap labour go to the countries where that commodity abounds. Now, as the elections are on us, and I have little time, I cannot possibly go farther with this letter at present, but will leave the subject for the people to ponder over.

I am, Sir, R. C. LUSCOMBE.

GOVERNMENT ASTRONOMER

DEPUTATIONS.

ANNANDALE TOLLBAR.

A deputation, consisting of Mr. P. Lucas (Mayor of Camperdown), Mr. J. T. Fraser (Mayor of Leichhardt), and Aldermen C. Hearn and W. Pritchard, waited upon the Minister for Public Works yesterday, for the purpose of urging upon the Government the desirableness of removing the Annandale tollbar from its present site to some spot beyond Petersham. It was urged by the deputation that the regular traffic was driven off the road along the streets of the boroughs represented, and that the councils were put to additional expense in keeping them in repair. In reply, Mr. Lackey said that about 12 months ago a similar application had been made, and upon reference to the papers he found that the tollbar in question had already been removed several times. He believed that in a short time tollbars would be done away with altogether, and the roads placed in the hands of the various municipal councils; and under these circumstances he did not think he could take any steps in the present case. The Government had been put to great expense in the maintenance of the roads of the colony, and the receipts from tolls were trifling in comparison. In a short time they would increase municipal endowment, and for that and the other reasons he could not accede to their request.

MOSS VALE.

Messrs. H. Beit, H. Throsby, G. Bell, and S. Kater waited upon the Minister for Works yesterday, to ask the Government for a railway platform at Meryla crossing, near Moss Vale. Mr. Beit presented a petition from residents of the neighbourhood, stating that the site of the proposed platform was some four miles from Moss Vale station, and in the centre of a splendid agricultural country. Mr. Lackey said that the petition would have to go through the usual form, and be reported upon by the Engineer for Existing Lines. He would have it sent into the proper branch of the department, reported upon, and the result communicated as early as possible. He mentioned that the large number of platforms erected on the Western line had rendered it necessary for the department to run a mail train which did not stop at the platforms, in addition to the ordinary trains; and on that account they now weighed well the claims for the establishment of additional platforms.

MITTAGONG AND BOWRAL.

Messrs. P. L. C. Shepherd and William Dean waited upon the Minister for Works yesterday, and presented a memorial asking for the establishment of a railway platform between Mittagong and Bowral, the site being about a mile and a-quarter from the former station. Mr. Lackey said that he had already received a similar application for a platform on the same land. They had great difficulty in resisting these applications for additional platforms in various places; but they had found them to be of great inconvenience on the Western line, where they had been compelled to run independent trains. They were, therefore, more cautious in what they did on the Southern line. The matter, however, would have the usual attention, and the memorial would be handed to the Engineer for Existing Lines for his report thereon. While the Government were anxious to give all the facilities they possibly could, they were at the same time under the necessity of seeing that the through traffic between Sydney and the interior was not interfered with.

FISHMONGERS AND GREENGROCERS.

A deputation introduced by Alderman S. E. Lees, and consisting of Messrs. J. Chant, W. Giles, C. Deacon, J. Hazlewood, G. Hunt, J. H. Dunn, F. Hardy, B. Smith, and J. C. Vere, representing the Grocers' and Fishmongers' Union, waited upon the Colonial Secretary at his office yesterday, to represent to the Government certain grievances they labour under through the oppressive action of certain by-laws of the Corporation of Sydney, which were approved of by the Government, and gazetted on the 19th May last. The speakers were Messrs. Hunt, Vere, Dunn, and Hardy.

The grievances of the deputation as stated by them, and as embodied in a written statement which they handed to the Colonial Secretary, were to the following effect:—That although they were citizens of the city of Sydney, and paid rates to the Corporation the same as other tradesmen, they were subject to an especial tax under the 216th by-law, which required them to pay 4s. per week, or £10 per year for every cart; 2s. 6d. per week, or £6 10s per year for every barrow; and 1s per week, or £2 12s per year for every basket. At the same time the baskets carried by Chinamen were not specified in the by-laws at all, and were untaxed. The fishermen had an especial grievance; they had to pay 10 per cent. on all the fish they sold, while in all other places 5 per cent. was the highest charge; and they had also to pay for the cartage of the fish from the wharf to the market, a distance of only some 200 yards. These charges came so heavy upon the fishermen that they were unable to sell the fish so cheaply as might be done, and poor people were thus prevented from using fish as food. Similar charges to those imposed by the by-laws were included in a bill introduced into the Assembly in 1873 by Mr. Driver, but Mr. Stewart, Mr. Forster, and Mr. Tunks saw how oppressively the charges would work, and opposed them so successfully that the clause was thrown out, and the bill was subsequently abandoned. The tradesmen whom the deputation represented had endeavoured to induce the City Council to relax the stringency of the by-laws, but without effect; they had, therefore, formed themselves into a Union, and they requested the Government to withdraw their approval of the by-law in question, and in the next Parliament to introduce a bill to repeal the power of the Corporation to make such charges. In reply to a query from Sir Henry Parkes they stated that the reason they did not object to the by-law before the approval of the Executive was given to it, was that the by-law was published in the Gazette only, and they were not aware of its existence until they found themselves called upon to pay the tax.

SIR HENRY PARKES said they had put their case before him with remarkable clearness, and he felt much interest in it. He readily admitted that they performed functions of the greatest convenience to all ranks of society, and he had no doubt they conducted their business in as respectable a manner as any other class of citizens. It seemed to him that the Corporation—if he might use the expression—in their case had laid it on rather thick, and it seemed a very heavy license they were called upon to pay. He regretted that his attention had not been called to the matter at the time the by-laws were before the Government; but all he could do now—and all they could expect him to do now, was to promise them that he would have the matter thoroughly inquired into.

LAY READERS' ASSOCIATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Your report of the Bishop's address credits the parish of Paddington with a subscription of £5, through Dr. Barry. This was a mistake—that was my private subscription. The error, however, may not be unfruitful as a reminder to the parishioners, who duly appreciate the value of the association.

EMIGRATION TO NEW ZEALAND.—A number of ladies and gentlemen met on board the Lady Jocelyn, lying in the East India Docks, on September 23, for the purpose of inspecting the accommodation providing for the large party of emigrants who are about to sail for Tauranga, in the province of Auckland, New Zealand. The Lady Jocelyn will sail on Monday next, carrying 90 first-class, 80 second-class, and 200 third-class passengers. She is the first vessel which has been despatched to that part of New Zealand, but two others have been previously sent out with emigrants under the auspices of Mr. G. Vesey Stewart. It is intended shortly to despatch a fourth party in the Himalaya. The emigrants sent out consists of capitalists, large and small farmers, and employés intended to be engaged in farming and other industrial undertakings. Mr. Stewart said that those whom he would recommend to proceed to New Zealand were country gentlemen, retired military and naval officers, and Civil servants who had £1000 or £2000 of capital, or an income of £200 or £300 a year; those whom he would advise not to go were clerks, drapers' assistants, or broken-down tradesmen. Sir Julius Vogel, in responding to the toast of his health, referred to the benefits which were likely to follow the system of sending out capital and labour together, and expressed his belief that there is in New Zealand an unrivalled field for small capitalists who are unable to make a living in this country.—Pall Mall Gazette.

COMMERCIAL.

STATION PRODUCE REPORT.

The produce sales held yesterday by Messrs. Mort and Co.; Harrison, Jones, and Devlin; Maiden, Hill, and Clark; F. L. Barker, J. Bridge, and Brunker and Wolfe were well attended, and the competition fairly brisk for most descriptions.

TALLOW.—The market was decidedly firmer. For shipment buyers bought more freely than at the last sales, and the presence of some fresh purchasers was noted. The quantity catalogued was 525 casks, of which 410 were disposed of. Best beef was sold at from £25 to £27 7s. 6d.; one lot from Queensland, sold by Messrs. Maiden, Hill, and Clark, bringing the latter figure. Best mutton brought from £27 to £28; light station, £21 to £24. Altogether 525 casks were offered, and 410 sold.

HIDES.—The supply forward was 5343, of which 4342 were sold. The market yesterday was lower by from ¼d. to ½d. per lb., in consequence of the news of a reduction in the English market. Buyers for shipment were therefore only disposed to operate at lower rates. One lot of 77 hides brought 5d., but they were of exceptional quality, and the quotations ruling may be given as follows: Extra heavies, from 3½d. to 4½d.; medium, 3½d. to 4¼d.; light and dry, to 5d. Horse hides are quoted at from 6s. to 7s. 6d. for large sizes; and 3s. to 5s. 6d., for small to medium. Of kangaroo skins there was a good supply, and large sizes are worth from 20s. to 30s. per dozen; medium, 10s. to 18s.; and small, 6s. to 9s.

HAIR.—The market was firmer at yesterday's sales. Horse tail brought from 16d. to 18½d. per lb.; mane, 10d. to 12d., and mixed, 12d. to 15d.

HORNS.—The quotations ruling yesterday were about the same as last week. The large sold at from 20s. to 30s. per 100; and smaller descriptions from 10s. to 16s.

TOBACCO LEAF.—Last week's prices were maintained. Best brought from 8d. to 9d.; medium, 6d. to 8d.; and inferior, 3d. to 5d.

BEESWAX, &c.—Beeswax is quoted at 9½d. to 11d. per lb. Bone dust, £4 15s. to £5 per ton.

TIN.—Though the English market prices still rule at £90, buyers here are rather timid and the market unsettled. Tin ore rules about the same as last week.

CONTINENTAL GOSSIP.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT "STELLA.")

PARIS, SEPT. 10.

That marvellous dream in marble, the Cathedral of Milan, constitutes a rather pretty bone of contention just now. A company having succeeded in illuminating Vesuvius with the electric light, a rival company has been formed for illuminating, in the same manner, the wonderful exterior of the roof of the Milan Cathedral, with its army of statues, pinnacles, and traceries in stone. The company had successfully treated with the cathedral chapter for the erection of lifts to take visitors up to the roof, and having obtained this permission proceeded to develop the idea of the illuminating of the roof. To this the Chapter indignantly objected, sarcastically demanding whether the company would not like to set up buffets on the terraces of the roof, for the refreshment of the company brought up by the lifts, with the addition of a band of music, and masked balls for the Carnival? The public would like the company to illuminate, but the Chapter is firm in its refusal. The lifts are to be ready in time for the opening of the National Exhibition in the old Lombard capital; between this and then, the question of the illumination of the roof (which forms a splendid promenade) will be decided one way or the other.

The double mania of duelling and suicide is making many victims just now; the hot weather apparently heating the fancies of those who conceive themselves to be insulted, and melting away the courage of those who have to face vexation or misfortune. Duels and suicides have always been rife in France; the late Nestor Rouqueplan, who varied literary work with speculation, and was always striking out some new and plausible idea, took it into his head at one time to found what he called the "Suicide Club." Starting from the double proposition that a man had a right to kill himself if he chose, and that if a man wanted to kill himself, no one had any right to hinder him, he proposed to hire a convenient house, with a large garden, in a remote quarter of the town, and to furnish the same with every convenience for the quiet and effectual carrying out of suicidal intentions by the members of the club. Poisons, pistols, blunderbusses, poinards, stout cords safely attached to the branches of the trees in the garden, and a deep pond, with plenty of heavy stones for the use of those who preferred to drown their troubles, were to be provided at moderate cost. A notary, to draw up wills, was to be attached to the establishment; but no one possessed of the slightest medical knowledge was to be admitted within its precincts. The plan fell through for want of a capitalist, but Roqueplan always believed that a large fortune might have been made out of his "idea."

The great excitement of the moment, in this particular portion of the earth's surface, is the opening of the shooting season. The "permits" which allow one to stalk over the country with dog, gun, and game-bag, in all manner of toggery supposed to be the "right thing for shooting," and to risk the lives of peaceful promenaders from one end of France to the other, usually amount to some £5500 per annum in Paris and its dependencies; some idea may thence be formed of the terrible number of authorized shooters let loose over the country, and of the numerous accidents which result from such a state of things, especially in the vine districts, the sportsmen pursuing their prey among the vines, by which they are themselves hidden, and which hide from their view the luckless pedestrians who are liable to be shot down at any moment by an unseen gun. As a "hunting permit" costs 28 francs, and is only available for one season, poaching is general in all country regions. The fine for poaching, when the poacher is caught, is 150 francs; but as all the men and big boys poach, as a matter of course, the offence is winked at ninety-nine times in the hundred. Of the sum paid for a "permit," the municipality of each locality takes 10 francs for its own exchequer, the rest of the amount going into the coffers of the State.

The usual quizzing attendant on the general desire to figure as a successful shot has not been slow in following the "opening" of the "chasse," which event took place on Sunday last. One of these stories tells how hares are not absolutely necessary for the sportsman's success. "I had scoured the plain in vain," says a brilliant successor of Nimrod, "and was returning with my bag empty, when my dog, on the edge of a wood, grew uneasy. I saw the leaves rustling about twenty paces before me, and fired both barrels at a venture. A singular cry rose from the spot, there was a crash of branches, and then all was silent. I entered the wood, searched the spot, and found—you would never guess what—a dish of gudgeons. A hungry wolf had attacked an angler who was angling in the neighbouring stream; the angler had fled, abandoning the fish he had caught, which were in a net. The wolf, having missed the angler, fell on the net, which he was carrying away, with the fish in it, when my shot shattered his jaw and forced him to drop his booty as he made off to his den. I then took possession of his prize, returned home with it in triumph, and we had the gudgeons fried for our lunch. We all agreed that we had never eaten a better fry."

The leaves are dropping prematurely from the trees in and around this capital, a regrettable fact attributed to the weakening of the sylvan population of this region by the severe frost of last winter, as the youngest trees have suffered most. Instead of the horse-chestnuts of former days, the municipal gardeners of Paris have, of late years, introduced the linden, plane, acacia, elm, and ailanthus. Of these, the acacia and the ailanthus have thriven the best, the latter, especially, appearing to be destined to play a leading part in the tree-culture of this capital.

The trees of the forests round this city are naturally looking better than the trees within its borders. Fairs and festivals are rife in the outlying localities of easy reach from the metropolis. One of the most important of these—the celebrated "Fete des Loges," in the heart of the forest of St. Germain—has just begun, and is attracting its thousands of visitors as usual. This fair, which has preserved much of its original character, dates from the seventeenth century, when there existed a convent called "Les Loges," in the middle of the forest. The convent has disappeared, but the custom of making a pilgrimage to the spot has survived, in the form of a pleasure fete.

Another relic of the past—viz., the balcony from the window of the chamber occupied by Charlotte Corday, in the inn at the corner of two streets that are being pulled down to make room for the enlarged new post-office, when she came to Paris to assassinate the monster Marat, has just been purchased by the brilliant writer, M. Jules Claretie, who will have this curious relic built in to his hotel in the Mouceaux Quarter. Such interpolations are in high favour here. Victorien Sardou bought the great double row of sphinxes, from the model of the Egyptian Temple in the Garden of the International Exhibition of 1867, and set them up along the avenue that leads to his handsome and luxurious villa at Marly. The celebration of the golden wedding of the father and mother of the favourite playwright has passed off most successfully at the villa of the latter. Among the numerous and brilliant company were two old friends of the aged pair, who signed the registry of their marriage, fifty years ago, and who were, naturally, made much of by the hosts and by all present. After the religious service in the church, and a splendid lunch in the villa of the son, whose beautiful little children were brought in, to the admiration of the guests, at the dessert, a bal champetre was got up on the spur of the moment, under the trees of the park, which brought the charming celebration to a close.

That most eccentric of European sovereigns, King Louis II. of Bavaria, or rather the subjects of that dream-sick monarch, have just had a celebration of another character, being that of his birthday and of the seven hundredth anniversary of his dynasty, the Wittelsbachian. The King did not give himself the trouble to appear in his capital on the occasion; but he caused a letter to be published in his name, thanking his people for their congratulations, and asking them not to go to any great expense on his account. When this very peculiar specimen of reigning royalty was young, he would dress in the common hunting costume of the country, appear among the dancers on the village-green, make love to the village-beauties, and, after a day or two's sojourn among the people, disappear before they had found out who was the gay and charming huntsman who had been turning the heads of the rustic fair ones. He has several small chateaux among the mountains, from which he made these excursions. But since he has become absorbed in Wagner's poems, dreams, and music, he is rarely seen, and leaves the direction of public affairs entirely to his Ministers.

All the "Uppertendom" of this city is away bathing, boating, shooting, or travelling. But we have a constant stream of grandees from foreign parts, to say nothing of swarms of provincial tourists come up from the country to see the "lions" of the capital (an allusion which reminds me that Rosa Bonheur has just presented to the Garden of Plants a splendid lion and lioness that she has had at her place in the country for a couple of years, as a "study!"), and the shoals of foreigners, principally British, who have, as usual, taken advantage of the summer weather for travelling. No one, therefore, who saw the bustle and movement going on in the streets of Paris would suppose it to be the "desert" which "Uppertendom" regards it as being at this season of the year. We have a constant influx of Royal and Imperial visitors, foreign grandees, diplomats of every name and colour, and of visitors of less note, but in much larger numbers, who make many purchases, and are quite as useful to innkeepers and shopkeepers as the more distinguished minority of tourists. The Siamese Embassy has left us, but their place is filled by others.

The interview which has just taken place between "The King of France" and "The Dauphin," that is to say, between the Count de Chambord and the Count de Paris, at a French villa near Berne, has, of course, given rise to much comment here. The Count de Paris was accompanied by his eldest boy and girl—two charming children—and by his brother, the Duke de Chartres. The conversation naturally turned on the state of opinion in France, which can hardly be regarded by "Henri V." as favourable to the cause of "the Divine Right of Kings," which he considers as embodied in his person.

The numerous foreign visitors now at Naples have been deprived of the delights of sea-bathing for over a week, an enormous shark having shown himself at several points in the bay, and having hitherto defied the efforts that have been made to capture or kill him. So great is the annoyance caused by this forced interruption of the bathing and swimming so generally enjoyed in that lovely bay that renewed efforts were being made on a great scale at last advices to find the monster and get rid of him; but the fright caused by his presence will probably suffice to prevent a resumption of bathing, even should the hideous brute be found and done for.

Paris never offered such attractions to lovers of music not overburdened with cash as it does at this present writing. The promenade concerts given every evening in the garden of the Palais Royal attract large audiences; like the admirable performances of the military bands in the gardens of the Tuileries, Luxembourg, &c., they are gratis; only the occupants of the seats around the musicians having anything to pay. The Besselievre concerts, in the beautiful enclosure in the Champs Elysees, are exceedingly fine; and the entrance fee is so small as to bring them within reach of all but the very poor. The concerts frequently given at the Trocadero are also admirable, and there also the price of admission, somewhat higher for the best places, is very small for the rest of the immense music hall in which they are given.

The first idea of omnibuses, it appears, is due to Blaise Pascal, the precursory genius who first conceived the idea of using steam as a motive power, and whose statue has just been inaugurated, with much celebration, at Blois. When the present General Omnibus Company was formed in 1855, by the amalgamation of the previous lines, there were but 400 of these vehicles for the interior of Paris. There are now 625 of them, one-third being of the new large build, carrying 40 passengers; 239 tram-cars for Paris, and 57 for the suburbs; and 13 small supplementary omnibuses—in all, 934 vehicles, belonging to the General Company. To these are to be added 112 cars of the Southern Tramway Company, and 89 of the Northern: making a total of 1135 vehicles for the transport of the public on uniform conditions. The average number of passengers conveyed daily is 585,000 by the General Company, 78,000 by the tramways on the south side of the river, 62,000 by those on the northern side, making together a total of 726,000 passengers, or nearly a third of the population of Paris.

The newspapers of Paris are increasing in the same ratio. On January 11, 1867, Paris had 17 political daily newspapers, 6 being morning ones, and 11 appearing in the afternoon. On the 1st September, 1880, the number of Paris dailies was 61; 33 being morning ones, and 28 coming out late in the afternoon.

The "Orthodox Positivists" have had a fete, attended by leading brethren from all parts of the world, and winding up with a banquet, to commemorate the anniversary of the death of Auguste Comte, founder of their school. Telegrams of sympathy were received from various foreign countries. The Socialists have also had a grand gathering in Belgium, from all parts; delegates from many countries being present, and the numerous resolutions passed by the meeting being little calculated to increase the peace of mind of the admirers of things as they are.

The Jews have just celebrated their great fete of Rosch Hanab, or commencement of the New Year, preceding by a week the feast of the Great Pardon. It is curious, as marking the progress of inquiry and dissent, to note the existence of a "young Jewish" party demanding relaxations of the strict Mosaic and traditional ceremonial of the Jewish people; they want to be allowed to light fires, smoke, ride on horseback or in carriages and railways, on the days on which those actions are now forbidden; the last point being loudly demanded by Jews at their country seats, at watering places, &c., who, if they came to the nearest town to take part in the celebrations of their faith, are put to great expense and inconvenience by the existing regulations. It is computed that the Jews now number 7,000,000, of whom 5,000,000 reside in Europe. There are 49,000 Jews in France, and there must be a much greater number in Germany, for they number 45,000 in Berlin alone.

THE IRON TRADE OF GREAT BRITAIN.—The Pall Mall Gazette of September 17th says:—"The danger that threatens to bring dulness and perhaps stagnation on the iron trade is over-production. The steady growth in the stocks of pig-iron at Glasgow and Middlesbrough—a growth which made considerable progress even during the recent strike in Scotland—is clear proof that we are producing more iron than is needed to meet the requirements of our domestic consumption and foreign commerce combined. In Scotland the stock in the public stores is now close upon 500,000 tons. The production, though confined to thirty-nine furnaces, against 117 previous to the strike, is more than sufficient to meet all present demands. Now that the miners are returning to work on the masters' terms, the seventy-eight furnaces damped down will gradually be brought into blast again, in which case stocks will increase with unprecedented rapidity, unless a greatly improved consumptive demand arises. At Middlesbrough the stock approaches 100,000 tons, and production has reached the unparalleled rate of about 220,000 tons per month—a rate far in excess of anything witnessed during the very busy years 1872 and 1873. And while this accumulation of stocks and increased production are in full progress, the demand is undoubtedly on the decline. Shipments from Middlesbrough are now reduced to 15,000 tons per week, and at this season of the year no great improvement in the foreign demand can be expected. America, from whence the first impulse reached us last autumn, does not appear disposed to repeat her orders. Iron she will need, but during the last few months her own resources have been very largely increased. Production, in fact, in the United States has received even a greater development than in this country, and the opinion of some well qualified to give one is that the American ironmasters are now in a position to meet every probable home demand."

ROYAL ETIQUETTE AT MANDALAY.—In future King Theebaw may be seen by a British representative or any foreign mission in proper style without unbooting. A large building is to be erected within the palace enclosure, to be called the Foreign Office. The Pakhan Menghee will be Foreign Minister, with the Myotha as Secretary for Foreign Affairs. There will be an audience hall in the centre of the building. At the end of this room, a handsome dais will be raised, and on this the King will appear. The embassy will be seated on chairs with their shoes on, and must be seated before the King appears, will remain seated when his Majesty appears, and must not stir from their chairs until his Majesty is gone. The King will not see anybody's feet, as long ranges of planking like boxes will completely conceal the bodies of the mission from the King, who will thus see only their heads. The arrangement, though not uncomfortable by any means, or in any way very humiliating, will give the occupants a feeling very much as if they were about to have an after-dinner chat with the King. M. Richie, an Italian engineer, has drawn out a plan for the proposed building, and 50,000 rupees will shortly be sanctioned. The gilding and painting will be in Burmese style; and tapestry carpets and a quantity of upholstery will be required.

THE ART OF CONQUEST IS LOST WITHOUT THE ART OF EATING.—A gentleman writes:—"When I feel out of sorts I take a dose of Eno's Fruit Salt one hour before dinner; the effect is all I could wish." How to enjoy good food, that would otherwise cause biliousness, headache, or disordered stomach, use Eno's Fruit Salt. All chemists; price 2s 9d and 4s 6d.—Adv.

LETTERS FROM AN IDLER.

No. III.

"In those vernal seasons of the year," wrote Milton in his treatise on Education, "when the air is calm and pleasant, it were an injury and sullenness against nature not to go out and see her riches, and partake in her rejoicing with heaven and earth." Having regard to the authority of so great a name, I need not insist on the folly and, so to speak, impiety of always staying at home and sticking to business. It is the polemical aspect of education which now appears to be uppermost: but, were it otherwise, it were out of place here to enlarge upon the advantages of physical culture. Cricket-playing and boat-pulling need no recommendation; but a word in favour of teaching children to use their eyes and legs out of doors may not be amiss. If it be true that "Home keeping youth have ever homely wits," how better can they have their ideas enlarged, their health confirmed, or their patriotism strengthened, than by an occasional run to the mountains? We hear a good deal about New South Wales being a great and grand country; but how few get any just conception of its vast extent by actual travel, or learn to love it by the leisurely contemplation of its grandeur? Then as to the grown-up folk, many have yet to learn that it is a good thing to break in upon the monotony of daily life which is apt to become what Mr. Mantilini would call one long "demnition grind;" and, at the sacrifice of ignoble ease and home comfort, if need be, to get clear away from ordinary surroundings. There is no country where the competition of business is keener than in the United States; and yet the moneyed, middle, and even, to a large extent, the wage-earning classes contrive to get away from home for at least a fortnight or a month once a year, giving up the pursuit of the almighty dollar for that of health. Holidays in Sydney are neither few nor far between; but they mostly consist of a picnic on the harbour, or a run to Randwick. People do not get any real change of air and scene: and do not derive as much benefit in the way of health as they could probably get out of the same amount of time better used.

The observation that people usually know least about the places most accessible to them is undoubtedly stale, but it may be repeated because it is undoubtedly true. How comparatively few Sydney people, for example, are aware of what a beautiful place Parramatta Park has of late years become; or are they waiting till the railway is continued into the city before they make up their minds to spend a day there? To come a little farther westward, how many citizens have any idea that they can, if they choose, travel to the Lapstone Hill Zigzag and back, on Saturdays, thirty-six miles, for 3s.; to Faulconbridge and back for 4s., and to Lawson and back for 4s. 10d.; or that they can come up on a Saturday morning to Wentworth Falls, and return to Sydney in time for business on a Monday morning, for 5s. 2d.; to Katoomba for 5s. 6d.; to Blackheath (Govett's Leap), for 6s. 1d., or to Mount Victoria (seventy-seven miles, or there and back, 154 miles) for 6s. 5d.? Children, I suppose, are carried at half fares, so that for less than £1 a man may take his wife and two or three children to see some of the sublimest views which are to be found on the habitable globe. Is it not passing strange that instead of one or two small trains on the Saturday there are not half a dozen, and that the Falls at Lawson or at Wentworth should not be as much frequented as Manly Beach or Watson's Bay? Not that I would unreservedly recommend flying visits of this sort, for I have little sympathy with the ruling passion of the present generation, which some one has described as the desire to build big houses and travel fast. To get the full benefit of the mountains they should be seen at leisure, and half-a-dozen walks would reveal more than any number of rapid railway journeys. But in my endeavour to exclaim against the neglect of the mountains shown by the townspeople, I must not omit to say that at some of the places named there is no hotel accommodation, and at others where it does exist it is of a character which is—although perhaps equal to the demand—anything but inviting. Away from Mount Victoria, family hotels can hardly be said to have any existence. This being so, it is well to cultivate the friendship of one of those lucky fellows who go up to their mountain boxes on Friday a-night, returning to the city on the Monday morning; or, better still, buy him out for a month or two, if that be possible.

The tolerably uniform elevation of the mountains, say about 700 feet from where you are first brought face to face with them near Penrith, detracts somewhat from their power to impress the mind. The brown patches of freshly-cleared land at Lucasville, and the glimpse of the settlements on the Kurrajong heights, are the principal breaks in the sombre foliage of the forest which clothes the hills. The arches of the Knapsack Gully viaduct, built of white freestone across one of the declivities on the mountain side, is a pretty little landmark as showing the route along which we have to travel; and, as one must in most things live by faith, I am not prepared to contradict the information given by a fellow-traveller, apparently well "posted" in the figures of railway construction, who assured all and sundry that the "little" bridge in question is not far short of 400 feet long, and about 130 feet high. In a quarter of an hour after leaving Emu Plains—from which, however, the emus have long since fled—we were fairly on the Lapstone Hill Zig Zag, where we obtain the first great view which the mountains have to show us. The afternoon is the best time to see the broad expanse of level land, dotted over with towns and villages, which stretches out from the base of the mountains to the eastward, and which in the nearer view is pleasingly diversified with homesteads, gardens, and farms. Remembering it, as I now do, in the beginning of spring, before the long-deferred rain had fallen, one who has a scrupulous regard for truthful statement could hardly "babble of green fields," and it would be a rather wild stretch of imagination to suppose that the meagre growth of brown grass could ever become a meadow, that is, in the absence of any means of irrigation. In California the farmers lead the water from the hills, and so make fruitful what would otherwise be their barren land; and it is quite possible that in a few generations more the farmers of the Nepean and the Hawkesbury may find it worth while to use the water which Providence has brought from the mountains to their doors. Presuming that they have contracted a species of hydrophobia from the inundations to which they are exposed, let us hope that their convalescence may be speedy, and the price of windmill pumps be brought low. In that case, there may be no necessity to send to California for canned and dried fruits; or, for farmers' outcries against oppressive railway rates. But this is a digression; and it is, after all, a mean thing to introduce such mercenary considerations into the contemplation of the beautiful prospect which lies below Lapstone Hill. If the pastures are bare, much of the arable land is carpeted with the tender green of young barley or oats, and how could one wish to see the dark ground covered otherwise than by "that glorious enamel, by the companies of those soft, and countless, and peaceful spears?" Then, too, there are the snow-white blossoms of the pear-trees and the rosy bloom of the peach to flush the landscape with warm colour; and the dark-green foliage of the orangeries is still illuminated by globes of golden fruit, and fragrant with spring blossoms. The time may, perhaps, come when the borders of these little fruit plots will be enlarged, and they will widen out over all the plain, through which winds the Nepean after it emerges through the dark shadow of the mountain defile, whose precipitous slopes seem in vain to have tried to bar its entrance into the sunlight, in which it rejoices. In the early morning, when the mist is rising from the plains, it is sometimes not easy to trace the course of the river, except where the level rays of the sun, still low in the heaven, fall across its waters, and make them gleam with the lustre of silver. In the afternoon, however, before the sun falls behind the hills, you may see the trees which grow along the banks of the Nepean, some seven hundred feet below you, reflected in its waters with the clearness of a mirror, and you follow with delight the flow of the river, as it "moves in majesty" between the colossal piers which support the Penrith viaduct, and until it finally sweeps in a graceful curve round one of the spurs of the mountains, which advances its foot farther out upon the plain. Recollecting the muddy and sluggish current which struggled down the bed of the Nepean, as I saw it at the ford many years ago, I was surprised into admiration of the river's beauty, as seen from the platform on the top of the Lapstone Zig Zag; and I am almost sorry that I ever saw it in its soiled condition. It may be that this is a case in which distance lends enchantment to the view; but, if it be really the case that the Nepean is habitually yellow, not blue, I would still hope that the Cornstalks who have grown up on Emu Plains have learnt to cherish towards it some sentiment of affection, if not of veneration, such as that which Macaulay ascribes to the Romans for Father Tiber in the "brave days of old."

Ten minutes' walk along the railway line through the lofty corridor of jagged sandstone rock brings us to another watercourse, the smooth round pebbles of whose bed may be seen on each side from the windows of the railway carriages. How or why or when it was heaved up to the mountain tops, wedged in between walls of sandstone rock, I know not. It did not strike me as having been one of your vain-glorious claimants of immortality—

"Men may come and men may go,
But I go on for ever;"

but a noble stream—nothing less in fact than the "brimming river." Ages have come and gone since the water made "sweet music with th' enamel'd stones" one sees embedded in the mountain rock, and after cycles of concealment the place of their imprisonment has only just been revealed to men. Doubtless the stream did good work while it flowed, and its monument is not ignoble. And so also—if one may compare the transient records of human affairs with the more enduring mementos of the earth's history—the fair fame of many a man who nobly fulfils his duty may remain buried in obscurity through the lapse of years until some fortunate accident or some discerning critic reveals his character and obtains for him what we call imperishable renown.

MEAT EXPORT TRADE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In this day's issue of your widely-read journal, Mr. De Salis asks, "Who shall undertake the risk of initiating this trade?"

One would think that the stockowners themselves, as being more immediately interested, would do so. Their fellow-pastoralists in Riverina, notwithstanding that they are less interested, through having very few cattle; that they are heavily handicapped by the duty on stock, and that they commenced the formation of their company nearly twelve months after the agitation with regard to this question began here—have not only taken this risk upon themselves, but are now actually shipping a cargo of frozen meat from Melbourne. The contrast reflects nothing but shame on Sydney, and especially on those connected with our stock trade. Tons upon tons of our very best meat are wasted or boiled down, while many of our cattle-owners are being ruined.

Although there is here an excellent text to preach from on the damage close corporations, vested interests, and lack of enterprise entail, I will leave that to some one else; and, if you will allow me, put before your readers a suggestion which may, perhaps, help to answer the question asked by Mr. De Salis,—"Who shall undertake the risk of the meat export trade?"

My answer is, "the stockowners themselves," for the reason already given, and in some such way as the following:—

Let an Act be passed, to be administered by a Minister of the Crown, assisted by a board of five gentlemen resident in Sydney connected with the pastoral interest, and elected annually by the stockowners throughout the colony at the annual general meeting held under the Pastures and Stock Protection Act; and let an annual contribution at a rate of, say, not exceeding £1 per 1000 sheep (that is, about ¼d. each), and not exceeding £4 per 1000 cattle (that is, about 1d. per head), be rated on the sheep and cattle in the colony, little owners being exempt. This, with 30,000,000 sheep, would give £30,000, and with 3,000,000 cattle £12,000—an annual income of £42,000. This amount would only be required for two or three years, if that long. As the necessary establishments were constructed the expenditure would decrease, and the contribution could be lessened.

With the moneys raised in this way I would propose, in the first instance, that an extensive freezing and shipping depot should be constructed on, say, Darling Harbour, connected of course with the railway; and that killing and chilling establishments be erected at the principal centres of the stock traffic on the railway, such as Wagga Wagga, Dubbo, Gunnedah, and Deniliquin, as the funds connected under the Act will admit.

Any one will see the use of killing and chilling establishments at Wagga Wagga and Dubbo; but some may not at Gunnedah and Deniliquin. I would explain, with respect to Gunnedah, that meat could be killed and chilled there, brought by rail to Newcastle, and sent on safely to Sydney during the greater part of the year, to be frozen and shipped for England; and that this mode of sending the stock to market would actually be more economical than sending them alive, leaving out of view all the other advantages it would secure; while after a time a chilling and freezing depot could be erected also at Newcastle, where the meat could either be re-charged with cold, to make it carry all the way to Sydney, or it might be frozen at Newcastle, and put on board the ocean-going steamers in the Sydney harbour from the Newcastle boats. Then, again, Newcastle would make an excellent depot for the salt beef trade, which we are certain to see established in these colonies as soon as killing and chilling in the interior becomes, as it must do, the order of the day. As regards the establishment of a proper killing and chilling depot at Deniliquin that is all which is now required on that side of the colony, as the owners there can have the use of the Melbourne Freezing and Shipping Company's works, and only want the chilling-house at Deniliquin to put the trade on the proper footing.

In this way the stockowners in all parts of the colony would be benefited, both directly and indirectly, by such a measure as I propose; and those who administered it would of course erect appliances at new centres to accommodate the trade, according as it was found necessary to do so.

These appliances being provided to a greater or less extent for carrying on an export trade in meat, I would propose that neither the Government nor the Board should, as a rule, have anything to do with the working of them, but that they be let by tender, the same as tolls, ferries, or bridges; and there is no doubt whatever but that capitalists or companies would readily lease these chilling and freezing works on reasonable terms, at such rentals as would give a fair return for the money expended in their construction. If, however, it should occasionally happen that any of these works did not let, arrangements could be made by the Board under which they might be temporarily carried on for the convenience of any owners who wished to ship their own stock to London, and were willing to pay a reasonable rate for killing, chilling, and freezing the meat.

There need, however, be no risk run with regard to any but the freezing and shipping establishment at the port of Sydney, as the Board could in every case, before erecting up-country killing and chilling appliances, obtain a guarantee from the stockowners in the district, asking for their construction, that sufficient business would be done at the proposed depôt to repay the cost of its construction.

There is no new principle involved in the proposal here made for establishing a meat export trade. Governments are continually erecting and letting, and in many cases (see the telegraph and railways) even working reproductive works, which tend to further the progress of the colony; and, if a very large majority of our stockowners is favourable to a scheme such as this, as I feel certain it is, the only question which should arise is—Will the business prove a success? Of that, again, there cannot now be the least doubt, after the lengthened experience of the American trade, our own successful experiment in the Strathleven, and the recent safe arrival of frozen meat in Australia from England in the Orient steamship.

I trust, therefore, that some of the gentlemen now coming forward in the pastoral interest will be returned to Parliament, and that they will take this matter up, and carry through some such measure as I have here sketched; and that the members generally will give it their support; for if the meat export trade were established on a proper footing, it would return millions of money annually to the colony. There is practically no limit to the production of meat in Australia, so long as the English business will pay. We produce the best and cheapest meat in the world, and it rests with ourselves to place it on the London market in the best condition, and most presentable shape. That, I believe, can only be done by combined action and careful management, and these, again, can only be brought about by such a measure as I here suggest.

A LOST TRIBE.—The Russian traveller and journalist, W. J. Remirowich-Dantschenko, has just published, in a very interesting work entitled "Wojinstwujusci Israil," the results of his recent travels in the Caucasus. He has discovered on the highlands of Daghestan a tribe which has been settled there for thousands of years, and although they are of warlike temperament and closely resemble the Cossacks in appearance, there is no doubt at all that they are really Jews, for they strictly follow the Mosaic law in the biblical interpretation of it. It is strange that this people has hitherto escaped the notice of ethnographers, for they themselves affirm that they have lived in the same spot since the time of Salmonassar. They are ignorant of Talmudic literature, and of the building of the second Temple, and they retain the old Jewish names in use in the days of the wanderings and the first kings. They manufacture largely a red wine, which is said to be the best in the Caucasus, and they adhere strictly to the Mosaic law that a man must marry his deceased brother's wife.—London Examiner.

REVIEW.

A History of our own Times, from the Accession of Queen Victoria to the General Election of 1880. By JUSTIN M'CARTHY, M.P. In four volumes. Chatto and Windus, Piccadilly, 1880.

Is it a mark of degeneracy or not that the history of our own times is so much more fascinating to the average reader than that of any other times, and that the completion of the work of Mr. M'Carthy has been eagerly looked for, and ordered in advance all over the civilized world, as well as in England itself; one great London library (Mudie's) having secured 1000 copies for the use of its readers alone? Is it merely the feeling that here we tread on well-known ground, that it relates to events which are to us as household words, to people whom we have seen or whom we may possibly see, who dress in our own modern fashion, and speak our own colloquial or polished modern English?

These are, no doubt, some of the reasons, and the most apparent ones, for the fascination of these completed four volumes; but there are others, whose roots lie deeper and whose ramifications spread wider for the preference. At the risk of being called superficial, commonplace, and unæsthetic, we contend that modern history is intrinsically more interesting than ancient or mediæval history, and that the true chronicle of England in the Victorian era has characteristics which ought to make it of especial value to all future times. When Gibbon chose for his life-work the subject of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire he seized on one infinitely more grand and more fruitful in results than its rise and extension. When the one overmastering law-bringing organization, which had gathered all the kingdoms of the earth under its imperial sway, crumbled to pieces, then the infant nationalities of the modern world rose from its ruins, and grew as their differing circumstances permitted. If Gibbon's great work had been as philosophical and as sympathetic as it was laborious and picturesque, it would have continued to be the one authority on the subject. But it would have been too much to expect Gibbon not only to be the pioneer in the matter of rescued and pictorial reproduction of a distant past, and also to have the philosophical inlook and outlook which characterise a later time.

But in giving his book to the world, when with pardonable pride he congratulated himself on the mighty stage he had chosen, he expressed his conviction that there never would be again a subject for the pen of a great historian. The times appeared to him petty and unpicturesque. The quarrels of courts, and the wranglings of diplomatists, in the eighteenth century, appeared to him to lead to war without glory or result, and to peace without honour. And yet Europe was on the eve of the greatest revolution the world ever saw when he complained of the barrenness of modern times; and from the defects of his qualities, if this magnificent historian had undertaken to write in that great convulsion the result would have been most unsatisfactory. This era marks to us the specially modern development of history, and the part which England took in the war with France connected her with Continental history, and with the history of the world, as she had not been connected since the time of Elizabeth and of Cromwell. The early history of England is necessarily insular; the silver streak of sea protected her from attack from the Continent, and there is only occasionally a war with France, or with Spain, in which the domestic annals take any foreign colouring; but the history of our own times is cosmopolitan. There is no disturbance of any magnitude, political or social, all over the civilised world but England feels it in her diplomatic relations, in her commerce, or in her prestige. Through her possession of a vast Indian Empire and of colonies planted by all the oceans of the globe, her history touches that of all Europe, Asia, Africa, America, and Australasia; her political power, her all-embracing commerce, has to do with peoples of every race and every tongue, and in every different stage of civilization. Modern invention has almost annihilated space and time, and during this very reign of Victoria London daily feels the pulse of all the political movements and of all the markets of the world; while her most remote dependencies are, for many practical purposes, nearer to the central seat of power than Edinburgh was to London when Victoria came to the throne.

"In practical science," says Mr. M'Carthy, vol. iv., pages 514, "the advance made during the reign of Queen Victoria has been greater, in many ways, than the advance made from the beginning of civilization to that time. Sir Robert Peel travelled from Rome to London to assume office as Prime Minister, exactly as Constantine travelled from York to Rome to become Emperor. Each traveller had all that sails and horses could do for him, and no more. Something of the same kind may be said for economical, political, and what is now called social, science. The whole of that system of legislative reform which is founded on a recognition of the principles of humanity may be said to belong to our own times. Our penal systems have undergone a thorough reform. More than once it seemed as if the reform was going too far, and as if the tenderness to criminals were likely to prove an encouragement to crime. But although there have been for this reason little outbursts of reaction now and then, the growth of the principle of humanity has been steady, and the principle has taken firm and fixed root in our systems of penal legislation. Flogging in the army and navy may be said to be now wholly abolished. The senseless and barbarous system of imprisonment for debt is abandoned. There is no more transportation of convicts. Care is taken of the lives and of the health of women and children in all manner of employments. Schools are managed on systems of wise gentleness. Dotheboys' Hall would be an impossible picture even for caricature in these later years. We are perhaps at the beginning of a movement of legislation which is about to try to the very utmost that right of State interference with individual action which at one time it was the object of most of our legislators to reduce to its very narrowest proportions. It may be that the straining of the right of the majority over the minority is destined to bring about in due course a reaction. But we do not think that 'the survival of the fittest,' the doctrine on which our forefathers acted more or less consciously in the education of children and the treatment of criminals, will ever again, within any time to which speculation can safely reach, be adopted as a principle of our legislation. Much of the healthier and more humane spirit . . . is due to the spread of that sound and practical scientific teaching which began to make it known everywhere that the recognition of the laws of health will be found in the end to be the recognition of the laws of morality."

Here we have the key to the modern spirit, and the great events which have taken place in the reign of Victoria have had great causes at their back, and have often borne still greater results. No country can stand still; no nation can stand alone. If we look to the activity of legislation, we see, as Mr. M'Carthy puts its every now and then, "Reformation in a Flood," with the back tide of reaction as a pause, but not able to effect positive retrogression. A Conservative Ministry has always to accept, and sometimes to complete or even to enlarge, the previous work of their political opponents.

In English political life we see the first Reform Bill and Catholic Emancipation supplemented by household suffrage and the removal of Jewish Disabilities, and the ballot conceded to voters to make their vote a genuine expression of their will. In other directions we see the disestablishment of the Irish Church and the abolition of Purchase in the Army. The transportation system and irregular marriages at Gretna Green fell in the same year, 1847. Commerce has been quadrupled by the adoption of free trade and the repeal of the navigation laws. There are beginnings of reform in the land laws. The working classes have their trades' unions legalised, their friendly societies regulated, their children educated. The penny post and the penny newspaper have cheapened and popularized all manner of communications between individuals and between public opinion and its expression. The steamship, the railway, and the telegraph, all first adopted in England, have changed the face of the world.

If we look out of the sphere of domestic legislation we see that the map of Europe is changed, and the map of the whole world filled with many detatils quite unknown in 1837. There is a united Italy and a united Germany. The Roman Church has lost her temporal power, and yet is a stronger spiritual power for it. We see France, after a series of revolutions, and after the throes of a deadly war, settled down, with some loss of territory, to an apparently stable Republic, and to a condition of unexampled material prosperity. We see the American Republic extended from the Atlantic to the Pacific, with three times the population of 1837, and having survived, and come out all the stronger from, the strain which De Tocqueville looked on as her only danger—a great war. Canada also numbers three times the population, and is now a consolidated Dominion. The Australian colonies now contain a prosperous population of more than twelve times the number of those who, after the lapse of five or six months, heard by some sailing ship that King William was dead. Long live Queen Victoria! They hear the news of every day, and get letters and newspapers every week, from the mother country. But people may say growth of population, and greatness of events, and extent of commerce, do not really make nations or times great; that depends on the men, and these prosaic times do not call out great men. Macaulay, indeed, says of the revolution of 1688, that it was a great national movement, carried out by mediocre and often very half-hearted men; but of the movements of our own age we cannot say this. The gallery of actors is worthy of the events. Where Britain has had to fight her soldiers have shown pluck and endurance, and her generals boldness and skill. The story of the Indian mutiny reads like that of paladins of old. And in the matter of politicians and administrators we see Melbourne, Peel, Derby, Russell, Disraeli, and Gladstone, and hosts of others whose zeal, whose oratory, whose industry, place them in the front ranks of this or any other age. Indeed it is a fair answer to this hackneyed charge against our times that the two men who have so long held, and who still hold, command of the great political parties in England are men who are not cut after any set pattern—men of undoubted genius, who both deal in surprises of different kinds which astonish friend and foe, and who are both, in a very marked degree, leaders and not followers of public opinion.

The most fascinating thing about this book is the manner in which each notable man is described as he is introduced, and as many of the greatest of them lived through both periods (Gladstone had been five years in Parliament, and Disraeli made his memorable debut in the first Parliament of the new reign), the greater number of these portraits are included in the first two volumes. The same thing happens with regard to the survey of literature—that the first portion contains the most great names. But the summing up of Palmerston's career, at the close of the second volume, at his death, gives a good specimen of Mr. M'Carthy's style.

"Much of this History of our own Times is necessarily the history of the life and administration of a statesman who entered Parliament shortly after Austerlitz. His greatest praise with Englishmen must be that he loved England with a sincere love that never abated. He had no predilection, no prejudice, that did not give way where the welfare of England was concerned. He ought to have gone one step higher in the path of public duty—he ought to have loved justice and right even more than he loved England. Lord Palmerston was not a statesman who took any lofty view of a Minister's duties. He sometimes did things in the cause of England which we may well believe he would not have done for any consideration in any cause of his own. His sympathies with liberty were capricious guides; he was not prevented by his liberal sympathies from sustaining the policy of the coup d'etat, nor did his strong and genuine hatred of slavery inspire him with any repugnance to the cause of the Southern slaveholders. But his very defects were a main cause of his popularity and his success. Other public men spoke for the most part to tell English people of something they ought to do which they were not doing, something which they had done, and ought not to have done. It is not in the nature of things that such men should be as popular as those who told England that whatever she did must be right.

"In Palmerston's time sprung up the word un-English. It was enough with certain classes to say that anything was un-English to put it out of court. . . . It would be superfluous to say that this did not show itself at its worst in Palmerston himself; but in politics as in art we never see how bad some peculiar defect is till we see it in the imitators of a great man's style. A school of Palmerstons, had it been powerful and lasting, would have England a nuisance to other nations. . . There is great truth in the five lines of the arch poet, which reminds his mistress that he could not love her so much loved he not honour more; and no man can can truly serve his country to the best of his power who has not in his mind at the same time a service higher than that of his country. To serve the purpose of the hour was Palmerston's policy; to succeed in serving it was his triumph. But it is not thus that a great fame is built up. Lord Palmerston is hardly to be called a great man; perhaps he may be called a great 'man of the time.'"

After the Indian mutiny, when English people were carried away by the wildest passions, and speakers and writers shrieking for revenge, it is to the honour of Mr. Disraeli that he raised his voice in remonstrance in Parliament. The English Press was virulent. From The Times to Punch there was scorn and ridicule for "clemency Canning."

"In India Lord Canning was gravely embarrassed by the wild vagaries of distracted Englishmen, who were furious with him because he ever thought of distinguishing friend from foe where native races were concerned. He bore himself with perfect calmness, listened to everything that anyone had to say, but made his own resolve and his own judgment the final arbiter. He was greatly assisted and encouraged in his counsels by his brave and noble wife, who proved a worthy helpmate at such a crisis. He did not for a moment under-estimate the danger, but he never allowed it to master him, but looked on it with the quiet resolute eye of one who is determined to be a conqueror in the struggle."

In looking through the index of contents, we see that Lord Beaconsfield, first and last, occupies more than three columns; close to him comes Palmerston and Gladstone, Wellington, and Russell. Brougham, Peel, O'Connell and Melbourne, figure much in the earlier volumes; in the later we hear much of Cobden, Bright, Mill, Lowe, and Faucett. Russia, France, and America, are the nationalities chiefly concerned in our history; but the Eastern Question, from the second volume to the last, is always cropping up, and entangling England with all the Powers. It is a mark of the different kinds of union effected in 1707 and in 1800, that Scotland does not appear in the index at all, although the Scotch Church underwent disruption in 1843, and saw lay patronage abolished in 1874; but that Ireland, from first to last, occupies a prominent and exceptional position in these annals. O'Connell takes his place in the very first chapter as the great agitator, parading his personal loyalty to the young Queen; and Home Rule, and the compensation for eviction are the most serious and difficult questions which are left unsolved in the last. Mr. M'Carthy is a man of talent and conscience, who is also a Home Ruler, and his utterances on the subject of nationalities and races are marked enough all through the book, although on the question itself he says (vol. iv., page 382):—

"The author of this history is, for obvious reasons, not inclined to discuss here the merits of the Home Rule demand; but he desires to put it on historical record that those who were chiefly concerned in promoting that movement were filled with the conviction that the principle of Home Rule contained the solution of the great problem of government, which, unsolved, had so long divided England and Ireland, and offered a means of complete reconciliation between the two countries."

In another passage—IV.-233—we have "Two readings of History":—

"About every page of the history of the two countries was read with a different interpretation by the Irishman and the Englishman. To the English student, Spenser was a patriot as well as a poet; to the Irish scholar he was the bitterest and most unthinking enemy of Ireland. To the Englishman of modern days, Cromwell was a great statesman and patriot; the Irishman thought of him as the remorseless oppressor of Ireland, and the author of the massacre of Drogheda. The Englishman hated James II., because he fought against England at the Boyne; the Irishman despised him, because he gave up the fight so soon. Chesterfield was to Englishmen a fribble and a fop; he was to Irishmen of education the one English Lord-Lieutenant who ever seemed to have any comprehension of the real need of Ireland. Fox was denounced in England and adored in Ireland, because he made himself the champion of the principle of governing Ireland according to Irish ideas. One of Byron's chief offences in the eyes of English Conservatives was that his enthusiasm for Ireland was almost equal to his enthusiasm for Greece."

In these last two volumes, we think the chapters about the American war and those about the legislative activity of the strong Liberal Ministry of Gladstone in his last tenure of power will be the most generally interesting; but to those colonists who have visited England at one time or another, we believe the chapters which deal with those times will be most attractive, at least that is the experience of the present winter. There is a mention of the Tichborne trial. Mr. Eyre, the Australian explorer, takes part in a sad chapter of the Jamaica troubles in 1865. All the colonies come in for some share in the book, only the Australian Colonies have been so peaceable that they do not figure like Canada, the Cape, and New Zealand. In Vol. IV., page 198 and seq., Mr. M'Carthy says:—

"All these Australian Colonies have representative government, with responsible Ministries and parliamentary chambers. New South Wales is the oldest of the group. Its political life may be said to date from 1853, then it just received what is fairly to be called a constitution. For ten years it had possessed a sort of Legislature, consisting of a single chamber, of which half the members were nominee, and the other half elected. One of the most distinguished members of the chamber was Mr. Lowe, who appears to have learned to hate democratic government from watching over its earliest infancy, as some women imbibe a dislike to all children from having to do too much nursery work in their girlhood. Victoria, which was separated from New South Wales in 1851, got her Liberal Constitution in 1856. The other colonies followed by degrees. . . . They have not got on so far without much confusion and many sad mistakes. The Constitutional controversies and difficulties in Victoria and other Australian colonies are a favourite example with some writers and speakers, to show the failure of the democratic principle in government. But it is always forgotten that the principle of representative government in a colony like Victoria is, as a matter of necessity, that of democracy. An aristocracy cannot be imported, nor can it be sown in the evening to grow up next morning. It is often carelessly said that they ought to find the work easy enough, because they have the example and the experience of England to guide them. But they have no such guide, for there must be a certain danger of going astray simply from trying to follow England's example under circumstances entirely dissimilar.

"Despite all confusion or blundering, however, it is clear that the Australian colonies are growing and prospering, and that their gradual training in the business of political government will soon bring each of them to the principles and the mechanism best suited for its condition and development. All the lessons lately taught by the Home Government have been, and very properly, that they must manage their own affairs and compose their domestic quarrels without the intervention of imperial authority. This has been impressed on them just as earnestly by Conservative as by Liberal Secretaries of State. The Victorian dead-lock, as it is called, is a recent example. It began with a dispute between the two Chambers as to payment of members. The majority in the Legislative Assembly, or House of Commons, passed as usual the estimate for the payment of members, the system having prevailed since 1872. It was thrown out by the Legislative Council, or Senate. The Chief Secretary, or as we should call him the Prime Minister, Mr. Graham Berry, added the amount to the Appropriation Bill. The Legislative Council refused to pass the bill. The Ministry retorted by threatening to dismiss a whole army of Government officials—county court judges, magistrates, coroners, and other functionaries—on the ground that they had not the money to pay their salaries. Both Chambers appealed to the Governor, who, acting on the advice of the Colonial Office, observed a strict neutrality. The money question was temporarily settled by a sort of compromise; but the popular Assembly set to work to diminish the power of the Upper Chamber; the question has been to get the Upper Chamber to pass the measure. Mr. Berry came to England to endeavour to prevail on the Government here to effect a change in the Victorian Constitution by an Imperial decree. The Conservative Secretary of State, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, firmly refused to interfere. Only in the very last extremity, it was authoritatively declared, could the mother country interfere in the domestic disputes of a colony having representative institutions and a responsible Ministry. This was an important declaration, and it announced a just and wise resolve. The training given by self-government would be of little value indeed if the mother country were to undertake to intervene whenever anything want wrong, and on her own authority try to set it right."

Mr. M'Carthy, as a Home Ruler has the, strongest views in favour of federation of the empire, and in vol. IV., page 204, he says, with regard to the protective tariff set up by Canada and Victoria:—

"English politicians and manufacturers chafe so much at this that it seems likely to be the cause at one time or another of a quarrel which no fine phrases on either side can conjure away. An Englishman of the present day has said that as we lost some of our American colonies because we insisted on taxing them, we may lose the others because we will not permit them to tax us. Might not this difficulty, too, be removed from the path of the future if colonists and the inhabitants of the mother country alike sit in the one Imperial Legislature, and discuss such questions. Immense are the difficulties in the way, and to many minds it seems the merest dream to suggest it; but do those who despise the dreamers really believe that things can really always go on as they are. You have eyes, open them, and look beyond your own parish, your own club, your own coterie or village, and ask if it is possible that great colonies like British North America and Australasia are likely to remain always content with their present anomalous condition, or that your own people would be content with it, even if the colonists do not complain. What then do you expect? Annexation to America in the one case, independence in the other, or perhaps independence in both, or in all. To that result, the mind of England would have to reconcile itself. She has no Imperial privilege to interfere with the destinies of the world. In the meantime, would it not be well to consider whether the other suggestion is not more desirable as well as more easy to realize—that scheme of a great federation which should reconcile the several interests and the individual energies of the colonies with the central policy of a great free empire."

The last six years of the history is less detailed than the previous portions. Probably, the additional space required for the two years between the treaty of Berlin—at which he proposed to conclude—and the late general election, which makes a better halting place, compelled from the author a compression of these events. The two chapters devoted to the literature of the periods are very pleasant reading. The criticism is keen, yet kindly. The latest development in art, the typical æsthetic—who makes for himself a religion out of wall papers, old teapots, and fans, who thinks to order, but piques himself on his originality; who, with his comrades, receives his opinions in platoons, as Charlemagne's converts did their Christianity—and the latest development in novel—the "Roaring Girl of the Victorian Period"—come in for a little good-natured satire.

It is characteristic of this history of our own times that it has been produced without the use of the author's pen, for we have it on the best authority that every word has been taken down by the agency of the type-writer. We do not know whether the use of this organ of expression may be accountable for the great abundance of full stops. It appears to us to be the only defect in an easy, brilliant, and epigrammatic style, that many sentences, which might naturally be carried on with one sweep of the voice and of the thought, are broken up into detached fragments.

That Mr. M'Carthy is a Liberal of the Liberals, an Irishman of the Irish, we can plainly see; but he shows fair dealing with political opponents, and he takes large views of all questions. We hope that the book will be as popular in Great and Greater Britain as its subject, its execution, and its opportuneness deserve.

STEEDMAN'S SOOTHING POWDERS
FOR CHILDREN CUTTING TEETH.
CAUTION TO PURCHASERS.

The value of this well-known Family Medicine has been largely tested in all parts of the world, and by all grades of society, for upwards of FIFTY YEARS. Its well-earned extensive sale has induced SPURIOUS IMITATIONS, some of which, in OUTWARD APPEARANCE, so closely resemble the original as to have deceived many purchasers. The proprietor, therefore, feels it due to the public to give a special caution against the use of such imitations.

Purchasers are therefore requested carefully to observe the four following distinctive characteristics, without which none are genuine:—

1. In every case the words JOHN STEEDMAN, Chemist, Walworth, Surry, are engraved on the Government stamp affixed to EACH PACKET.
2. Each SINGLE POWDER has directions for the dose, and the words "John Steedman, Chemist, Walworth, Surrey," printed thereon.
3. The name Steedman is always spelt with two EE's.
4. The manufacture is carried on solely at Walworth, Surrey.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. MOST IMPORTANT NOTICE.

In consequence of other parties registering the No. 1 Crown Brand, we have been compelled to devise a new one, which we are enabled to do on account of the several honours that have been awarded to us at the various Exhibitions. Our future brand will be stamped upon every bar, and will read thus: "PRITCHARD PRIZE MEDAL," with the figure of a medal at the end. And although we have always been noted for selling a superior article we intend to give to our manufacture a much closer attention, so as to secure for our Prize Medal Soap a name that will at once secure the confidence and support of the public. We confidently recommend it to those who wish to preserve the colour of their clothes, and as an article that will last long and save a great deal of labour.

One trial will prove the superiority of PRITCHARD PRIZE MEDAL.

J. AND W. PRITCHARD, Soap and Candle Manufacturers by Appointment to his Excellency Sir Hercules Robinson, K.C.M.G.; also awarded the First Prize at the Intercolonial Exhibition of 1874, and the Bronze Medal at the Great International Exhibition of 1880. The material used in the manufacture of our Soap and Candles is of the very best, and imported to our order, which enables us to sell at very moderate prices. All orders will receive our prompt attention. The trade supplied with all the very best brands of caustic soda, pale amber resin, silicate of soda, palm oil, blue and white wrapping-paper, and Card's patent oxygenated double-twisted candlewick.

WILLIAM DAY,

TO THE ELECTORS OF EAST SYDNEY.

Gentlemen,—The electoral campaign being now fairly opened by the dissolution of Parliament, it is necessary that I should give you in a published address an explicit statement of the opinions upon which I venture to claim your support. The short time which has unexpectedly—but perhaps, not the less wisely—been given for the decision of the important question of the formation of the new Assembly renders this mode of addressing you all the more obligatory. I regret that absence from town has prevented an earlier performance of the intention in the short announcement of my candidature which has already appeared.

Though I have not of late obtruded myself much upon public notice, it is, I would hope, hardly necessary for me to say that I have continued to take a warm interest in all matters affecting our common welfare. The progress of a vigorous colony engaged, not only in transplanting here the instincts which have raised the Empire of the Anglo-Saxon to a remarkable eminence, but in competing in an intercolonial contest for supremacy is a subject of surpassing interest. Good, sound, honest legislation is the force by which that progress is ensured and sustained—a bona-fide desire to help in providing it is surely a commendable ambition. It is for you to afford or deny me the chance of exhibiting it.

It must be a matter of common gratulation that the coalition of the two parties whose opposition for years rendered legislation of any kind well-nigh impossible, has had the effect of securing many valuable measures. Chief among these must be regarded the Public Instruction Act—an Act which, if effectively administered, will secure to the great majority of our children the inestimable advantage of that primary knowledge which fit them to begin the battle of life, and become enlightened and useful citizens. Technical education is a subject which has been too much neglected, and may well, I think, engage the attention of the Legislature. I would willingly support the extension of Government aid to Schools of Art and Mechanics' Institutes as a primary mode of encouraging this important branch of higher education.

The proposal to extend the municipal system, and so decentralize government responsibility in that which should be purely a matter of local concern, is I think an excellent one; it would have my hearty support.

The question of taxation is happily not of such serious import as it lately threatened to become, but it is one of these inevitable misfortunes as uncertain as an epidemic and as obnoxious. I would stave it off by a decided retrenchment, not in salaries already too low, but in the expensive public works. If, however, it must be resorted to, all forms of indirect taxation should, in my opinion, be exhausted before direct taxation is attempted. If for no other reason than that it will reach absentees, a property tax would be, if necessity required it, a legitimate resource. I object to all taxes on natural products, whether levied in the shape of export duties or wharfage rates. In one of my electoral addresses six years since I advocated the development of those products which nature has given us in unbounded profusion by assistance in the shape of bonuses. We export our raw materials and receive them back perfected to their various uses by hands not a whit more naturally skilful than those which have wielded the oar and the cricket ball so successfully in our honour. Our industries languish, and we are almost entirely dependent upon foreign sources of supply for manufactures. Why is this? I am no protectionist, and so long as it is a question of free trade or protection only I will not disturb the great principle which regulates our commerce with the world, which undoubtedly confers the greatest benefit upon the greater number, and in the struggle for intercolonial supremacy is forcing us steadily to the front.

The land question is beset with difficulties. Nineteen years ago I advocated the setting apart of suitable areas for selection and fixity of tenure for the squatters; but the temptation of indiscriminate selection was too strong to be resisted. The consequence has been ruin to many and general discontent. I am of opinion that the land law should be consolidated upon the principle lately enunciated, I believe, by Mr. M'Elhone. I am altogether opposed to that monstrous proposal to abolish the interest due on free selections.

The Kenny Hill Water Scheme appears to possess on paper so many advantages over that adopted in the recommendations of the late Mr. Clarke, that I think a rigid investigation of its alleged merits should be made, and, if proved beyond doubt, availed of.

Upon other questions of secondary importance I hope to have an opportunity of addressing you in person. Meantime, assuring you that neither directly nor indirectly have I sanctioned any attempt to league my interests in this election with those of other candidates,

I am,
Gentlemen,
Yours faithfully,
HENRY C. DANGAR.

TO THE ELECTORS OF EAST SYDNEY.

Gentlemen,—In a few days you will be called upon to exercise your suffrages in returning four members to the Legislative Assembly, and I beg to offer myself as a candidate for one of the seats in your representation. I address myself to you because I have reason to believe that it is the wish of a large number of your body that I should once more place my services at your disposal, and because I desire to take the earliest and most prominent stand before the constituencies in stating my opinions.

It is now more than 26 years since I was first elected as one of the members for Sydney. From then till now I have taken an active part in the affairs of the country, and have expressed my opinion and given my vote on nearly every prominent question of public interest. During the last 15 years I have held the office of Colonial Secretary in four Governments, and my service as Minister has extended over more than half that period. The Statute book contains several measures, not of secondary magnitude, with which I have been principally identified. If my political character and the principles I have adopted for my guidance cannot be understood from the record which this long term of public service supplies, any mere professions on my part at this time of day would fail to assist you in understanding them. I have nothing to explain away, and I fear no impartial scrutiny of my conduct in Parliament.

Though I do not feel that the occasion demands of me any declaration of principles, I readily admit, considering the responsible position I occupy, and the impossibility of dissociating it from the general welfare, that you have a right to expect a clear exposition of my views of the present political juncture and of the work lying in the immediate future, or, in other words, how I propose to apply principles in the government of the country.

In New South Wales we have a country containing an area of land nearly four times larger than that of the neighbouring colony of Victoria. This land, which is the element from which in one form or other all the wealth of society is derived, is so splendidly distributed as to soil and climate that nearly everything required for the use of man can be derived from it in abundance. North and south and in the west we have rich wheat lands; on our northern rivers the sugar-cane has been cultivated with marked commercial success; in parts of the Hunter district and on the banks of the Lachlan the tobacco plant flourishes as luxuriantly as in Virginia; our pastoral plains are unrivalled. Underneath the surface coal, iron, copper, tin, silver, gold, and other of the most valuable minerals abound. Our extensive coast is indented by spacious bays, and navigable rivers open up large tracts of our interior. It needs but the enterprise and intelligence of a British people, cherishing the spirit and putting forth the energy of our colonizing race, to raise a country so richly blessed by nature to a foremost place in the progress of the world. But the work before us can only be faithfully accomplished by the cultivation of the homely virtues of industry, care, and thrift amongst the people, and by the application of sound principles of legislation and economic truth in government.

I am a declared advocate of the principles of free trade, with a firm belief that the steady advancement of the country to a position of greatness and abiding prosperity will be best promoted by a policy which has been found so beneficial to Great Britain. What is called protection is the policy of the unthinking and the unthrifty, the creed of the improvident waggoners who are ever calling upon Jupiter to drag their ill-managed vehicles from the sloughs of their own neglect. In former periods of English history, protective laws were devised and sustained by the oppressors of our countrymen, by men whose chief objects were to expand their own rent-rolls, to preserve and perpetuate monopolies, and to crush the spirit of independence out of the people. By a strange forgetfulness of the lessons of the past, men who call themselves Liberals in Australia have adopted the devices by which their forefathers were for generations ground in the dust.

If returned as your representative I shall strenuously oppose restrictions on the operations of industry and commerce, believing as I do, from the teachings of experience, that trade will flourish best, and that manufactures will grow up most healthily in the pure and bracing atmosphere of entire freedom.

I cannot be expected to be indifferent to the result of this election in respect to the cause of education. The Public Instruction Act of last session does not come into full operation until the end of 1882, and the constituencies may be fairly appealed to by its opponents to repeal or modify any of its provisions. We cannot complain of any such appeal if made honestly and openly. But the Act is one which is beset by masked enemies. Suspicion justly attaches to the candidate who tries to persuade you that the question is settled, without definitely stating his own convictions on so plain a subject. I know well, and you know well, that it is not settled, and that there are powerful men, and powerful bodies of men, who are anxious to unsettle it. I trust you, and every constituency in the land, will demand of all men seeking election to the Assembly a plain and unreserved declaration on this question. Do not let a great and righteous cause, which has received the unbroken support of a vast majority of the people, be endangered by the secret machinations, or left to the doubtful forbearance, of its inveterate opponents, who are in an acknowledged minority.

Now that our railways have been carried over the mountain ranges, I am strongly of opinion that the expenditure so wisely incurred in their construction should be made more fruitful, both in returns to the Treasury and in assisting to develop our national resources, by the lines being pushed forward to the outlying portions of the colony. It is unquestionably our duty to secure our own trade, as far as it is practicable, by means of improved communication. With these views I shall direct my exertions to expanding into a national system the railway lines now in operation and in the course of construction, so that they may eventually embrace every considerable district and all classes of our producers. Any system will be incomplete which does not terminate at the waters of Port Jackson.

The time has arrived when more adequate provision should be made for the extension and the more efficient working of municipal government. A measure for this purpose suited to the settled parts of the colony would not be workable in other portions where the population is scattered and the conditions of life are very different. It seems desirable, therefore, that Parliament should deal with this important question by two separate measures, the object of both being to implant the principles of self-reliance and self-government in the people, by which alone the most desired material improvements can be satisfactorily carried out.

The interests of mining enterprise are so important that care should be taken at all times not to cripple individual exertions or the employment of capital in developing our mineral riches. Defects of a vexatious character are admitted to exist in the present law, and I shall be happy to join in any remedial measures for affording fuller scope for this great branch of industry.

With regard to the question raised in connection with settlement on the public lands in favour of relinquishing the interest agreed to be paid to the Government on the balances of conditional purchases, it must be borne in mind that this interest is part of the legal contract with the State, and is due from a limited class to the whole people. No Government could relinquish this lawful claim on the free selectors without committing a breach of trust to the rest of the people.

I have ever been in favour of preserving the British character of the population of these colonies, and I am therefore opposed to the unrestricted influx of Chinese. At different periods throughout the last 20 years I have supported measures for this purpose. But I have never joined in the outcry against the Chinese as an inferior race. On the contrary, I regard them as an educated and a powerful people, though a people entirely unfitted by an alien civilization to mingle with a British community. The question of dealing with the Chinese is one of increasing difficulty, by reason of the steady advance which the Chinese Empire is making as a political Power. I think it ought to be dealt with by the Australian colonies in concert, and have done my best to bring about this united action. But as yet no common ground of co-operation has been agreed upon. If intercolonial agreement cannot be secured, I am prepared to introduce a measure which, if carried into law, will have the practical effect of stopping this kind of immigration into New South Wales.

The law relating to the sale of intoxicating liquors calls for immediate reform, and it is my intention in the next session of Parliament to introduce a measure for this purpose, which I hope will be so maturely considered and carefully framed, in view of all conflicting interests, as to meet with little opposition.

In addition to the larger subjects which are waiting for legislation, the new Parliament has before it a career of eventful labour and great usefulness. It will be asked to consider important questions of law reform, with a view to securing greater facilities in dealing with real property, the more effectual suppression of crime, and generally more certainty and expedition in the administration of justice. Technical education, or the establishing of means, by which our youth may acquire a knowledge specially fitting them for the higher walks of mechanical construction and of the finer manufactures, and for the pursuits of art, forms a subject full of interest with immediate claims upon the Legislature. Another question intimately connected with the advancement of the colony is that of the preservation and proper provision for the growth of our timber forests. Our fish supplies also deserve the early attention of the Legislature, with a view to their efficient regulation and active development.

The Civil Service of the colony is now a body so numerous, and embracing so many interests, that it should no longer remain without organisation under the authority of an Act of Parliament, and I trust a measure will be introduced at an early date to secure as far as practicable the reward of promotion to meritorious conduct, and to protect the public alike from the abuse of patronage and from the incompetency of its servants. I shall be glad to assist in passing into law any measure calculated to accomplish these important ends.

In connection with the work of railway and road communication, the improvement of our harbours and of the navigation of our rivers should be steadily prosecuted, and any well considered expenditure for permanent improvements of this nature will at all times receive my support.

In conclusion, I desire to say that the views I have expressed are those of the Government of which I am a member. If you do me the honour of returning me as one of your members, whether in office or out of office, I shall do my utmost to give effect to them. The wellbeing of your great city is bound up in the wellbeing of the whole country, and as your representative I should consider it my privilege as well as my duty, in serving you, to endeavour to serve all classes of the population.

I remain, Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
HENRY PARKES.

EAST SYDNEY ELECTORATE.—VOTE FOR CHAS. MOORE as one of your Representatives.

TO THE ELECTORS OF EAST SYDNEY.

GENTLEMEN,—It had been my intention not to again offer myself as a candidate for parliamentary honours, but as many influential citizens have earnestly requested me to come forward, I have once more ventured to offer myself to the Electors of East Sydney. As I deem a published lengthened explanation of my opinions is not requisite, I shall merely state my political views and opinions as briefly as possible, so that every one can comprehend them at a glance, and leave to my future meetings a detailed account of the various topics.

I shall firmly uphold the present system of National Education.

A safe and permanent water scheme.

I am a Free-trader, but being in favour of all large Government contracts, such as railway rolling stock, being manufactured in the colony, provided it can be done at an expense not exceeding 10 per cent. advance on English cost.

Will strongly advocate the extension of railways.

I am in favour of the Liberty of the Press, and also the revision of some of the Law Acts.

I shall endeavour, if elected, to see that a proper progression is carried out as regards both the Civil Service and Volunteers.

I am a strong advocate for the establishment of a National School of Trade.

I am not in favour of the present system of Immigration, and would alter it by giving some inducements to farmers and agriculturists to settle in the colony.

Should strongly advocate the appointment of a Commission from the united colonies, to take into consideration the means of preventing the indiscriminate influx of Chinese.

Am totally opposed to duties on colonial exports.

I am in favour of a wheel tax, the abolition of tolls within the city and suburbs.

Would support an absentee tax.

I think the present Licensing Act not at all suitable. Would advocate first and second class houses only, and totally ignoring mere drinking shanties, which have no other accommodation. If such were the case, drunkenness, in a great measure, would be prevented, and proprietors of respectable hotels would have no objection to pay a higher licensing fee. Beyond the boundaries of the city I am in favour of local option. Would advocate the granting of licenses be delegated to a Board of three independent gentlemen, appointed by the Government.

I hope, shortly, to address the citizens in various parts of the electorate, and answer any questions that may be put to me.

Yours faithfully,
I. J. JOSEPHSON, Macquarie-street.

ROBERT FOWLER,

South Sydney,
November 12, 1880.

TO THE ELECTORS OF SOUTH SYDNEY.

Gentlemen,—

Having been requested by a large number of the Electors of South Sydney to allow myself to be nominated for the coming General Election, I with great pleasure accede to their request.

In the year 1859 I was elected one of the Aldermen for Cook Ward, and having fulfilled the duties appertaining to that office satisfactorily for a period of 12 years, I think I have a premier claim to your support in this Election.

At future dates I will hold public meetings, and fully give my opinions on the different political questions of the day; but in the meantime I here give you a brief explanation of my political views.

I am opposed to the allowing of the Free Selectors to retain the interest justly due to the State, but am of opinion that great reform is requisite in the Land Laws.

I am also not in favour of the introduction of Chinese, and would advocate that a Poll Tax would be placed upon them. I am also greatly opposed to the present system of Immigration.

The Water Supply and the Sewerage question are other important matters that will receive my most particular attention.

I am in favour of Free Trade, but think the Government ought to give preference to colonial manufactures, especially in regard to Railway, Rolling Stock, and other Native Industries.

I am greatly in favour of Railway Extensions throughout the length and breadth of the land, so as to facilitate the forwarding of produce from the interior to Sydney, thus saving the colony from being robbed of a large amount of revenue which annually goes to Melbourne and Adelaide.

The Education Act is one of great and momentous importance to the rising generation, and will receive my most earnest attention.

Another and important question has also arisen lately. I allude to the Freedom of the Press. This will also receive consideration at my hands.

And in conclusion, Gentlemen, I may state that if I obtain the confidence and support expected, I will devote my utmost endeavour to further your interest and the State in general.

I am, Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
ALEXANDER STEEL.

Devonshire and Riley streets, Sydney,
November 10, 1880.

TO THE ELECTORS OF SOUTH SYDNEY.

Gentlemen.—In consequence of the dissolution of the late Assembly, writs have been issued for calling together another Parliament, under the provisions of the new Electoral Act, one important effect of which is to enlarge the numbers of the Legislative Assembly from 73 to 108 members.

In announcing myself as a Candidate for one of the seats assigned to your electorate, I would observe that I am still addressing my old friends and constituents, although they appear under a new name. Within the limits of your present electorate all the successes of my political life have been achieved. Within those limits, as now defined, is Cook Ward, for which I was elected one of the Aldermen for the first time in 1874. I have since been twice re-elected, and am still your Municipal representative. Within those limits is also embodied a large portion of the former electorate of East Sydney, for which I was elected one of your members for the first time in 1874, have been twice re-elected since, and remained your member until the late Parliament ceased to exist.

These repeated evidences of your continuous confidence in me, both as your representative in the City Council and in the Legislative Assembly, coupled with the entire consciousness which I feel that in both capacities I have endeavoured to perform my duty faithfully towards you; that I have aided by all means at my command or in my power the moral, political, and social progress of this great city and the colony generally, and that I have not knowingly done anything to deserve your censure or disapproval,—these considerations inspire me with what I may regard as a well-founded hope that on the present occasion your votes will return me, by a large majority, to the scene of my former labours.

Were I new to public life, and soliciting your suffrages for the first time, it would be incumbent upon me to make a profession of political principles, your agreement in which or otherwise would determine the fate of my candidature. But I have been a member of Parliament too long not to have had frequent opportunities of showing my opinion by my votes; and I now appeal to your solid judgment, not by reason of what I may profess to do, but by reason of what I have already done in assisting, with others, to the best of my humble ability, to shape and direct the legislation of the country.

I may remind you that I took an active part in procuring the passing by the late Parliament of the Sydney Corporation Act, which, among other things, makes provision for cancelling the old City debt due to the Government for sewerage and water supply expenditure, amounting to nearly three-quarters of a million. This measure also secures many new sources of revenue to the citizens; gives, for the first time, power to impose rates upon Government properties and unoccupied lands, and increases the City revenue from all sources to £130,000 per annum. While this important measure was passing through committee I supported a maximum rate of 5 per cent. on the assessed value of city property, and opposed (though unsuccessfully) the proposal which makes it compulsory on the City Council to increase the rate to one shilling and fivepence in the pound in order, as alleged, to secure the annual endowment of £25,000, which I consider too dearly purchased on those terms.

With respect to the leading questions of the day, several have been dealt with by the late Parliament. The Education question has been settled for the present on broad and comprehensive principles, and the electoral system has been amended satisfactorily and many of its abuses remedied. The questions of sewerage and water supply have also been disposed of, not only for the metropolitan district, but also for the country towns. The records of Parliament will show that I have always been in my place, and have spoken and voted on these and other measures.

But the new Parliament will, most probably, be called upon to deal with other questions of at least equal importance, on which I proceed to express my views.

Immigration.—I am opposed to the present system, the effect of which is to bring to the colony persons altogether unsuited to its wants and requirements.

Municipal Institutions.—I am in favour of extending these over the whole colony, with a view to relieve the central Government, to encourage self-reliance among the people, and to distribute the cost of public improvements.

Railways.—I would still support, as I have already supported, the project of the Illawarra Railway; and on the same principle, a line from the Northern coalfields to Sydney; and I would advocate the extension of railways generally throughout the colony.

Chinese.—I am entirely opposed to the introduction of the Chinese into this colony, and have always voted for their exclusion.

Publicans' Licenses.—I am in favour of the complete abolition of the present system and the substitution of the principle of "local option," which would transfer the power of issuing licenses from the magistrates to the people, so that the people may determine whether they would have public-houses in their neighbourhood or not.

Remission of Free Selectors' Interest.—I have already voted, in Parliament, against giving up the interest due by the free selectors, and I will always resist any attempt to deprive the community of the valuable item of the public assets.

Pastoral Tenants.—A large annual additional sum of rent could be obtained from the squatters by giving them a better tenure and large leases. Revenue from this legitimate source would prevent taxation in objectionable quarters, and the squatters, in any event, are bound to contribute towards the cost of providing them with railway facilities.

Civil Service.—I am in favour of the introduction of a measure to regulate the Civil Service on a fair and equitable basis.

If I have omitted any matter of importance I will have an early opportunity of remedying the omission at one or other of the public meetings which I purpose to hold in the electorate. Meantime I may take some credit for my constant agitation for the past six years in the matter of a proper system of sewerage and drainage for the Southern portion of the electorate; and I am glad to inform you that tenders have been called for, and received, by the Government for the abolition of the nuisance so long existing at Surry Hills and along Shea's Creek.

I now, gentlemen, leave the matter in your hands. I have not coalesced with any other candidate, but prefer to stand or fall by my own merits, whatever they may be. Looking back upon six years' continuous service in your interest I can scarcely think you will fail to re-elect an old and tried public servant, and in that reasonable, nay just, expectation I shall go to the poll.

I have the honour to remain,
Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
JOHN DAVIES.

TO THE ELECTORS OF SOUTH SYDNEY.

GENTLEMEN,—Having been requested by a large number of Electors of this new and important constituency to represent and guard their interests in the new Parliament, it is with great pleasure that I accept and respond to solicitations so universally and so very generously expressed towards me.

Should I be honoured with your confidence, by electing me as one of your representatives, I can assure you that no exertion on my part shall be spared to assist in introducing and establishing wise and beneficial legislation for the advancement and prosperity of all classes of this community.

Providence has placed in our hands the management of a magnificent country, bursting with minerals of untold value; our pastoral and agricultural lands are unequalled in any part of the world; and it now remains for you, gentlemen, to select and return as your representatives men in whose ability and judgment you can repose your confidence and trust.

As most of you know me long and well, you will, I am certain, believe me when I assure you that in politics I shall be no trimmer; and, in order that you may have some idea of my views, I will now proceed with a few of the topics upon which I feel sure you will be interested.

I congratulate the electors upon escaping from the unjust and un-English clause introduced into the late Electoral Bill, by the hon. member for Camden, Mr. Thomas Garrett; there never was a greater attempt to interfere with the liberty of the subject or the freedom of election than this "Garrotting" clause. Happily the country has been spared this injustice, by the intervention of the Upper House, not by the "wisdom" of the Lower Chamber.

As your representative I shall preserve and protect the glorious privileges which, in this free country, it is our happiness to enjoy.

The Public Instruction Bill having been passed into law by the expiring Parliament, I am desirous that it should have a fair and impartial trial. By educating the masses you elevate the social and political standing of the community. I am strongly in favour of technical education, which shall have my earnest support.

I shall advocate an immediate and better system of water supply for this important city, the probable limits of which it is scarcely possible at present to conceive; but I think it the duty of the Government, before finally committing themselves to any scheme, to thoroughly investigate the advantages which the Kenny Hill [Mr. Gipps'] project is supposed to possess; and, as an alderman of this city, I consider it the duty of the Municipal Council to assist the Government in this important work. I am one of those aldermen who do not shrink from the duties and responsibilities appertaining to that office; and I shall do my utmost, even should I stand alone, in bringing about a speedy and perfect system of water supply.

Although a free trader, I am a strong advocate for all Railway Plant and Rolling Stock, or works of that character, which will tend to develop the vast mineral and other resources of this country, and give employment to our artisan population, being manufactured here, and, as far as possible, encourage colonial industries. I object to the importation of building materials, such as doors, architraves, &c., the produce of prison labour in America, to the injury of our own mechanics, and brought here in the American mail steamers, subsidized by the Government of this country, and for which the working man is taxed. I do not like to see our omnibuses coming from the same quarter. I object to the tax on wool and coal exported from the colony.

You are all perhaps aware that I am a firm believer in the Eight Hour System, and shall endeavour to make this matter the subject of future legislation.

The legislation on the subject of Trade Unions shall also receive my attention, in order that the law may be made to protect these bodies from fraud by their officers and others, and that they may have all the protection afforded to other friendly societies.

A subject which has been neglected for a long period, and which also deserves serious attention, shall be made the subject of action in Parliament. I refer to the inspection of steam boilers and engines on land, many of which are at present in much need of periodical supervision.

I fully believe that full and ample compensation should be awarded to workmen who, by imperfect appliances provided by employers, receive injury on their works.

With reference to the important subject of Immigration, I have been distressed to see numbers of fine able-bodied men brought to these shores during the past two years, and absolutely unable to find work; they either of necessity become a burden to the State or the hospitality of their friends. In cases like this the Government should step in and find employment, by proceeding with large public works. I strongly object to Chinese immigration; they unfairly compete with our Christian labour, and they do not pay their fair share of taxation.

I need hardly inform the intelligent electors of South Sydney that I do not seek a Government billet, and I am opposed to the payment of members of Parliament. Our Victorian cousins have, by adopting that unwise course, secured as nice a collection of "sugar loafers" as are to be found on the face of this earth.

I shall endeavour without delay to alter the present unsatisfactory and disgraceful manner under which publicans licenses are obtained, and I think the scenes lately enacted in the Police Courts show the necessity for fresh legislation on this subject.

I shall oppose the remission of interest on balances due by land selectors; I shall never be a party to sacrifice the interest of one class of the community for the benefit of the other—this is a debt legitimately contracted, and should be discharged. We have been so frequently promised full, plain, and comprehensive legislation respecting our lands, that I hope when the new and enlarged Parliament assembles men will be forthcoming with sufficient ability to grasp the whole question, with at least some show of statesmanship, and it shall be my pleasing duty to assist in bringing this very desirable subject, and others connected with it, to a satisfactory settlement.

The Sewage question is another most important matter, and shall have my most careful consideration.

Shea's Creek, running southwards between Moore Park and the Surry Hills, long neglected by your representatives, shall also receive my attention, and that foul and disgusting stream, so injurious to the health of the residents, and so great a disgrace to former members, must no longer be allowed to mar the beauty of the surrounding country.

This city is so intimately connected with the Civil Service branch of our Government that I think, as no member of the present Administration is likely to touch the subject, it may be considered to come within the duty of a city member to see a Civil Service law established; it will be better for the State, and give more confidence to the Civil servant, and I shall therefore endeavour to secure legislation in this line also.

At present I do not know why one or two commissions moved for in Parliament were allowed to lapse; but I also promise and that undertake such departments of the Government of this colony as may need attention shall receive mine, and, as I know something of the constitution of the various branches of this portion of the "body politic," I may be of some service in this direction also.

I am a strong advocate for the extension of municipal government, and I hope to be able to do something substantial in this direction. In this matter, we should not be behind the other colonies so far as we are at present.

It shall be my duty to assist our neighbours at St. Leonards in their efforts to secure more perfect communication between that portion of the suburbs and the city; and now that we are so regularly supplied with ocean steamers, and the tall mast of the merchantman is almost a thing of the past, I see no reason why a bridge should not be constructed, so as to allow free scope to our harbour traffic.

I feel confident, from all we heard and read on the subject of freedom of the Press, you will probably agree with me in thinking that the time has arrived when legislation on this subject should receive the attention of Parliament, in order that perfect freedom in the expression of our opinion on the conduct of our rulers may be secured to us by such laws as will prevent in future the unseemly and lamentable occurences of the past.

I think I may with some degree of satisfaction bring before your notice my labours in the Municipal Council. I have strenuously exerted myself to bring about a reform in the management of that institution, and the citizens are aware that I have in a very great measure exposed many of the abuses which have landed this Municipality in the "small debt" of over six hundred thousand pounds. It is also my pleasant duty to inform the electors of South Sydney, and the citizens generally, that I have succeeded, after repeated attempts and much opposition from some aldermen, in obtaining for the year 1881 a re-assessment and re-valuation of all city properties, thereby, I hope, relieving the ratepayers from unjust and excessive taxation, of which they have had some experience during the current year.

I am in favour of connecting by railway with the metropolis the rich coal and pasture lands of Illawarra, and also our rich coal-fields to the north.

Another important matter which requires immediate legislation are the laws affecting colonial mercantile marine.

Our factories and workshops require some regulation by law. I object to the mixing of sexes together in the factory workrooms, and separate entrances should be provided leading into the factories.

I shall also advocate and support that desirable object, federation of the Australian colonies.

I come before you in the fullest sense of the term an independent candidate, with the sole object of benefiting my native land; and as most of you know me to be a man of my word, I need scarcely assure you that, should you so far honour me as to send me as your representative in Parliament, I will in return endeavour to elevate the character of our country, our laws, and make this land attractive to the stranger, and secure happy homes for yourselves and families.

I am, Gentlemen, your obedient servant,
EDWARD HORDERN.

Hon. Secs.

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST SYDNEY.

Gentlemen,—I thank you very much for the liberal promises of support which I have received in every part of the Electorate, but since I first asked you for your suffrages, some advocates of principles I believe to be for the welfare of the community have come forward, men who have been before you for years, of whose intention to stand for West Sydney I was not aware when I first I offered you my services. It would, therefore, jeopardise the return to Parliament of some one to represent for West Sydney the principle of encouragement to colonial industries (by imposing duties on imported manufactured articles) were I to contest the election. I therefore beg to withdraw my candidature, and I remain, your obedient servant, R. C. LUSCOMBE, Nithsdale-street, Hyde Park.

JOHN WILLIAMS,
Returning-Officer.

West Sydney,
November 11th, 1880.

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST SYDNEY.

Gentlemen,—In presenting myself before you as a candidate for your suffrages, I am free from the embarrassment that beset me when you first returned me—an untried man—as your representative to Parliament. The efforts in your behalf I then pledged myself to make—the devotion to your interests that I promised to bestow—have been tested by time and experience; and if I did not feel that I had faithfully, fearlessly, and with all the ability I possess discharged my duties, I should not now be emboldened to solicit your votes at the forthcoming election in the frank and confident manner in which I now solicit them. You have done me high honour by giving me your confidence at a time when I was not generally known in public life; and I have endeavoured to prove my gratitude and the soundness of my principles by never faltering in any duty on your behalf. Our relations are, therefore, clearly defined, and will not, I trust, be prematurely brought to a close.

As I shall have a few excellent opportunities of addressing you on the paramount political questions of the day before I appear before you on the hustings, I need now only briefly recapitulate those principles on which I think I am in accord with the majority of those whom I address, and which I maintain should be the test of an honourable and independent candidature.

Although I do not regard the present education system as a truly national one, yet as it has been just determined upon by the authoritative voice of Parliament, I think it would be useless to re-open the question till experience has shown the working of the Act. And I altogether deprecate the attempts of the Premier to revive this question as an electioneering cry.

I look upon the financial position of the colony as the real issue now before the constituencies. With the magnificent estate we have at our disposal, or, rather, in trust for generations unborn, I see no necessity whatever for extra taxation. With a more equitable fixity of tenure conceded to the lessees of Crown lands, and a better administration of the land laws generally, accompanied with strict economy in all departments of the public service, I see no necessity whatever for imposing extra duties on the people, and I shall always oppose, as I have heretofore done, those weak expedients of shifty financiers—excise duties and imposts on raw material. If extra money must be raised to carry on public works and the public service, it should be derived from those who participate most largely in the benefits of that service—viz., the owners of large estates and absentees, who derive immense sums of money from the colony without any appreciable return—certainly none to the Colonial Treasury. I think no class should be more promptly pressed to bear a share in the public burdens than these, inasmuch as their properties must have increased 100 per cent. in value through the construction of public works and other expenditure. In order to prevent fiscal exaction on the class least able to bear it, and as a means of making ends meet, as well as for the conservation of the public honour, I am averse to the remission of interest on Free Selectors' balances. Under the Improvement Clauses of the late Land Act, a liberal concession has been made to bona fide settlers, many of whom know well that to do away with the interest would be simply to give a bonus to the most unscrupulous dummies and land sharks in the community.

You know, gentlemen, that I am a free-trader; but I am prepared to foster struggling industries. There are some articles in the tariff which I would relieve from taxation altogether, and there are others which should be included in it—such as imported carriages, jewellery, and other articles of luxury. These restrictions would not interfere with our general mercantile relations with civilized nations, nor keep a single ship away from our ports. To all schemes of "taxing the many for the benefit of the few," I am not only averse, but inveterately hostile. On this point you may fearlessly repose confidence in my zeal to give effect to the principles just expressed.

The influx of Chinese I look upon with unmitigated disgust. I will co-operate with anybody, whether it be a Ministry or Parliamentary party, which will take steps to repress this objectionable immigration, or bring it within the terms of such sharp conditions as will modify the evils it is calculated to occasion.

Recent disasters on our coast have shown the urgent necessity which exists for the amendment of the laws relating to our mercantile marine, and it will be my endeavour, if elected your member, to secure legislative protection for our sailors, in order that no more lives may be lost in coffin ships sailing from the ports of New South Wales.

In a word, I avow myself a Free-trade Liberal, prepared to place our finances on a solid basis; to extend the principle of local self-government throughout the colony; to control the liquor traffic by district Boards under competent presiding officers; and to extend the blessing of education, by means of night schools and mechanics institutes, to those adults whom circumstances have prevented from receiving early mental training.

If I may be permitted to take some pride in my persistent Legislative efforts in the past, I trust that the success that attended those efforts will give you some assurance of my action hereafter. Should I secure your confidence, I will redouble my former zeal in your service; and as I can now more freely than heretofore devote my time to Parliamentary duty, you may rest assured that you will find in me a faithful, vigilant, and fearless representative,

I am, gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
DANIEL O'CONNOR.

The attendance of the electors of West Sydney is respectfully invited.

And steadfastly oppose the introduction of Chinese.

TO THE ELECTORS OF CANTERBURY.

Gentlemen,—

Having been requested by numerous friends in your electorate to offer myself as a candidate for your suffrages in the forthcoming election, I have much pleasure, after duly considering the matter, in placing my services at your disposal.

As it is my intention to visit all parts of the electorate and fully explain my views on the leading questions of the day, it will not be necessary for me to go into minute particulars here, beyond giving you a brief outline of my opinions.

I am totally opposed to the remission of interest on conditional purchases, knowing that it would be an act of injustice to the large majority of the taxpayers of the colony.

With regard to the water supply to the city, I feel strongly disposed to have the proposal made by Mr. Gipps thoroughly tested, with a view to having an abundant and lasting supply of water for the city and suburbs.

I am a staunch freetrader.

For years past I have been a consistent advocate for the construction of a railway to Illawarra, and shall continue to exert every effort in my power to bring about such a desirable work.

I am totally against the present indiscriminate system of immigration, but would support the Government in the exercise of a judicious selection of persons to be introduced here.

I am totally opposed to the payment of members.

I would support the introduction of an amended Licensing Bill, and am in favour of the principle of local option.

I am strongly opposed to the introduction of Chinese.

I am in favour of the sewerage system being extended to the suburbs, and I look upon the depositing of sewage at Cook's River as a disgrace.

I am a firm advocate of the extension of municipal government.

I would support the introduction of a bill something similar to the Plimsoll Act at home, as I think, looking at recent disastrous instances, the present system of allowing unseaworthy vessels to leave our ports is most inhuman, and should be remedied at once.

As regards the education question, I am in favour of giving the Act recently passed a fair trial; however, I shall give you an early opportunity of hearing my views in full on the above questions and other matters affecting your interests. And as I intend to go to the poll, I earnestly beg to solicit your support, as I have the means and the time at my disposal to serve you, should you honour me by a place as one of your representatives.

I am, Gentlemen,
Your faithful servant,

TO THE ELECTORS OF EAST SYDNEY.

Gentlemen,—Parliament having been dissolved, and the seat to which you elected me on a recent memorable occasion having become vacant, I have again the honour to offer myself as a candidate for your suffrages.

During my candidature at the last election for East Sydney, I had the opportunity of addressing you in various parts of the Electorate with regard to my views and opinions on the principal political questions of the day, and during the short time I had the honour to represent you in the Legislative Assembly I took every available opportunity of expressing those opininions, and of voting in accordance with them. Some of the subjects referred to during the past session of Parliament were embodied in the legislation of the country, while others, still unsettled, remain, I trust, to be similarly treated.

Within the last few days I have taken the opportunity of examining my printed address, as well as the Press reports of my speeches to my fellow electors before my return; and, having compared them with the reports of my speeches in Hansard, as delivered in Parliament, and with my votes, I can conscientiously assert that I have fulfilled every pledge, and supported every measure in strict accordance with the principles of my address and my speeches before my return.

I shall take an early opportunity of addressing you fully on the various public questions which are likely to become the subject of consideration in the next Parliament.

I need scarcely add that should you again honour me by returning me as one of your representatives, my best efforts shall be employed for the welfare of the country.

ARTHUR RENWICK.

9th November, 1880.

TO THE ELECTORS OF EAST SYDNEY.

Gentlemen,—Having been invited by a large and influential number of my fellow-citizens to represent them in the new Parliament, I have no hesitation in acceding to the request; and now place myself in your hands, and state my opinions on the leading topics of the day which shall have my strenuous support to carry out, if I am elected by you to a seat in the Legislature of the country.

Water Supply.—I have always been foremost in advocating a better supply of water to the city and suburbs, and consider the Botany dams have done good service and should be kept as an auxiliary. I maintain that the reserve should be planted with trees to form pleasure grounds, which would not affect the water; and I will oppose any proposition to sell the Lachlan water reserve, even when the Upper Nepean scheme is carried out. I may further add that, at the present rate of increase of population, the city and suburbs will shortly require all the supply of water by gravitation we can get, as well as the proposed schemes of Kenny Hill and Prospect Hill Reservoirs.

I am a thorough Freetrader, knowing from a long life experience that a steady adherence to free trade principles is the only safe path to true prosperity for any country and people. But, on the other hand, I shall advocate the fostering of colonial industries by insisting on all works of a public nature that can be manufactured in the colony, whether in the shape of rolling stock for railways, carpenters' and joiners' works, and numerous other articles that can be made of equal quality and cost to those imported, shall be given to the artisans here in preference to importing them from abroad.

The Public Instruction Act does not come into full working order until 1882. I am in favour of the whole of the clauses, and will not disturb any of the provisions. I will also give my entire support to the establishing of a Technical College, where every young man and artisan in the colony can have the full benefit of a technical education.

I am of opinion that the Public Licensing Act should be taken into consideration as soon as the new Parliament meets, and a radical change should be effected in the present system. If any Acts require altering, those connected with the liquor trade should receive more attention from the Legislature than any others. Committees should be appointed by ballot, and evidence taken from those in the trade and others who could be relied on, and whose experience might be considered conclusive.

Immigration, if to be continued, must consist of a more useful class of farm labourers and female servants to meet the demands of employers; and I will never consent to overcrowding the colony with more labour than can be utilized with advantage to all.

I am thoroughly opposed to Chinese immigration, and will endeavour to bring about united action of all the colonies upon this vexed question, and if not successful will oppose their ingress to the colony.

Sanitary measures will have more attention than they have ever had, if I should be your representative.

Railways should be carried out with a vigorous policy; and I will support the constructing of a line to Illawarra, as well as a line connecting the Northern ports with Port Jackson; but no scheme will have my advocacy without the Redfern terminus is joined by line to the Circular Quay.

The remission of interest on free selectors' balances shall have my persistent opposition, being contrary to equity and justice to the rest of the community, besides upsetting the fiscal policy of the country.

I wish it to be distinctly understood that I do not believe in the export duties on wool and coal, unless absolutely necessary for revenue purposes, and then only for a limited period; it would be preferable to have a comprehensive scheme of taxation on land and property which would reach the absentees.

Recreation Grounds for the people I have always had an interest in, believing it right where a new township is formed a sufficient area should be reserved for the health and recreation of the people. My efforts for the city in every quarter are an earnest that I shall not neglect the carrying out of these necessary "lungs" for the colony.

I believe the interests of the country would be better served by the formation of a Board of Works for the Metropolitan District, so as to have control over the Water, Sewerage, Tolls, &c., &c.

I am in favour of a wheel-tax, considering that it would be a more equitable municipal rate than the present system of hawkers' licenses, which I believe to be oppressive to the poorer classes.

In conclusion, you are aware I have always been more of a worker than a talker; and as I am retiring from business at the end of this year, I shall have ample time to attend to your interests, if favoured with your support.

I need hardly remind you that I seek no office or emolument; my whole time will be devoted to the welfare of the colony.

I am, Gentlemen,
Yours faithfully,
CHAS. MOORE.

TO THE ELECTORS OF EAST SYDNEY.

PARKES AND PROCTOR.

Fellow Electors,—On the day of Nomination, you should insist upon Sir Henry Parkes explaining the action he took to prevent Mr. Proctor from delivering his Sunday Lecture at the Theatre Royal.

You are reminded that the Attorney-General advised Sir H. Parkes that nothing could be done to stop the lecture; that Sir H. Parkes then threatened Mr. Lazar to withdraw his license if the lecture was delivered; and that he continued the threat, although he was made aware that Mr. Lazar had underlet the theatre to Mr. Garner for a term; that Mr. Garner had let the Sundays to Mr. Bright, and that Mr. Bright had let the particular Sunday to Mr. Proctor.

That is to say,—Sir Henry Parkes knew that Mr. Lazar, whom he selected for punishment in the event of the lecture being delivered, had no power over Mr. Proctor; and yet he played upon the fears of the former, and probably traded upon the generosity of the latter, to enable him to carry his point.

I ask, not only those of you who were among the 2000 persons shut out of the Theatre Royal on the evening of the 5th September, but also those of you who disapprove of Sunday lecturing,—What do you think of the means employed?

Is a man capable of such an act "a fit and proper person" to represent the principal electorate of the colony?

SOUTH SYDNEY ELECTION.

WILLIAM THOMAS POOLE, J.P.

WHO IS MR. POOLE?
is being often asked.

We are credibly informed that
Mr. POOLE
has been in this colony 28 years.

ALL THAT TIME
he has
BEEN ENGAGED in
LARGE BUILDING CONTRACTS.

He erected the
FIRST STEAM HAMMER
ever used in the
COLONY.

HE WAS ONE OF THE FIRST to INTRODUCE SUGAR-MAKING
MACHINERY
in the
COLONY.

HE HAS BEEN ENGAGED as a CONTRACTOR on the
VARIOUS PUBLIC WORKS of the
COLONY,
RAILWAYS, SEWERS, and RESERVOIRS.

His having successfully carried out these large engagements to the SATISFACTION of the GOVERNMENT, and also to his own advantage, enables him to devote his time, means, and ability to SERVE the PUBLIC
in PARLIAMENT,
and he now offers to do so, not like some of those who have made fortunes here and go to spend them in other countries.
He is now spending the fruits of his industry
in erecting a large block of buildings in Redfern, near the Town Hall.

GO AND HEAR HIM
at his
NEXT MEETING, and
JUDGE FOR YOURSELVES.

SOUTH SYDNEY ELECTION.

A Public MEETING of the Friends and Supporters of WILLIAM THOMAS POOLE will be held at
HOLTERMANN'S HOTEL,
Abercrombie-street, on
THIS (Saturday) EVENING, at 8 o'clock.
And at
WRIGHT'S GOLDEN FLEECE HOTEL, Haymarket, on MONDAY EVENING, at 8 o'clock.

Mr. POOLE will ADDRESS the Meetings.

ANDREW ALLAN, Hon. Sec.

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST SYDNEY.

Gentlemen,—I have the honour to solicit you votes and interest, as a candidate seeking your suffrages at the general election.

The principles I will advocate, if elected, are:—

1. A reform in the fiscal system, such reform to be based upon equitable principles.

2. The utmost economy, consistent with efficiency, in the Public Service.

3. A Civil Service Bill under which the public service may be improved, and the interests and rights of the Government employees protected against injustice from political influences.

4. The preservation of the Public Schools Act in its integrity.

5. A local option measure, by which the electors in the various electorates may decide the licensing question according to their will.

6. A thorough and impartial investigation of the merits of the Gipps' Kenny Hill water scheme.

7. The extension of railways throughout the colony, and the immediate construction of the line to Illawarra.

8. The retention of Government contracts within the colony.

I will strongly oppose Chinese immigration on national grounds, also the repudiation of engagements entered into by the free-selectors as an injustice to the great majority of our people.

I shall support, as I have always done, the eight-hours movement and the Saturday half-holiday.

Among other matters, I am in favour of a measure to ensure the protection of workmen from accident by means of defective machinery; and a law to enforce, under Government control, a thorough system of marine survey, to prevent unseaworthy ships from going to sea; and the appointment of a Royal Commission to inquire into the working of Friendly Societies.

I shall have the honour of meeting you in the various parts of the electorate before the day of election, and will then enter more fully into explanation of my views on the above subjects.

I remain
Your obedient servant,
FRANCIS ABIGAIL.

Parramatta, November, 1880.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE ELECTORATE OF THE HAWKESBURY.

Gentlemen,—Parliament having been dissolved by proclamation, which appeared in to-day's papers, I beg to announce myself as a candidate for re-election, and confidently solicit a renewal of your suffrages.

During the three years which I have had the honour of representing the Hawkesbury, I have endeavoured conscientiously to discharge the duties devolving upon me. I gave a hearty support to the new Public Schools Act, and to the several other useful measures introduced into Parliament by the existing Government. As to local matters I have done my best—as I think your candour will admit—to promote the best interests of the district, not omitting those connected with the welfare of the two principal towns, Windsor and Richmond, now incorporated in the electorate.

I endeavoured, as you are aware, to obtain two members for the district, but though unsuccessful it was through no fault of mine; whilst I have never hesitated to oppose proposals which I considered detrimental to the true progress of the country.

For the future, I will promise, if elected, to pursue the same independent and careful course for your interests and the interests of the colony generally which I have hitherto followed.

I will endeavour to keep down unnecessary taxation, and advocate retrenchment, wherever practicable, in the public service.

I purpose holding meetings at the various centres of population throughout the district prior to the day of election, when I will enter more fully into public questions than I deem it necessary to do in a published address. Due notice of these meetings will be given.

And, with many thanks for your past confidence in me,
I remain, your most obedient servant,
ALEXANDER BOWMAN.

W. M. HUME, } Hon.
J. JACKSON, } Secs.

TO THE ELECTORS OF REDFERN.

Gentlemen,—I would indeed be a man of far less than ordinary susceptibilities were I to remain any longer unmoved by the repeated and unanimous solicitations which I have received from all classes in your electorate to allow myself to be nominated as one of your representatives in the ensuing Parliament. The large and influential requisitions which I have received, while conveying unmistakeably to my mind the grateful conviction of the very high place which I have had the good fortune to secure in your regard, have at the same time formed the subject of my most anxious consideration. I have a full appreciation of the dignity and responsibility of the position to which you express such a unanimous wish that I should aspire, and my hesitation to accede to your very flattering request has been simply due to a diffidence which I felt in my own powers of doing justice to the generous confidence with which you have honoured me. However, since it appears that you are still desirous that I should accept the exalted position of one of your representatives I am perfectly content to trust to your united judgment rather than to my individual one, and I have now much pleasure in placing whatever abilities you are pleased to accredit me with at your entire disposal.

As a public man, I have never figured very prominently outside the boundaries of Redfern, but my intimate connection with the municipal progress of one of the most important boroughs in your constituency has served to identify me in a large measure with the advancement of the electorate, and has also given me an opportunity of becoming fully acquainted with its requirements; so that, if you should elect me, you will not be returning a man who will have to learn your wants, but one whose direct interests are bound up in yours. I am in favour of introducing a complete system of reform in the land laws of the colony, so as to simplify the complicated official machinery by which the alienation of Crown lands is at present conducted, and to offer greater facilities to the people who wish to establish homes for themselves and their posterity throughout the country. I am opposed to the remission of interest upon conditional purchases, as, from a long and varied experience of selectors' grievances, I am satisfied that this cry is simply raised by a few interested persons, and that the general body of the selectors look upon it as a just debt, which they are perfectly willing to discharge. With reference to the education question, I would support the present Act, on the ground that it is the duty of every good citizen to uphold the duly constituted law of the land as long as it proves satisfactory to a great majority of the people. After a long commercial experience, I have imbibed a thorough appreciation of the benefits of free trade, and although advocating every legitimate species of encouragement and patronage to local industries, I would be no party to the introduction of a rigid protective policy, the effect of which would be to put money in the pockets of the few at the expense of the man. With reference to the question of assisted immigration, I am in favour of a system which would limit the number of persons arriving here, so that they might only be introduced at times when the population would be in a fit state to absorb them. I am opposed altogether to the influx of Chinese, as their habits are incompatible with European civilization, and their coming here in large numbers cannot fail to deteriorate the British tone of the community. I am in favour of a reform in our licensing system, with the view of placing increased power in the hands of the people.

Although coming into the field at rather a late period of the electoral campaign, I shall nevertheless have an opportunity of meeting you before the nomination, and entering into a fuller explanation of my views, which I trust will find a general approval amongst you. In conclusion, I have only to say that should you do me the honour of returning me, my highest ambition will be to act throughout the whole of my Parliamentary career in a manner which will enable me at the next dissolution to return the trust you reposed in me as unsullied as I received it, and the consciousness that I had been in any way instrumental in advancing the interests of Redfern would be a far deeper gratification to me than even the high honour you spontaneously desire to confer upon me.

I remain, Gentlemen,
Yours faithfully,
P. HOGAN.

TO THE ELECTORS OF ST. LEONARDS.

Gentlemen,—At the last general election, in 1877, I was elected by the unanimous voice of the electors of St. Leonards. I made a promise that I would continue to represent you in Parliament so long as you might choose to repose confidence in me as your representative. In performance of that promise I now offer myself as a candidate for the representation of your electorate in the Legislative Assembly.

As I have been before the public for some 20 years, and as my opinions on political and social subjects are familiar to you, I think that I need not in this address enter upon them. I will arrange to hold meetings throughout the electorate, when I will have much pleasure in giving an account of my stewardship and explaining what, in my opinion, should be the course of future legislation on the many subjects that should engage the attention of the new Parliament.

I have thus briefly addressed you because there is no particular question arising out of the present dissolution of Parliament.

I have the honour to be,
Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
JAMES S. FARNELL.

OUR BRISBANE LETTER.

BRISBANE, Nov. 9.

No bulletin of a battle was ever waited for with much more anxiety than a certain section of our public waited for the publication of what, in brief, is called the "Steel Rails Report." The official title of the document is "Report of the Select Committee on the purchase and freight of Steel Rails, Mr. Hemmant's Petition, and all matters connected therewith." On the opening day of the session the leader of the Opposition read a petition from Mr. Hemmant (an ex-Minister, now resident in London), to which petition it has been necessary for me to refer several times during the session. It will be sufficient for present purposes to remind the reader that it contained charges against the Premier and the Colonial Secretary which have been kept hanging over their heads for four months; which have given a little preliminary work, with more to follow, to the barristers; and which have furnished darts, more or less venomous, for general use by the Opposition against the Ministry. The session has been characterised by an unusual amount of warm feeling, and this may, roughly speaking, be traceable entirely to Mr. Hemmant's petition. After one of the hottest debates ever heard in the House, and which occupied the first week of the session, a Select Committee was appointed to inquire into the charges of the petitioner. Some persons might have imagined that the time, if any, for the hot debate was after, and not before, an inquiry into the truth of the allegations made; but, however that may be, the charges were brought and amplified, and by many persons accepted as gospel before the committee was appointed.

The chairman of that committee on Friday last laid his report upon the table. The evidence had been previously given to the public in five instalments, making altogether, with appendices, 172 pages, the evidence alone running to the respectable length of 2658 questions and answers. The report of itself is a document of forty-eight pages; and a protest, signed by the members representing the Opposition, viz., Mr. Griffith, Mr. Dickson, and Mr. M'Lean, occupies nine pages more printed matter than the report itself. The general purport of the report is that there is something wrong somewhere, and that the Government should continue the inquiry in England.

The report proper very tersely, but very temperately, deals with the general allegations of Mr. Hemmant's petition, under the headings of "Contract for Steel Rails," "Freight of Rails," "Charges," "Working of the London Office," "Brokers' Association," "Contractors," and "Contracts for Railway Material." The contract for steel rails is undoubtedly a matter that at present no person can thoroughly explain. In October last, it seems, a clever gentleman named Thomassen, representing Ibbotson, Brothers, of Sheffield, visited Brisbane, and a memorandum of agreement was entered into between him and the Secretary for Works, Mr. Macrossan, for the supply by Messrs. Ibbotson of 42,000 tons, of steel rails at certain prices; but there was a proviso whereby such agreement should be subject to ratification in England within three months from date. Mr. Thomassen, by some means or other, managed so that the agreement should be binding only upon the Government; in other words, the firm of which he was agent was furnished with a loophole of escape. The committee, in their report, express an opinion that it was an error of judgment in the Minister for Works to bind the Government by an agreement which did not bind the other contracting party; though they added a belief that his reason for doing so was his anxiety to secure for the colony the favourable terms above stated. While the negociations between the Minister for Works and Mr. Thomassen were pending, the latter entered into a contingent agreement with Mr. M'Eacharn, partner in the firm of M'Ilwraith and M'Eacharn, of London, by which he bound them to carry the rails to Queensland at certain rates of freight. There was alleged to have been some bungling in the telegraphing between Mr. M'Eacharn and his firm, but the result was very clear. Mr. Andrew M'Ilwraith came to the conclusion that Mr. M'Eacharn had bound the firm, in conjunction with Ibbotson Brothers' to supply the Queensland Government with rails, and as the price of rails was then steadily rising, he forthwith contracted with three several companies for 30,000 tons of steel rails, at the price of £6 a ton. The post, as it often has to do, corrected the telegraph, and when Mr. Eacharn's letter reached London Mr. Andrew M'Ilwraith found that there had been no contract for supplying the Queensland Government with rails; whereupon the said Mr. M'Ilwraith sold 25,000 tons of rails—seven-eighths—at an average price of £9 8s. 2d. per ton, thereby clearing a large profit on the transaction.

The committee evidently do not think highly of some of Mr. Thomassen's evidence. He had explained in the committee room that his course of action was owing to a telegram from his principals having been mutilated in transmission; but as the rest of the telegram was inconsistent with this interpretation, the committee say they cannot accept the explanation. About this time the Premier himself goes to England, and on the 22nd December finds that Messrs. Ibbotson refuse to ratify the contract entered into by their agent and partner (Mr. Thomassen), rails and all kinds of railway material having risen very materially in price during the interval. By the direction of the Premier tenders were called for, and the Haslam Engineering Company secured the contract at £9 18s. 6d. per ton. It was suggested, and the committee thinks it probable, that the rails are those that had been bought by Mr. Andrew M'Ilwraith under the circumstances abovementioned; and the groundwork for such a suspicion is that by some extraordinary mistake an invoice was sent to the Agent-General's office, not by the contracting company, but by one of the firms making rails for the contractors, and that in this invoice the rails were charged at £6 per ton. The question of course arises whether Mr. Andrew M'Ilwraith had bought these rails as an agent for the Queensland Government. The evidence upon that point is confused and contradictory; but the committee report that there is no evidence to show that he acted as an agent, and leaving the inference that it was an ordinary business transaction. Upon this subject the members of the committee, whose protest occupies so many pages of the printed report, dissent from the committee's finding as to the contracts, alleging that Mr. M'Eachern's evidence was not satisfactory; they also throw the blame of the one-sided contract upon the Minister for Works. The protest further says that two of M'Eachern's letters were mutilated by actual excisions to such an extent that they are bound to suspend their judgment until the whole truth is disclosed.

The question of freight is soon disposed of by the committee. They think that the condition attached to the tender for bringing 15,000 tons of rails to the colony, viz., that rails were to be sent by full cargo ships, was a mistake; and they do not consider that the 38s. 6d. per ton, at which M'Ilwraith, M'Eachern, and Co. became the lowest tenderers, was excessive for full-cargo ships. It had been conclusively proved, however, that part of the rails came come out in berth ships, the same freight being paid as for full cargo ships. The committee, therefore, cannot avoid the conclusion that the interests of the colony have grievously suffered; and much of the blame is thrown upon Mr. Hamilton, the dismissed secretary, who was one of the principal witnesses against the Government before the committee, and who came out in hot haste for the purpose of giving evidence.

Upon the charges made against the Agent-General, and Mr. Ashwell, the consulting engineer in the Agent-General's office (also relative of the M'Ilwraith's), of favouring the firm of M'Ilwraith, M'Eachern, and Co., the committee decline to give an opinion on the evidence before them; but since the impartiality of the Agent-General in conducting the Government business is a matter of vital importance, they recommend the House to take such steps for further investigation "as may seem fit." The same with a charge brought by Mr. Hamilton, which involves the honour of the Premier, the charge being that the Premier and Ashwell, who was a shareholder in the contracting firm, paid a visit to the works where the rails were being rolled, and received information about the prices of the contract, the implication being that the visit was paid, either for the purpose of inquiry, or to prevent any inquiry disclosing damaging facts. Against this is the Premier's point-blank denial. But the committee think there are many other questions connected with rails and freight contracts, and that further investigation should take place.

As for the London office the committee have no hesitation in pronouncing that owing to the differences between the Agent-General and Mr. Hamilton, his secretary, the office was in a state of great disorganization. Mr. Hamilton's conduct is described as particularly culpable, and part of his evidence "hardly credible, supposing the Agent-General to be sane;" and the report adds the following words: "It should also be noted that the whole of the serious charges made or implied against the Agent-General and the Premier, rests upon the unsupported evidence of this witness, who contradicts himself, and is contradicted by others, and whose conduct in the London office was such that your committee believe the Agent-General neglected his duty in not suspending his secretary a year before his dismissal, and reporting him to the Colonial Secretary." It is only fair to say that the protestors dissent from these conclusions, being of opinion that the facts are not yet sufficiently investigated to allow of any definite judgment on the point.

The evidence points to the existence of a ring of shipbrokers in London to regulate the Queensland trade; and the committee are of opinion that, instead of benefiting all parties concerned, as one of the witnesses suggested, the little association has been formed to further the interests of the members. The committee are also of opinion that the allegation that the Premier and the Colonial Secretary are Government contractors, by being shareholders in the "Scottish Hero" and other vessels, has not been sustained. From this conclusion Mr. Griffith and his colleagues dissent; and the strongest thing they say touching the steel rails contract is the following:—"With the information at present at our command we can only express our surprise that a transaction so transparently irregular should have been allowed to take place in the Agent-General's office during the Premier's presence in England, by means of which the colony has sustained an enormous loss, to the advantage of gentlemen connected by blood and marriage with the Premier and the professional adviser of the colony." The general conclusion to which they come is that the allegations of fact in Hemmant's petition have been borne out by evidence; that the real nature of the transactions is not fully disclosed, and that therefore a Royal Commission to be nominated by the House should be appointed to prosecute the investigation in England; that the assistance of the Imperial Government shall be asked for the purpose of conferring upon the Commissioners such powers as would secure in England the desired information.

The issues on both sides are now, therefore, to this extent, fairly before the House, and the public await with something of impatience the debate which it is anticipated will arise on the motion for the adoption of the report double-barrelled. As the question is now more than ever sub judice, and as the leader of the Opposition and his colleagues have explained their reasons for protesting against the report in the most exhaustive manner, it is scarcely likely that the debate will be a long one. It is rumoured, however, that some of the proceedings of the committee were characterised by not a little warmth of feeling, and there may possibly be a good deal of explosive material to get rid of when the valve of secrecy is opened. The evidence is so voluminous on the subject-matter, so involved in details, that it may safely be said that the general public cannot have at present a very clear idea of what the excitement is about, and an evening's debate will assist to enlighten them materially. The committee were equally divided, Messrs. Perkins, Macrossan, Morehead, and the chairman being in favour of the report; and Messrs. Griffith, Dickson, and M'Lean against it. In other words, the committee was a party one, and the result to the public who do not view the question through party spectacles is not satisfactory.

CORONER'S INQUEST.

The City Coroner yesterday, at the Royal Domain Hotel, resumed the inquest touching the death of the infant Mary Robinson. The evidence already taken showed that the deceased had been entrusted to the care of Mrs. Agnew about nine months ago, and that that woman had neglected her. The following additional evidence was elicited. Mary Ann Headid, recalled, deposed that she had heard the deceased crying many a night when Mrs. Agnew was drunk. To Mrs. Agnew: She had certainly neglected the child while witness lived in her house. Sister Mary De Sales deposed that she resided at the Convent, Victoria-street, and that she knew Mrs. Agnew; she recommended her about nine or ten months ago as nurse to some one who applied at the Convent; that person was a lady whom she knew; the arrangement, witness believed, was that Mrs. Agnew should get 15s. a week; a child was brought to the convent shortly after that by Mrs. Agnew, and baptized by the name of Mary Robinson, and that was the only time witness saw the child; witness was not aware that Mrs. Agnew made any statements respecting the child at that time; witness had nothing to do with the payment of the money for the maintenance of the deceased. Sister Mary Clare, resident at Woollahra Convent, saw Mrs. Agnew about nine months ago, and asked her if she would take charge of a child, she assented, but witness made no arrangements whatever; at about the same time witness had occasion to call on Mrs. Agnew about her children not attending school, and she then pointed out the deceased to her as the child they had talked about; since then witness never saw the child or Mrs. Agnew. To foreman: Was not acquainted with the mother of the child. To Mrs. Agnew: Migh have asked you what you wanted to take charge of the child, and think you said 15s. a week. Ellen Agnew, after being duly cautioned, deposed that the child was given into her care, with her husband's knowledge and consent, between 9 and 10 months ago, by two ladies she did not know; it was afterwards baptized at the Convent, in Victoria-street, by the name of Mary Robinson; the lady said Sister Mary de Sales would tell witness how the child was to be baptized; one lady made the arrangement, but did not say she was the mother of the child; witness was to get 15s. a week, and the payments were regularly made by a gentleman, whom witness did not know, up to last Tuesday; the lady called frequently to see the child; witness told the gentleman on Tuesday week that the child was ill, and the child died on Monday; witness did not take deceased to a doctor; the gentleman gave witness 30s. on Monday, when the child was dead, and told her to get it buried, and he would pay the expenses; witness never received any money from Sister Mary de Sales; the child had suffered from whooping-cough before she died; witness had not been drinking as badly as had been published; was aware of the obligation she contracted when taking the child. This concluded the case; and a verdict of manslaughter was returned against the woman, Ellen Agnew.

THE DEFENCES OF VICTORIA.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, TUESDAY.

Colonel Scratchley, R.E., accompanied by Colonel Roberts, commanding the New South Wales Permanent Artillery; Major Crowther, Captain Green, and Lieutenant and Adjutant Burgess, of the Tasmanian Artillery Corps; and Mr. Barrett, acting Chief Architect Public Works Department, paid an official visit yesterday to the batteries in course of construction at Queenscliff and Swan Island, which afforded me an excellent opportunity for witnessing the progress made in the defence works of Victoria. Up to within a comparatively recent period it was generally considered by people here that the floating battery Cerberus afforded ample protection to the colony; but the events of the past few years on the other side of the world have tended somewhat to modify this opinion. It was pointed out by competent authorities that the Cerberus, formidable as she undoubtedly is, would be liable in time of hostilities to the same risks as are attendant upon other vessels; and that once she were disabled or sunk the colony would be entirely at the mercy of the invader. Even supposing a landing of the enemy were successfully resisted by land forces, not only would the shipping in harbour become his prey, but Melbourne itself would be within easy distance of heavy guns. Under these circumstances, the necessity for providing more adequate means of defence became apparent—not that it was considered desirable to supersede the Cerberus, but that permanent fortifications should be erected which could act in conjunction with her. Sir W. Jervois, C.B., and Colonel Scratchley were, therefore, instructed to report upon and design defence works which should be sufficiently strong to secure the colony against invasion; and this having been done, and money obtained for the purpose of carrying out the plan, a commencement was made about the beginning of this year. Unlike most of the other colonies, Victoria has no back way to her capital. Practically she is impregnable, except at Port Phillip Heads; and consequently it became necessary to concentrate all the means of resistance at this point, so as to bar the only entrance to Melbourne. Some idea of the defence works in progress and contemplated may be gathered from the following brief outline:—The object of the works at Port Phillip Heads being to keep an enemy's ships outside of them, it is proposed to construct four batteries or forts:—1. On Point Nepean; an enclosed work, to be armed with three 10-inch (25 tons) and two 80-pounder (4 ton) guns; this fort will command the approach to the Heads from outside, the entrance between them, and the anchorage inside. 2. At Queenscliff, two batteries connected with each other, armed with four 80-pounder (4 tons), three 9-inch (12 tons), and one 10-inch (new pattern, 25 tons) guns; this fort will co-operate with the battery on Point Nepean in defending the entrance, the approach to the west channel, and the anchorage. 3. On Swan Island, an enclosed battery, armed with three 9-inch (12 tons), four 80-pounders (4 tons), and two 10-inch (new pattern, 25 tons) guns, which will provide an effective fire on the west channel for at least 10,000 yards of its course. 4. In the south channel, a circular fort, armed with five 10-inch (new pattern, 25 tons) and four medium guns (two 6-inch breechloaders and two 80-pounder muzzle-loaders). In connection with this fort and the battery on Swan Island, torpedoes will be laid across the channels, which will be guarded by guns. Thus, the progress of ships up the channels will be absolutely prevented, while the occupation of the anchorage will also be guarded against. The enemy, finding it impossible to enter the port, will be compelled to retire or to blockade it. Such an operation would have to be counteracted by naval means. The passage through the channels being closed, the enemy could not land at any point inside the Heads; but should he turn his attention to Western Port, with the intention of landing a force of men for the purpose of attacking Melbourne, the operation would be counteracted by a field force. All the batteries are to be rendered self-defensible, so as to liberate the field force for resisting a landing. Owing to the nature of the ground at the batteries, the parapets and traverses will be of earth or sand, the retaining walls being of brickwork or concrete; the emplacements are isolated by massive traverses. The guns are to be mounted on traversing platforms and en barbette, with lateral ranges of about 140°. The magazines are to be buried below the surface, and the ammunition will be served by means of lifts. In regard to torpedoes, the west channel, being the least important, would probably be closed in times of danger. The south channel will be divided into two parts. The conditions for the application of torpedoes are favourable as to depth of water, bottom, current, and tides. The local forces estimated to be required for manning these defences are:—Permanent artillery, 200; volunteer artillery, 200; field force (artillery, engineers, and infantry), 2000. Besides the foregoing scheme of land defences, which, as before stated, was elaborated by Sir W. Jervois and Colonel Scratchley, the naval defences to be maintained are the Cerberus, ironclad, of two turrets, each armed with two 10-inch 18-ton guns, and the Nelson, wooden frigate, armed with 64-pounder and 7-inch converted guns. These vessels are to be manned by permanent crews, supplemented by a naval reserve.

This elaborate scheme of defence is, however, far from being complete. The work at Point Nepean has been abandoned for the present, and there are only four 80-pounders mounted in a temporary sandbag battery. The Queenscliff batteries are nearly completed, but the building of the keep and defensible enclosure has been postponed. On Swan Island the battery has been commenced, and satisfactory progress has been made with the flanks and part of the faces; a contract is now being entered into for placing two 9-inch and one 80-pounder guns into position. At the fort in the south channel little has been done; the formation of a ring of rubble masonry around the site has already cost £10,000, and it is not probable that further work will be undertaken unless a loan be floated for the purpose. Thus it will be seen that at the present moment the only means of defence possessed by Victoria is the Cerberus. This state of affairs, however, is not likely to last long. At Swan Island, which comprises 800 acres of sandy soil, and is infested by snakes, and which was recently purchased by the Government for about £2500, as many as 120 of the "unemployed" were set to work some time ago, but the number is now reduced to one-half. The battery, which will cover between seven and eight acres, will cost £30,000, and of this £2600 has already been spent on the embankments. The men live in tents on the island, and Mr. Bell is the resident inspector. The works at Queenscliff will cost £10,000, and, as above stated, will soon be completed; at some future time it is intended to build a wooden stockade to protect the rear from attack. The whole of the works are being carried out under the direction of Colonel Scratchley and the immediate supervision of Mr. Barrett. For one reason—that of economy—it is fortunate that the channels through which vessels of heavy draught can pass are so narrow, otherwise the cost of defence works necessary for the protection of such an immense expanse would be enormously increased.

MELBOURNE INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION RIFLE MATCH.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Will you allow me to point out to your correspondent, "A Member of the N. S. W. R. A.," that the team going to Melbourne will not represent the military forces of this colony. The members of the old and only Volunteer force are still part of the Defence Force of N. S. Wales, not yet having been disbanded, and they would be as much entitled to shoot in the team being sent as are those going. I am afraid that the match will be an exhibition one, as far as this colony is concerned. It is a pity that the Rifle Association could not have organised an intercolonial team, little as the Victorian R. A. is entitled to the honour.

DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL.—ITS UNEQUALLED EFFICACY IN INFANTILE WASTING AND DEBILITY OF CHILDREN.—Mr. Thomas Hunt, late Medical Officer of Health St. Giles's and Bloomsbury, writes:—"In badly nourished infants, Dr. de Jongh's Light-brown Cod Liver Oil is invaluable. The rapidity with which two or three tea-spoonfuls a day will fatten a young child is astonishing. The weight gained is three times the weight of the oil swallowed, or more; and as children generally like the taste of Dr. de Jongh's Oil, and when it is given them often cry for more, it appears as though there were some prospect of deliverance for the appalling multitude of children who figure in the weekly bills of mortality issued from the office of the Registrar-General." Dr. R. C. Croft, author of "Handbook for the Nursery," writes:—"Dr. de Jongh's Light-brown Cod Liver Oil is almost a specific in many of the diseases peculiar to infancy and childhood, and I have seen marked benefit produced by its use. Patients prefer it to the Pale Oils, and are able to retain it more comfortably." Dr. de Jongh's Light-brown Cod Liver Oil is sold only in capsuled imperial half-pints, pints, and quarts, by all chemists and druggists. Sole consignees, Ansar, Harford, and Co., 77, Strand, London. LAW REPORT.

SUPREME COURT.—FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 12.

SITTINGS FOR CAUSES.

Banco Court.—(Before his Honor Sir WILLIAM MANNING and a jury of four.)

LYONS V. HOFFNUNG AND OTHERS.

Jury: Messrs. John Lahiff, C. E. Powell, P. Stanley, and G. Wright.

Mr. Darley, Q.C., Sir George Innes, and Mr. C. B. Stephen, instructed by Messrs. Holdsworth and Evans, appeared for the plaintiff; Mr. M. H. Stephen, Q.C., Mr. Pilcher, and Mr. Cohen, instructed by Mr. S. C. Brown, appeared for the defendants.

This was an action brought by Samuel Lyons, official assignee of the insolvent estate of Messrs. Thomas Hardy and James Murray (trading as Hardy Brothers), to recover from Sigmond Hoffnung, Henry Nathan, David Marks, and Sigmond Sinaur, trading as Hoffnung and Co., the value of the stock-in-trade of the insolvents, furniture dealers, also of certain cheques and promissory-notes aliened and transferred by the insolvents, then being insolvent, though before the sequestration of their estate, to the defendants, in contravention of the provisions of the Insolvent Act. There were also counts for the conversion of the same goods before and after the sequestration. Also, two counts for money received by the defendants for the use of the insolvents, and for the use of the plaintiff. £7000 was claimed. The particulars of the plaintiff's claim was as follows:—1880—January 3rd: To amount of cheque, on or about the 13th December, 1879, drawn by insolvents on City Bank, and delivered by them to defendants on this date, £226 8s. 4d.; to ditto, £226 8s. 5d. January 31st: To amount of cheque bearing date, on or about this day, drawn by Harris and Ackman, and delivered to defendants, £2000; to ditto, £2368 8s. 9d. Proceeds, or value, of stock-in-trade, goods, moneys, chattels, and effects of the insolvents taken possession of, received, and converted by defendants to their own use, £7000. The defendants pleaded—1. Messrs. Hardy, Brothers, were not insolvent at the time of the alleged alienation, transfer, &c. 2. Messrs. Hardy, Brothers, did not alien, transfer, &c., within the meaning of the 8th section of the Insolvent Act. 3. The alleged alienation, transfer, &c., did not have the effect of preferring the defendants to other creditors of Messrs. Hardy, Brothers, as alleged. 4. As to the trover counts not guilty. 5. The goods, &c., were not the goods of Messrs. Hardy, Brothers. 6. The goods, &c., were not the goods of the plaintiff as alleged. 7. As to the money counts never indebted. The plaintiff joined issue. The plaintiff was the official assignee of the insolvent estate of Messrs. Hardy and Murray (trading as Hardy, Brothers, furniture dealers, in Oxford-street). His case was shortly as follows:—James Murray joined the firm of Hardy, Brothers, in November, 1877, and Robert Hardy left the firm. In the following year the firm received a heavy blow through some transactions in which one of their employees was connected, and which gave rise to civil actions and criminal proceedings. To settle the proceedings in the Civil Court the firm had to pay over £700 and costs. In September, 1878, Messrs. Hardy, Brothers and Messrs. Hoffnung and Co. contemplated entering into large business transactions together, and an agreement was made and signed by the contracting parties, under which Messrs. Hoffnung indented certain shipments of furniture to be sold by Messrs. Hardy, Brothers. Before those shipments arrived Mr. Murray (who represented the firm of Messrs. Hardy, Brothers, in most of the transactions with Messrs. Hoffnung) tried to cancel the agreement as the furniture would arrive at a time when the market was falling. Messrs. Hoffnung declined to cancel the agreement altogether, but consented to supersede it, and the following agreement was entered into:—"It is mutually agreed to supersede the arrangement entered into between Messrs. Hoffnung and Co., merchants, and Messrs. Hardy, Brothers, furniture dealers, Oxford-street, for the importation of shipments of furniture, or other goods, on account of the latter firm, so far as the rate of commission on the outlay and the terms of payment are concerned; and it is further agreed that all the said shipments, on arrival at Sydney, shall forthwith be sold by public auction, under the supervision of Messrs. S. Hoffnung and Co., who shall recoup themselves from the net proceeds of the auctioneer's account sales for the invoice value of same, together with all charges incurred in the execution of the various indents, including shipping freight, insurance, and landing charges, and also the cost of bank commission for drawing against invoice value of same, together with a commission of 5 per cent. on the net proceeds of the auctioneer's account sales, for all such portion of the shipments as may be sold by the auctioneers to intending bidders other than Messrs. Hardy, Brothers themselves (who will attend the sales to protect their own interest); and such portion of each shipment as may be knocked down to Messrs. Hardy, Brothers at time of sale, or bought in by the auctioneers, shall be taken over by Messrs. Hardy, Brothers for their own account on the terms and conditions of such auction sales; a commission of 2½ per cent shall be charged on such portion as Hardy, Brothers, may take over. In consideration of the foregoing agreement, Messrs. S. Hoffnung and Co. undertake to pay over to Messrs. Hardy, Brothers, on demand, all or any surplus or profit arising from the net proceeds of the account sales of the said shipments after deducting the invoice cost, and all the before-mentioned charges, including auctioneers' charges. And Messrs. Hardy, Brothers, undertake and agree to pay to Messrs. S. Hoffnung and Co., on demand, all or any loss of or deficiency, should such arise, on the sale of any of the said shipments, should the net proceeds of account sales not realise sufficient to cover the invoice cost of same, together with auctioneer's charges, and all charges incurred in the execution of the indents, including shipping, freight, insurance, and landing charges, also the bank commission for drawing against invoice value of same; and the indenting commission of 5 per cent., or 2½ per cent., as provided for in the foregoing conditions. S. HOFFNUNG AND CO.; HARDY, BROTHERS. April 4, 1879." In due course the goods arrived, and the first shipment was put into the hands of Messrs. Harris and Ackmann, auctioneers (proposed by Messrs. Hoffnung and Co.) for sale. The invoice price of that shipment was £2129 3s. 9d., which, by the expenses attendant on the sale, &c., was increased to £3296 7s. 2d. Before September, 1879, furniture was sold to the extent of £2079 16s. 1d., which left due £1216 11s. 1d. Before that furniture had arrived Messrs. Hardy, Brothers, had lodged with Messrs. Harris and Ackman a shipment of bedsteads, ex Cimba, in their hands for sale, out of the proceeds of which they were to repay themselves £500 advanced to Messrs. Hardy, Brothers, to pay off an overdraft at the City Bank. Portion of those bedsteads were sold, and realized £445. To pay off the balance Messrs. Hardy, Brothers, had to obtain an advance of £145 from Messrs. Hoffnung, who were given a promissory note for £1376 4s. 8d., at a currency of a month. That promissory note, after maturity, was settled by a payment of £854 10s., the proceeds of furniture and bedsteads sold, and by a promissory note for £531 3s., due on the 3rd of December, 1879. Another shipment of furniture arrived by the Ettrickdale, the invoice price for which, with interest, amounted to £2183 6s. 5d., for which two promissory notes were given to Messrs. Hoffnung, due on the 30th of July and November 2, 1879. On the 31st October Messrs. Hoffnung had notice that those promissory notes could not be met, and on that date two promissory notes were taken due on the 2nd of January, 1880. The promissory note for £531 3s., due on the 3rd December, 1879, was dishonoured; and on the 13th of December it was agreed that two cheques, each for £226 8s. 4d., should be given by Messrs Hardy, Brothers, the balance of £78, proceeds of a sale, being paid by Messrs. Harris and Ackman. On the 15th of December one of those cheques was presented at the City Bank and dishonoured; and the two cheques remained in the possession of Messrs. Hoffnung. On the 2nd of January, 1880, the promissory note for £2183 6s. 5d. fell due, and was dishonoured. On the 2nd of January, 1880, Messrs. Hoffnung received a bill of sale from Messrs. Hardy, Brothers, over the whole of their stock-in-trade and real property, &c., to secure the repayment of a sum of £4183 6s. 4d., and further advances—about £2000—was then advanced in cash, and over £1700 was paid to the credit of Messrs. Hardy, Brothers at the City Bank; the two cheques for £226 8s. 4d. were then presented by Messrs. Hoffnung and paid; a promissory note for £2368 8s. 9d. was also given by Messrs. Hardy, Brothers, as collateral security; immediately upon that bill of sale being executed, Messrs. Hoffnung put a man named Mandellson into possession of Hardy, Brothers' stock in their shops in Oxford-street, and the business was carried on as before, without alteration; the bill of sale was not registered. On the 31st of January, 1880, Messrs Hoffnung and Co. gave up their bill of sale and other securities on payment of the money advanced by, and due to, them. They were accordingly paid off by two cheques bearing the signatures of Messrs. Harris and Ackman for £2000 and £2368 8s. 9d. respectively. Messrs. Hoffnung and Co. were thereby paid off in full, with the exception of some £30 or £40 due on current account. To cover these payments, made by Messrs. Harris and Ackman, Messrs. Hardy, Brothers, executed a bill of sale over the whole of their stock-in-trade, and the furniture they had placed in a number of houses for the purpose of sale by auction—and also received a mortgage over the separate property of James Murray and his wife. Messrs. Harris and Ackman also put Mandellson into possession of the stock in Oxford-street, at the beginning of February. The business was carried on as usual till the 4th of March, when Messrs. Hardy, Brothers, voluntarily sequestrated their estate, and Messrs. Harris and Ackman realized on their securities. The official assignee had realized the assets which had come to his hands, and had received £847; of which over £400 would probably go to pay the creditors in Murray's separate estate. Debts had been proved to the extent of nearly £7000, by about 80 creditors. The above facts were not virtually in dispute. For the plaintiff evidence was given by James Murray to show that Messrs. Hoffnung and Co. were conversant with the monetary affairs of Messrs. Hardy, Brothers, and knew that they were unable to meet their existing liabilities when they took the bill of sale on the 2nd of January; and it was further contended that Messrs. Harris and Ackman and Messrs. Hoffnung and Co. were acting in collusion, and that the bill of sale to the former firm in lieu of that to Messrs. Hoffnung and Co. was a mere trick to mislead the official assignee, and to get a preference over the other creditors. The defendants' case was that they had business matters with Messrs. Hardy, Brothers, only in the way of business, and that Mr. Marks (who managed the whole matter) was altogether ignorant of the state of the banking account of Hardy, Brothers. They further denied any collusion with Messrs. Harris and Ackman, with whom they acted in a purely business manner.

The trial lasted throughout nine days. A great mass of evidence was given immaterial to the issues, to throw discredit on Mr. Murray's evidence, which, on many material points, was at variance with that given by Mr. Marks.

Mr. M. H. Stephen Q.C., addressed the jury at length, for the defendants. Mr. Darley, Q.C. replied.

His HONOR summed up the evidence, and after directing the jury, left to them the following questions:—1. Were Hardy, Brothers, insolvent at the time of executing the bill of sale to Hoffnung and Co., on the 2nd of January, 1880? 2. Had the bill of sale the effect of preferring Hoffnung and Co., then being existing creditors, to the other creditors of Hardy, Brothers? 3. Particularly had it that effect in respect of the two bills for £1091 each? And the two cheques for £226, and the current bill for £96? All, or any, and which? 4. Had Mr. Marks notice or knowledge of the insolvency of Hardy, Brothers, when he executed the bill of sale, of January 2nd, 1880? 5. Had he such knowledge or notice, at the time of the execution of the securities of 31st January, 1880, and at the time of the delivery to him of Harris and Ackman's cheques for £2000 and £2368 8s. 9d.? 6. Were the bill of sale and other securities taken by Harris and Ackman in collusion with Mr. Marks, for Hoffnung and Co., and for the purposes of that firm? 7. Were those securities, on the contrary, taken bona fide by Harris and Ackman, for their own exclusive use?

The jury, after retiring for one and a half hour, returned a verdict for the plaintiff, with damages £5959 19s. 9d., and answered all of the questions, except the last, in the affirmative, and that question in the negative.

LONG V. LONG.

The trial of this action was postponed till next Friday.

MYERS AND OTHERS V. HARRIS AND ANOTHER.

In this cause, by consent, a verdict was entered for the defendants, subject to a reference to arbitration.

Mr. Pilcher and Mr. Want, instructed by Messrs. J. Dawson and Sons, appeared for the plaintiffs; Mr. M. H. Stephen, Q.C., Mr. Darley, Q.C., and Mr. C. B. Stephen, instructed by Messrs. Cape and Westgarth, appeared for the defendants.

Jury Court.—(Before his Honor Mr. Justice WINDEYER and a jury of four.)

FINNEGAN V. SULLIVAN.

Jury: Messrs. H. J. Butters, F. A. Venables, G. F. Jackson, and John Geddes.

Mr. M. H. Stephen, Q.C., and Mr. C. B. Stephen, instructed by Messrs. Cape and Westgarth (agents for Messrs. Scarvell and Gordon, of Young), appeared for the plaintiff; Mr. C. J. Manning and Mr. Pilcher, instructed by Mr. Marshall (agent for Mr. Russell, of Young), appeared for the defendant.

This was an action for damages for an alleged libel which appeared in the Burrangong Chronicle.

Henry Moses Finnegan, a priest in holy orders of the Catholic Church, was the plaintiff, and Thomas Joseph Sullivan, the proprietor of the newspaper in question, was the defendant.

At the time of the publication of the article complained of the plaintiff had been for some time in charge of the Catholic mission at Young; during his charge the property of, and belonging to, the mission had considerably increased in extent and value. He was about to remove from Young to Gundagai in order to take charge of the mission of the church in that town. The defendant published the following article.—

"Young Mission.—A correspondent, hailing from Young, and 'slobbering' Rev. Mr. Finnegan in a most heartless, almost cruel, fashion, writes to the Freeman to say that the reverend gentleman 'now leaves the mission with a property value of £10,000 or £12,000.' Many, no doubt, will be curious to discover the meaning of these words. Is it that he is taking the property away in his pocket, or that he has it to his credit at the bank, or in the fund? For all we know, so much money may have been contributed by the people; but they may well ask—where is the fruit of it? and echo will to a certainty respond—where, where? Does the £100 paddock—now, by the way, in the market—form any part of it? or the £30 cottage, which, during the past week, we are informed, has been with other places the receptacle of midnight cartings? or have the premises on the opposite side of the creek anything to say to this valuable property? We pause for a reply. The same correspondent, with more zeal than discretion, proceeds to point out that Rev. Mr. Finnegan has been connected with no less than six different missions in as many years. What rapid promotion! as a friend of ours would say. To the seventh mission, Young, he leaves legacies in the shape of three churches, all in debt—one to the tune of upwards of £2000, and which, notwithstanding the vast expenditure upon it, is still unable to boast of a single pane of glass in the windows! Surely these are bequests that ought to be ever cherished with lively feelings of ——. Do, kind reader, finish the sentence for us; we are too much affected to do so ourselves. Thrice happy people of Gundagai! rejoice and be glad, for there is going amongst you one whose 'high priestly and many other qualities,' 'properly appreciated,' according to the Young correspondent, all over the colony in fact, soar far beyond the comprehension of the Sodomites of Young! He will probably use strong language occasionally; indulge, as is his custom to the editor of this journal, in epithets which, if not savouring of elegance, are, at least, expressive; he may threaten, as we often heard him do in St. Mary's, to leave you in the middle of the night—but for all that he is tamable, and, in the end, harmless. Cherish him as the apple of your eye, and if further promotion be in store for him, console yourselves, as we do now in our bereavement, with the soothing balm that 'the dearest friends must part.'"

Mr. M. H. Stephen, Q.C., had partly opened the case, stating that the action was not brought for damages, but for the sake of clearing the plaintiff from the imputations on his character, when Mr. Manning, for the defendant, read the following apology:—"The defendant had no intention of imputing dishonesty to the plaintiff, or of injuring him in any way, but only intended to play on words in a jocular strain, and he regrets if he has thereby given any pain to the plaintiff, as there is no foundation in fact for imputing any improper conduct; and he is willing to consent to a verdict for the plaintiff with nominal damages, and to pay costs between attorney and client."

A verdict was accordingly entered for the plaintiff, with nominal damages.

JAQUES V. DOYLE.

Jury: Messrs. C. Lemaire, H. J. Butters, N. Hawkins, and G. N. Griffiths.

Mr. M. H. Stephen, Q.C., and Dr. Donovan, instructed by Mr. H. R. Way, appeared for the plaintiff. Mr. Darley, Q.C., and Mr. Davis, instructed by Messrs. M'Carthy, Robertson, and Fisher, appeared for the defendant.

This was an action of ejectment, brought by Alfred Edmund Jaques, to recover possession from Richard Doyle of 14 feet of land at Petersham, portion of the subdivision of Norwood.

The plaintiff proved title by deed to portion of the subdivision of Norwood, comprising lots 7, 8, 9, 10, of section 7, as shown on the plan produced at the time of sale.

The defendant also proved a title by deed to a portion of the subdivision. The plaintiff and defendant each purchased from Mr. Alfred Rofe. The whole question was as to the commencing point of the land sold to the plaintiff, as, by the description in his deed, his land overlapped that claimed by the defendant by 14 feet. The defendant, on taking possession of his land, built a house up to within a few feet of his boundary. After counsels' addresses and his Honor's directions, the jury returned a verdict for the defendant. Certain points of law were reserved for the opinion of the full Court.

His Honor formally decided those points in favour of the defendant.

JONES V. THE MUNICIPAL COUNCIL OF SYDNEY.

His HONOR announced that the trial of this cause, set down for Monday, would be postponed for a week. His Honor had tried the issues on a former occasion, and was disinclined to again try them.

In Equity.—(Before his Honor Mr. Justice HARGRAVE, Primary Judge.)

SANDEMAN V. WAKELEY.

The hearing of this suit was postponed till next Friday, on the motion of Mr. F. Barton.

IN RE THE WILL OF J. C. PETERS (DECEASED).

In this matter Mr. Tarleton, instructed by Mr. Pennington, appeared for the petitioner, Mrs. Peters, who was applying to the Court for the removal of a caveat lodged by the Registrar-General (under 26 Vic., No. 9, s. 11) on behalf of the cestui que trust.

It appeared by the petition that the real property devised by the will was of the value of £5000, and that the testator left debts to the extent of £1000, to liquidate which the widow desired to sell portion of the real estate as the creditors were pressing.

His HONOR declined to set aside the caveat, on the facts submitted, unless the interest of the infant cestui que trust were fully protected, and for that purpose directed the matter to stand over generally.

Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction.—(Before his Honor Mr. Justice HARGRAVE.)

His HONOR, after dealing with a number of ecclesiastical matters in chambers, settled the issues for trial in the suit Bardsley and another v. Glover and wife, and directed the issues to be set down for trial on the 25th instant. The trial to be before his Honor and a jury of four.

His HONOR dispensed with service of proceedings on the co-respondent, Jesse M'Guire.

RODGERS V. RODGERS.

A similar motion, to dispense with service in this cause, was postponed.

METROPOLITAN DISTRICT COURT.—FRIDAY.

(Before his Honor Mr. District Court Judge DOWLING.)

CA. SA. MOTIONS.

Several ca. sa. motions were disposed of.

WOODFORD AND ANOTHER V. BLOXSOME.

This was an action in which the plaintiffs, Charles Woodford and George Beazley, sought to recover the sum of £20 from Oswald Bloxsome, being the balance alleged to be due to them as contractors, on a contract for certain works to the Exchange-buildings, Sydney. The particulars of the case were of little public interest. The defendant pleaded not indebted, and paid into Court the sum of £12, with £1 9s. 8d. for costs, stating that the sum was sufficient to satisfy the plaintiffs' claim. The plaintiff were awarded a verdict of £6, together with the money paid into Court. Mr. Foster (instructed by Mr. A. Godfrey) appeared for the plaintiffs; and Mr. J. G. Russell Jones for the defendant.

WHITLOCK V. FRANKLIN.

This was an action in which Hubert Whitlock sought to recover the sum of £35 from Henry Franklin, being the balance alleged to be due on a contract for the erection of a new building at Cook's River Road. Mr. Rogers (instructed by Mr. W. C. Proctor) appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. R. K. Jones (Daintry and Jones) for the defendant. The defence set up was that the work in question was not completed, inasmuch as some drain-piping required to be finished; defendant also alleged that some tuck-pointing had not been done, which the plaintiff answered by saying that the work was not specified in the plans and specifications. A verdict of £30 10s. was returned for the plaintiff.

FERGUSSON V. LARKIN.

In this action the plaintiff, James Fergusson, sued Patrick R. Larkin for the sum of £150, for commission on the sale of certain property. The plaintiff appeared in his own behalf, and Mr. Rogers (instructed by Bull and Bull) appeared for the defendant. From the facts of the case it appeared that some time ago the defendant purchased the Old Woolpack Inn, near the Haymarket, for the sum of £6500, but through some reason or other the conveyance was not completed. The plaintiff heard of the matter, and knowing that Mr. Larkin was desirous of purchasing property, represented to him that he could effect a purchase on his behalf from a Mr. M'Mahon. Larkin said he was well acquainted with M'Mahon's property, which was subsequently purchased by the defendant. The plaintiff claimed that, by virtue of an arrangement with Larkin, he secured the purchase of the property in question for the defendant. The defendant denied that any arrangement whatever was entered into between them as to the purchase of the property; and, further, that he gave Fergusson no authority to effect the purchase on his account. His HONOR gave a verdict for the defendant.

BOUFFET V. PYCROFT.

The plaintiff sought to recover the sum of £125 from defendant, on account of board and lodging.

His HONOR gave a verdict for the plaintiff. The defendant then pleaded a set-off of £150, and a verdict of £70 was returned for defendant.

Mr. G. E. Russell Jones appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. J. Shepherd for the defendant.

BOROUGH OF PADDINGTON V. THE CORPORATION OF SYDNEY.

This action was postponed, by consent, till Tuesday next.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.—FRIDAY.

The sittings of the Central Criminal Court were resumed, at the Darlinghurst Court House; Mr. G. B. Simpson prosecuting on behalf of the Crown.

LIBEL.

The defendant, J. H. Bridson, in an action for libel against Mr. E. C. Haviland, proprietor of the Australian, failed to surrender to his bail, and the witnesses were bound over to appear at the next sessions of the Court.

PERJURY.

Eli Gelling pleaded not guilty to a charge of committing perjury in an action heard at the Metropolitan District Court before Mr. District Court Judge Wilkinson, in swearing that a Mrs. Lockhart had not lent him the sum of £40, and that he had not said to one William M'Master that he did not deny having received the money from Mrs. Lockhart as a loan. This was the substance of the indictment, which was very lengthy, covering several pages of foolscap; defendant being defended by Mr. Pitcairn, instructed by Mr. J. Shepherd. The evidence was of a very conflicting description, and the jury, after about five minutes' retirement, returned a verdict of not guilty, and defendant was discharged.

BIGAMY.

Thomas Henry Snowden pleaded guilty to a charge of bigamy, and was sentenced to imprisonment for six months in Darlinghurst gaol.

PERJURY.

John Victor Rawlinson pleaded not guilty to a charge of perjury at the Supreme Court, in an action against William Henry Newland for damages for assault. The alleged perjury consisted in the statements made by the present defendant, who was the plaintiff at the time, in reference to the alleged assault. The case lasted the whole afternoon; and it appeared that at the trial referred to Rawlinson swore that he had been brutally assaulted by Newland and others, and that he had sustained serious injuries through this assault, whereas the injuries referred to had been caused by an accident Rawlinson had met with. The evidence was of a very conflicting nature; and the jury, after three hours' deliberation, returned a verdict of guilty, and prisoner was sentenced to six months' imprisonment, with hard labour, in Darlinghurst Gaol.

POLICE.

CENTRAL POLICE COURT.

The Police Magistrate was assisted yesterday, on the criminal side by Messrs. Jolly and Reading; and on the summons side by Messrs. Ridge, Withers, Hardie, Barden, Shaw, Harwood, and Mullens.

Hannah Law, convicted of vagrancy, was sentenced to be imprisoned seven days; and Kate Robinson, charged with a like offence, was sentenced to be imprisoned one month.

Frederick Fitzpatrick, 10, Edward Heffernan, 9, Andrew Weir, 11, were convicted of having stolen a pair of boots, valued at 3s. 6d., the property of Edward French, and were sentenced to be detained in custody until 6 p.m. Their worships, in passing judgment, referred to the alarming increase in the number of youthful criminals, and regretted that no mode of punishment was available to the magistracy in such cases as this except that of sending children to gaol, a mode of punishment calculated rather to harden in crime than to reform. They were satisfied that a power to use the birch in such cases as the present would be found a very effective deterrent.

John Booth, fined 5s. for being found drunk in a public place, pleaded guilty to a charge of assault preferred by Gertrude Rae, a girl of about 14 years, by throwing a water bottle, and was, for this offence, sentenced to pay a penalty of £5, or to be imprisoned two months.

Lawrence Moran was ordered to pay 40s., or to be imprisoned seven days, on conviction of having, between 11 and 12, on Thursday night, offended against decency in Cleveland-street.

Arthur Watson was fined 20s. for assaulting constable M'Lean, in default of payment to be imprisoned seven days.

On the summons side, a number of persons were fined for offences against the provisions of the Police Act; and in Harris v. M'Kone and Mitchell v. Chambers, proceedings under the Tenants Act, a seven days' warrant, to give possession, was granted in each.

LICENSING BUSINESS.—The Bench on the summons side of the Court was enlarged for the licensing business by the arrival of Messrs. Carpenter, M'Beath, Linsley, Palser, Calvert, Cook, Graham, and Perdriau. An auctioneer's license was granted to Joseph Rogers. Five publicans' licenses were transferred:—Cornelius O'Neill to William A. Allison, Robert Lucas to John W. Flanagan, Frederick Taff to Thomas Barnwell, James Patterson to Robert Thomson, and Bridget Heuschkel to R. A. Lightfoot.

WATER POLICE COURT.

Yesterday, Messrs. Marsh (W. P. M.), Goodridge, Solomon, and Fowler presided in the Charge Court.

Several cases against drunkards and disorderly characters were disposed of.

Emma Williams alias Knowles was convicted of being a common prostitute and behaving in a riotous manner in George-street, and sent to gaol for three months.

Henry Crosbie, for stealing five shirts and two towels, valued at 26s. 6d., the property of John Gourley, was ordered to be imprisoned for 4 days; for stealing a coat, 3 ties and 2 handkerchiefs, valued at 45s., the property of John Prebble, he was sent to gaol for 7 days, and for stealing 2 pairs of socks, 1 towel, and a handkerchief, belonging to Frank Holmes, he was further ordered to be imprisoned for four days. In lieu of imprisonment, defendant had the alternative of paying fines to the amount of 40s.

SUMMONS COURT.—Messrs. Lester, Robinson, and Cocks occupied the Bench. At the instance of Mr. R. Seymour, inspector of nuisances, Theresa Johnson was ordered to pay a fine of 45s., and Annie Robinson, a fine of 25s. for loitering on the footways; Joseph Wilson was fined 15s. for crossing the intersections of the streets, at a pace faster than a walk; Samuel Collins for slaughtering within the city was fined £5 5s.; Patrick Dwyer was fined 25s. and Emma Gregg, 15s., for neglecting to keep clean premises; for commencing buildings without erecting hoardings, John Fry was fined 45s., and Philip Ritchie, 40s. Inspector Oram secured convictions against a number of offenders for breaches of various Metropolitan Transit Commission by-laws, and the defendants were fined.

NEWTOWN POLICE COURT.

Messrs. W. Bailey, J. Pemell, and Dr. Brookes, Js.P., occupied the bench yesterday.

Alexander Wharton v. Thomas Donohoe, for wilful damage to a door and windows. Defendant was ordered to forfeit 20s., with 5s. 10d. costs, or to go seven days to gaol.

David Cohen, for being drunk and disorderly, was fined 5s., or two days in gaol.

MILLS, PILE, and GILCHRIST have been instructed by ARTHUR T. HOLROYD, Esq., to sell by auction, at the LAND SALE ROOMS, 114, Pitt-street, on TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 30th, at 11 o'clock,

1ST. ½ ACRE LOTS.—All the unsold portions of land in half-acre allotments in the immediate neighbourhood of the MERRYLANDS PLATFORM, at which the trains on the SOUTHERN RAILWAY STOP for passengers twelve times daily.

2ND. ½ ACRE LOTS.—All the unsold allotments of land near the GUILDFORD PLATFORM, many of them fronting the SOUTHERN RAILWAY for half a mile. The trains which stop at MERRYLANDS pull up at GUILDFORD also, to receive and discharge passengers.

3RD. 41 ACRES.—LOTS 22 and 23 of the late CHURCH SCHOOL LANDS at MERRYLANDS, each containing 20 acres 2 roods. ON LOT 22 the LAND has been tested to 13 feet in depth, and the FINEST BRICK AND TILE CLAY HAS BEEN DISCOVERED. THROUGH these two allotments there is a creek, on which any quantity of water may be conserved for brickmaking and other purposes. THESE TWO LOTS have 20 chains frontage to PARK ROAD (which leads to the MERRYLANDS PLATFORM), and will be sold together or separately.

4TH. 100 ACRES—LOTS 41, 42, 43, 44, and 45 OF THE LATE CHURCH AND SCHOOL LANDS comprise 100 ACRES, and will be sold in one block. It is securely enclosed with a wire and top-rail fence, and has RESERVED ROADS on THREE SIDES. This is admirably adapted for sub-dividing, and contains a number of beautiful building sites, on high and sloping grounds. IT IS WITHIN AN EASY DISTANCE OF THE MERRYLANDS PLATFORM. It rarely happens that such a large block of land, with the advantages which it possesses, comes into the market. ON THE west side, the WATER SCHEME passes within a quarter of a mile of this lot, and the proprietor will permit the purchaser to lay a pipe from the canal to the 100 acres, through his other land, without compensation.

5th. 70 ACRES DIVIDED INTO 1 to 5 ACRE LOTS.—Part of LOTS 4, 5, and 6 of THE SHERWOOD ESTATE, called TILE YARD PADDOCK, in which is situated the SHERWOOD DRAIN AND TILE WORKS. This block fronts the SHERWOOD ROAD.

6th. 25 ACRES, set apart for the TILE WORKS, and the remainder will be divided in blocks up to 5 acres. The works are 3 miles from PARRAMATTA, and one and a half miles from the MERRYLANDS PLATFORM AND SIDING. They are in full working order, and the clay (which is well adapted for bricks, pipes, and tiles) is close to the surface, in unlimited quantities.

THE SHEDS ARE VERY SUBSTANTIAL, and cover about half an acre of ground. The BUILDINGS consist of one 5-ROOMED and TWO 3-ROOMED BRICK COTTAGES, with VERANDAHS, A WEATHERBOARD OFFICE, and a stable. All the sheds, buildings, office, and stable are roofed with tiles, and the floors of the buildings are tiled also.
There are two kilns, and a continuous supply of water collected in a reservoir.
The plant and stock to be taken at a valuation.
As to visitors going to see the land and works, PLANS ARE BEING PREPARED for distribution, and special arrangements will be made for intending buyers TO SEE THE LAND AND WORKS PRIOR TO THE DAY OF SALE.

ANY INFORMATION CAN BE OBTAINED ON APPLICATION TO THE AUCTIONEERS.

FOR SALE,
The grand and highly-improved Estate
COOMBING PARK,
comprising 8092 acres of the richest freehold land.

One of the most desirable properties in the colony.

CLEMENTS and M'CARTHY are favoured with instructions from the Proprietor, T. R. Icely, Esq., who is about visiting Europe, to sell by public auction, on WEDNESDAY, the 8th December next, at the Chamber of Commerce, Sydney, at 2.30 p.m.,
The almost unequalled Freehold Property, known as Coombing Park, consisting of 8092 acres—in a square block—of rich black flats, and undulating slopes, of red and chocolate soil, which for either agricultural or pastoral purposes cannot be surpassed.

The whole is securely fenced with new cattle and sheep proof fences, of very superior description, and subdivided into fourteen (14) paddocks—all both cattle and sheep proof—over which English grasses have been scattered, providing fattening pasturage, rarely excelled; and each paddock is abundantly watered.
Coombing Park, long and well known as one of the choicest early properties, has been written of by many whose opinions are valued as possessing in an eminent degree the beauties, conveniences, and surroundings which constitute the ne plus ultra of a gentleman's home.
It has two daily posts from the metropolis.
A telegraph office within two miles.
Is at present 12 miles by a splendid macadamised road from the Blayney railway station, and is on the direct line of the surveyed railway to connect the Western and the Southern lines, which when completed, will bring the homestead within ten hours of Sydney and sixteen of Melbourne.
Coombing House stands in the middle of the garden, has an unusually wide and pretty verandah, fourteen rooms, many of which are large, with every comfort and convenience for a large family, including cellar, dairy, &c., &c.
The climate is of the healthiest, being 2200 feet above the level of the sea, and the general surroundings of the homestead command continual admiration. Trollope, in the latter part of his chapter on the scenery of New South Wales, specially speaks of it, and winds up by describing the garden as a "wilderness of loveliness."
The property is all effectually ringed and abundantly watered, having double frontages to the Belabula River and the Coombing, the Mandurama, and the Park Creeks, none of which were ever known to be dry, besides several dams and springs.
The woolshed, farm buildings, overseer's cottage, and stables, all at a pleasant distance from the house, say 300 yards, are of brick and stone with iron roofs, very superior and extensive, with every convenience, and all in first-class order.
Intending purchasers will meet with every facility for inspecting, upon giving either the Auctioneers or the Proprietor twenty-four hours' notice by letter or wire.
Title perfect. Terms liberal.

SOME INTERESTING FACTS. — LATEST NOVELTIES. — GLOVES.

We beg respectfully to inform our numerous patrons that we are constantly opening up immense quantities of fancy goods of all descriptions. Our extensive trade necessitates the frequent renewal of our stock, which is therefore replenished by every mail steamer that enters the port. Hence we have always on hand the very latest novelties obtainable in the Home Markets. The marked difference noticeable in former years between Colonial attire and that rife in the European capitals is every day becoming less, owing to the enterprise of our English buyers, aided by the ever-increasing rapidity with which the goods are transmitted; so much so, that at the present day the eyes of those fresh from Europe everywhere alight upon the sights familiar to them. Among our most recent Shipments we have opened up direct from the celebrated firm of Dent, Allcroft, and Co., 4 cases of PARIS KID GLOVES, making the third shipment within two months.

It will doubtless interest our Lady Patrons to know that we are now offering 100,000 yards of SWISS EMBROIDERY, comprising every conceivable pattern.

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST SYDNEY.

Gentlemen,—I respectfully announce myself as a CANDIDATE for one of the four seats of your great constituency. It is just twenty years ago since I first entered the Parliament of New South Wales, and I have been a member of every Parliament since. During all that time I have been voting there, and my votes are on record and may be seen by any of you. I say that every vote I have given has been on the side of liberalism, and in the interest of the people, and I challenge the severest scrutiny of those votes.

I have passed eight or nine important bills into law, some of them of supreme importance and of acknowledged public advantage.

I have already held two meetings of the electors, both meetings very largely attended. My welcome was cordial and enthusiastic, and the people listened to me with a thoughtful and appreciative attention, for which I could not help feeling proud and grateful.

I ask your suffrages as a stern and unbending liberal, faithful to every principle of the radical code, and ready, at a moment's notice, to defend and uphold the rights of the people.

I hold meetings, up to the day of polling, every night, when I will touch upon all details.

I remain
Your very humble servant,
DAVID BUCHANAN.

ELECTORS OF WEST SYDNEY.—ANGUS CAMERON is a Candidate, give him a vote. Central Committee Rooms, Swan with Two Necks.

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST SYDNEY.

Gentlemen,—At the request of a large and influential number of electors who know me, I have consented to become a candidate for one of the seats in the new Parliament at your disposal. I have no object to serve in seeking election, unless it be the ambition—well ordered, I trust—to benefit my country and generation.

As I purpose addressing you publicly in the several parts of the electorate, I will only just now shadow forth my political sentiments.

First, The Education Act I am thoroughly in favour of, and will strive to preserve it intact. I am opposed to the introduction of Chinese into this country. I would like to see the Liquor Licensing Act altered materially, and local option tried. I am in favour of extension of the railway round Darling Harbour to the Circular Quay; also, to connect it with Newcastle, and a railway to Illawarra. I would never consent to the remission of interest on selections, nor to payment of members; nor do I like the present system of indiscriminate immigration. Free trade, as a general principle, I certainly approve; but I would give the preference to our own manufactures and products. I would like to see municipalities extended, Mercantile Marine Act and the Insolvency Act amended; Technical Schools taken in hand by the Government, and Agricultural Schools established. Should my sentiments be sound and in accord with yours, I hope to be honoured with your support.

I am, Gentlemen, yours very respectfully,
WM. FRASER MARTIN,
Church-hill.

THOMAS WHITE, FOR WEST SYDNEY.

A Public MEETING of the Electors will be held, at Ricketts' Royal Oak Hotel, Miller's Point, on MONDAY NIGHT.
Mr. THOMAS WHITE will address the meeting.

A MEETING of Wm. J. ALLEN'S Committee will be held at Simon Pure Hotel, Waverley, at 8 o'clock, TO-NIGHT.
All expected to attend.

S. J. BREATHOUR, } Hon.
J. W. HENWOOD, } Secs.

BALMAIN ELECTORATE.

TO THE ELECTORS OF BALMAIN.

Fellow Electors,—Before acknowledging the kind impulse which prompted your requisition to represent the Balmain Electorate in the next Parliament, I took serious counsel with myself as to the absolute necessary qualifications of a representative for such an important constituency. After calm consideration of what appeared to me the undesirable qualities, and setting in opposition the essential requirements, I determined to accede to your request.

In the administration of municipal affairs, I have always tried to do my duty to those whose representative I was, and if my endeavours have met with satisfaction, I am amply repaid.

The importance of this electorate (embracing, as it does, not only the Borough of Balmain, but a moiety of the flourishing Borough of Leichhardt and a portion of Petersham) renders it incumbent on those in whose hands the choice of a Parliamentary representative rests to select one who can, by ability, influence, and an intimate knowledge of the requirements of the constituency, obtain those rights and privileges which justly belong to us, and which, through inadequate representation, might become lost in the future, as they have been in the past.

Combined with this I insist that your representative's views upon the leading subjects of the day should be sound, and straightforward, and logical. To my mind, the evasiveness and mixed policy of some of the gentlemen thirsting for Parliamentary distinction is fraught with danger to the well-being and future happiness of the country. Truth and honour are sacrificed, and even slander indulged in to acquire the desired end. I belive, however, that the intelligence of our electorate is superior to this trickery. I have not hesitated to place my views before you on the several occasions upon which we have met, and will content myself now by summarising the leading questions calling for sound practical legislation in the new Parliament, and upon which I hope to address you fully within the ensuing week, when I will endeavour to explain the important position of our new electorate, and the necessity of active representation to secure the benefits that then must accrue.

I am an advocate of municipal reform; am opposed to assisted immigration; and never in my life believed that the Anglo-Saxon race, with its free and enlightened institutions, should entertain or tolerate Chinese cheap labour. My views on free trade are gathered from a varied intimate connection with commerce, and I can testify as to its advantages over the so-called protection; which simply means an artificial stimulus, "the coddling of manufacturers," and the real impoverishment of the working classes.

The great internal wealth of our colony will naturally strike any man of capacity of intellect that the revenue must be derived in other ways than through the Custom House. A property tax will not discourage accumulation, and will only affect those best able to pay it.

After a 20 years' trial our land laws are found defective. I denounce repudiation of interest on purchases of Crown lands as being at variance with fair dealing, and I doubt if a man in Parliament could be found to advocate it.

The Education Act has evoked such enthusiastic feelings among the hearts of denominations that the vitality of religion is better assured than ever. The culture of the emotions, or rather creed, belongs not to the State but to those who exercise the sacerdotal functions in our midst. I adhere to the present Act.

Water Supply—the immediate commencement of works in relation to it; the more energetic establishment of the Tramway system, and the advocacy of the Southern Railway Line have been referred to by me at previous meetings.

I do not seek the position of being your representative with any vain-glorious or ambitious ideas, but simply from a wish to do my duty to the electorate of Balmain.

Gentlemen, I leave my good cause in your hands, and remain,
Your obedient servant,
ALBERT ELKINGTON.

Clovernook, Balmain, November 10, 1880.

GLEBE ELECTION.

Sir GEORGE WIGRAM ALLEN will ADDRESS the ELECTORS TO-NIGHT at 8 o'clock, in the Glebe Town-hall.
T. DUNN, Esq., Mayor of the Glebe, will preside

TO THE ELECTORS OF ST. LEONARDS.

Gentlemen,—As the election of your representative in the new Parliament will, in all probability, be shortly decided, I deem it my duty as a candidate for your suffrages to lay before you my views on the leading public questions at issue.

On matters of a mere local character I can more fully and satisfactorily explain my opinion when I have the honour of addressing you in person than would be possible within the limits of an advertisement.

Proceeding, then, to the questions of the day, we have amongst others the all-important one of education. The present bill has my warm support, as I believe it contains much that will eventually work to the advantage of the people, and the special benefit of the rising generation. I am not prepared to say that it is yet perfect in detail, but I maintain that its principles are sound, and that it is entitled to a fair trial.

The present system of immigration I consider injudicious. I am of opinion that assisted immigration should be suspended for a term, as I hold that our present labour supply is fully equal to the demand. At the same time I should be prepared to support a measure that would induce a less dependent class of immigrants than that which has recently arrived in the colony to make their homes amongst us.

I am a thorough believer in the principles of free trade, for evidence of the advantages of which we can with honest pride draw a comparison between the prosperous condition of New South Wales and other parts that are trammelled with the fetters of an indiscriminate protective policy.

I would support a bill to encourage native industries by a bonus; and I am of opinion that all Government contracts should, as far as practicable, be dealt with in the country, even at an advance of 10 per cent. on foreign tenders.

I am totally opposed to the remission of interest on free selectors' balances; the debt has been contracted for value received, and should be paid.

I will support any reasonable measure having for its object the restriction of an influx of Chinese into the colony.

I am in favour of the judicious extension of our railways, both suburban and into the interior, believing that one of the first steps towards inducing the settlement of a new country should be provision of a reliable and effective means of communication. I am a staunch supporter of the eight-hour system.

The present Publicans' Licensing Act is susceptible of considerable improvements. I think the issue of licenses should be under the control of a duly appointed Board of supervisors, who should be empowered to determine the fitness of applicants, or the question be decided by the voice of the residents in the locality for which a license was applied. I further think that the cost of such license should be fixed on a graduating scale, inasmuch as small roadside houses cannot reasonably be expected to pay the same rate as a large city hotel. The reduction of the license for roadside houses would, I think, conduce to better accommodation being offered. I should be in favour of the appointment of inspectors, who should periodically inspect and test the quality of liquors sold by hotels and manufacturers.

The Land Act, I think, requires many amendments. I should be in favour of an increase of the rent for pastoral lands and ten years' leases.

The mining laws and regulations want a thorough remodelling, and to this matter I should be prepared to give my earnest attention; amongst other points I should advocate a stringent adherence to the full labour conditions in connection with mining and mineral leases, noncompliance therewith entailing immediate forfeiture, as at present there are thousands of acres held under mere nominal rents which if thrown open would afford employment to a considerable number of miners who are now in enforced idleness.

Our marine laws, it is very evident, require revision, if only to protect the lives of our seamen; such a case as the recent one of the Susanne Godeffroy alone demands such revision.

I am in favour of a high-level scheme for our water supply, and think all work now in progression should be suspended until full investigation is made into the proposed Kenny Hill scheme.

The sewage question should have my careful attention, and I may be pardoned for referring to the fact that the scheme now proposed to be adopted is identical with that advocated by me six years ago.

Should I have omitted in my brief remarks to express my policy on any matter of public interest, I shall be prepared to make good the deficiency when I meet you personally. Meanwhile, pledging myself, should you honour me with your confidence by returning me as your representative, to ever act consistently and energetically in my endeavours to advance your interests and the welfare of the colony, and trusting to be favoured with your support,

I remain,
Gentlemen,
Yours faithfully,
B. O. HOLTERMANN.

ALDERMAN HOGAN, J.P., is a CANDIDATE,
and respectfully solicits your VOTE and interest.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE KIAMA ELECTORATE.

Gentlemen,—Parliament having been dissolved, I have the honour to again offer myself as a candidate for your suffrages. Such a short time has elapsed since I last gave you my views on the political questions of the day, that it will be unnecessary for me to repeat them at length, and more particularly as I shall soon have the pleasure to address you at different parts of the electorate. The most important question which engaged the attention of the late Parliament, during the period I had the honour of being your representative, was the proposed duty on wool, coal, and cattle. I voted against this bill; and, in doing so, believe that I had the satisfaction of assisting in saving this country from having a measure passed into law which would have cramped our local manufactures, seriously affected our export trade in wool and coal, and been a great injustice to the owners of cattle.

I am in favour of the present Public Schools Act, and the only alteration I consider now necessary to make it, as it applies to primary education, perfect, is the abolition of school fees. I am also, as I stated in my address on a previous occasion, in favour of the establishment of technical colleges, and have for some time taken an active interest in endeavouring to have this object accomplished. Model farms, to teach agriculture and agricultural chemistry, should be established in certain parts of the colony, which, if properly conducted, would in a short time become self-supporting. I shall also advocate the establishment of high-class schools, in order that the more intelligent pupils at the primary schools may have the advantage of further training to qualify them for entrance to the University, or to follow what are denominated the learned professions. I also consider that the clause in the present Education Act, providing for the endowment of scholarships by Government, should be acted upon with as little delay as possible, in order to afford intelligent pupils, whose pecuniary position would otherwise render it impossible, opportunities to complete their education at the University. I consider that the present Church and School Lands Bill should remain intact, and if it should not receive the Royal assent, I am prepared to support another on a similar basis.

The present Land Act is in many respects defective, and any alteration in it to enable Government to let the lands of the colony upon liberal terms with secure tenure in pastoral and agricultural areas shall have my support. I am opposed to the remission of interest on free selectors' balances, as I consider such a step on the part of the Legislature would be an injustice to other members of the community, and from my own observations, which have been rather extensive, I believe that the bona-fide selector is perfectly satisfied with his bargain. In fact, we have only to look upon the prosperity of the free selectors in our neighbourhood, and the present value of their holdings, as a proof of this. The quantity of conditionally-purchased land in the colony in round numbers is about 11,000,000 acres, and the balances owing to the State about £8,000,000. To permit the repudiation of such a debt, or even the interest upon it, would be an act of dishonesty. I am a thorough advocate of the principles of free trade, believing that the prosperity and advancement of our country will be best promoted by such a policy.

I am in favour of the confederation of the Australian colonies, but consider it impossible to effect this object until the protective principles of Victoria have been exchanged for our free-trade policy.

I am in favour of the extension of railways throughout the colony to districts where the receipts would pay a fair interest on the capital invested, and I believe that the construction of a line of railway to connect the metropolis with the south coast districts would be a remunerative speculation. Such a line has had, and will continue to have my advocacy. The construction of the metropolitan and south coast railway would be of considerable advantage to the residents of Sydney, as it would give them an outlet to one of the most picturesque and fertile tracts of country in the southern hemisphere, and other advantages too numerous to mention. It would also enable the inhabitants of the districts through which it would pass to send their products to the metropolis, and tend to develop the vast mineral resources of the south coast districts. The promises of support given the recent deputation on the subject by the Minister for Public Works, and the general feeling expressed by the citizens of Sydney in its favour, as well as by gentlemen who are likely to occupy seats in the next Assembly, lead me to believe that a sum of money will be voted by the new Parliament to accomplish this object.

I do not consider fresh taxation necessary, as a large revenue can be obtained by increasing the rents of the Crown tenants, and giving them in return some security of tenure.

While advocating economy in the management of the Civil Service, I would not reduce the salaries of efficient public servants, but would support a liberal Civil Service Bill, which would enable candidates to enter the Civil Service by competitive examination. A bill of this description would root out the evil of Parliamentary patronage and secure to the public officer promotion according to merit and ability.

I am in favour of a proper system of immigration—a system to induce small agricultural capitalists and agricultural labourers to immigrate to this colony.

As to the defence of the colony, legislation is necessary, and some measure should be adopted to enable us to produce a body of trained soldiers at a short notice.

I will support a local Government Bill, as I believe local matters can be best dealt with by the inhabitants of each particular district.

With respect to publicans' licenses, I have always considered that the majority of the inhabitants of a town or village are the proper persons to decide whether they require a public-house or not.

With regard to local and other matters of public interest, I shall reserve myself until I have the pleasure of personally addressing you.

I remain, &c.,
Yours faithfully,
HARMAN J. TARRANT.

Penrith, November 11, 1880.

TO JNO. SMITH, Esq., J.P., GAMBOOLA, MOLONG.

Cudal, 11th October, 1880.

Dear Sir,—We, the undersigned, Electors of the Electoral District of Molong, beg to request that you will allow yourself to be nominated to represent us in the ensuing Parliament; and we hereby pledge ourselves, in the event of your compliance with our request, to use our best endeavours to secure your return.

We remain, dear sir,
Your obedient servants,
[Here follow 152 signatures.]

(Reply.)

To Messrs. Henry C. Wall, J.P., J. G. M'Lachlan, F. Tapp, Edward Taylor, S. Landauer, and the other gentlemen signing the requisition.

Gentlemen,—Your requisition, coming as it does from so numerous and influential a body of my fellow-electors, deprives me of all excuses. I cannot but feel it incumbent on me to sink all private considerations when thus called upon to undertake the high and responsible duty of representing the district in the Parliament of the country.

After a residence among you of forty years, to be selected for nomination as the first representative of Molong, is a high honour not to be disregarded; but higher still is the sense of duty which prompts me to respond to your call, and to place my humble services at your disposal.

I will take an early opportunity of meeting the electors generally at the various centres of population, when I will unreservedly state my opinions on the various public questions likely to engage the attention of the new Parliament. Meantime accept my assurance that, if returned, my best exertions shall be exercised to procure for this fine district that attention at the hands of Government which it has hitherto failed to secure from the absence of a local representative.

Your faithful servant,
JNO. SMITH.

Gamboola, 27th October, 1880.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE DISTRICT OF MOLONG.

Gentlemen,—Having, in response to a requisition, signed by 152 of your number, consented to be nominated as a candidate for your suffrages at the forthcoming election, it is now incumbent on me to submit my political views to your scrutiny, in order that you may judge of my qualifications for the position to which I aspire. But my own interests are so thoroughly identified with the progress of the district, that I trust I need not say much.

Ministers have intimated that the new Parliament will be invited to consider the division of the country districts into Municipalities, and the reform of the system of licensing public-houses. If you send me to Parliament I would advocate both of these measures. In the latter case, I would strenuously urge the expediency of some restriction in the indiscriminate increase of public-houses. I would take the power of granting certificates from the Courts of Petty Sessions, and vest it in a Board of four in each municipality, two members of this Board to be nominated by the Crown, and two elected by the ratepayers. Thus, in order to constitute a majority of this Board, without which no new license should be granted, the votes must be three to one.

Then the division of the settled districts into municipalities, with a liberal endowment from the rents of Crown lands for road purposes, would improve the position of the agriculturist more than an import duty on cereals would. District municipal action would train our young men to self-government and financial economy so necessary in young communities, and form the basis of truly British institutions.

An industrious agricultural population should be the pride and strength of every country, and every facility should be afforded by the Government to settle such upon our agricultural lands, or this great colony can never take its proper place among British possessions.

Our Government subsidizes gold-mining by offering rewards. How much better to subsidize agriculture by affording cheap conveyance to the principal market! This would benefit both producers and consumers, and check the demand for import duties on cereals.

Nor can any country become great and good without intellectual culture, and I would follow up the occupation of the lands by the extension of Public schools. The public money could not be better expended. The schoolmaster would be more efficient in checking crime than the police officer, and I hold it to be the duty of the State to prepare its youth for the exercise, in manhood, of those functions with which our Constitution invests them, and on which the well-being of the country will largely depend. A judiciously adjusted property tax must soon engage the attention of the legislature, as a means of raising revenue to meet the increasing expenditure involved in the establishment and maintenance of these schools.

Imported luxuries are also proper articles for taxation as a means of reaching the purses of those who can afford to contribute to the government of the country. Taxes on exports (such as recently attempted) are taxes on industry, and must eventually fall on labour, and this method of raising revenue is now almost universally condemned.

It will be the imperative duty of your representative to keep a watchful guard over the public expenditure. Hitherto we have been represented by members whose sympathies are with Sydney. That gigantic misappropriation of the public money—the railway via Ironbarks—would never have been perpetrated had you a member at head-quarters of sufficient weight to counteract the selfish misrepresentations of a few unscrupulous and interested individuals.

Gentlemen, I have nothing to gain by a seat in Parliament but the satisfaction arising from the performance of a duty to the district in which I have lived so long.

Family ties and the bulk of my property binding my warmest sympathies to this electorate, I cannot but feel deeply interested in its welfare; and you can safely rely on my advocacy of all measures calculated to enhance its moral, social, and material prosperity. The free selectors especially should rely on my anxious solicitude for their well-doing, seeing my own sons have extensive interests in common with them; and although I cannot promise everybody everything, I shall, if elected, be always ready to support their interests so far as may be consistent with my duty to the other classes of the community.

Your faithful servant,
JNO. SMITH.

Gamboola, 1st November, 1880.

TO THE ELECTORS OF HARTLEY.

As you have returned me against no mean opponents in several general elections, I beg to state that it is my intention again to offer myself for election. Since I have been your representative I have recorded no vote that gives me regret; nor have I taken part in any debate that I should wish to recall. During the Parliament whose dissolution is drawing near, I introduced several questions; amongst them the opening of the Public Library and Museum on Sundays, the initiation of Gaol Lectures, and for the introduction of a bill for the limitation of usury. I am prepared to defend the opinions I hold in regard to these matters, let the result be what it may. Those who have notified through the Press their intention of opposing me on these grounds can now have the opportunity of doing so. The present Education Act received my warmest support and advocacy, and I shall at all times defend it. I am of opinion that the people cannot be too thankful to the agitators of a free, secular, and compulsory education—the League—for some of the best principles in the Act. The present Government, in my opinion, deserves, in some respects, well of the country; and the people no doubt rejoice over the fruits of a coalition Government, though the measures passed were virtually created during previous Parliaments; but now the oil of lucre is fairly divided, the State coach runs smoothly. The proposals of the Government in regard to export duties met with all the opposition I could give them, the imposition of a duty on wool being most unjust, but not more so than the attempted royalty on coal, which, if carried, would have been a tax on all manufactures. I am in favour of still greater extension of railways, and regret that the present and past Administrations have lacked the energy and courage to construct a line to Circular Quay. I still firmly believe that railways should be formed from the sale of certain lands, as was explained in a resolution tabled by me on the 12th of November, 1878, viz.,—"That this House is of opinion that, in future, Crown lands adjoining to, and two miles in width on each side of, any proposed extensions of railways in this colony shall only be sold by auction, and that portions of such land as may be considered suitable for the purpose shall be reserved as the sites for townships or villages and for other public purposes, and that the proceeds of the sale of such land shall be set apart as a fund to be used in defraying the cost of such railways," &c., &c. The principle of this resolution was generally agreed to, but withdrawn on the promise of the Government to bring in a bill to deal with it. I believe in a constant flow of immigration to our shores, of a well selected class, notwithstanding the cant always raised against it by the so-called friends of the working classes. I am also of opinion that those who would deprive the country of some £450,000 per annum are worth watching. No principle of repudiation for remitting interest on the purchase-money of selections should be entertained for one moment. I favour an increased rental on runs, and for giving a more secure tenure. I shall support any measure for the prevention of Sunday selling in public-houses, and for the establishment of a Board to issue licenses. I shall not bind myself to support any particular party. Upon all matters of importance I shall address you in person. Trusting a renewal of your past confidence,

I am, yours, &c.,
J. HURLEY.

Petersham, 8th October, 1880.

TO THE ELECTORS OF CENTRAL CUMBERLAND.

Gentlemen,—Parliament having been dissolved, and writs issued for the new elections, I beg to announce myself, in compliance with your flattering requisition, as a candidate for one of the seats at your disposal.

I have the advantage of being personally known to many of you, as I have lived among you from my boyhood; and you are well aware of my efforts to develop industries in your midst.

I have hitherto taken but a moderate part in politics; but I believe I possess an amount of practical knowledge in arts and manufactures which will enable me to be of service as one of your representatives.

My views on the leading questions of the day are as follows:—

Education.—The country has reason to be satisfied with the instalment we have received from the late Parliament; but I do not consider the question settled until there is a free elementary education for every child in the colony.

Railways.—I am in favour of their widest extension throughout the territory at the earliest date. I consider their value to the country should be tested, not by the revenue they return, but by the extent of the produce-bearing districts which they connect with the capital. I will support the promotion of the Illawarra line, which has many claims to the favourable consideration of Parliament.

Chinese.—I am entirely opposed to the introduction of this class of persons into the colony.

Free Selectors' Interest.—I am also entirely opposed to the giving up of this interest, and I do not think it is asked for by the bona-fide selector.

Civil Service.—I am in favour of a bill to place the Civil Servants in a better position, both in regard to promotion by merit and seniority, and by graduated salaries as officers rise in the service.

Increased Taxation.—I am opposed to all export taxes. Our great national products should go out free to all the world. I prefer taxing (if there be need of taxation) imports to exports; and while I do not claim any undue advantage for manufacturers, yet I claim fair play for them, and for artisans in their own land.

Pastoral Tenants.—The revenue would be largely increased, and new taxes be unnecessary, if the Government had the courage to give the squatters long leases, secured from the intrusion of free selectors. The squatters could then afford to pay largely increased rents.

Licensing Question.—I am in favour of "local option," as opposed to the present system.

Municipalities.—I am in favour of their extension throughout the colony; and they should have a permanent endowment of pound for pound.

There are certain local matters which deserve attention. First, the division of your electorate into two, each returning a member; second, the obtaining a larger Government grant for our minor roads. Each of these propositions I shall heartily support if returned as one of your representatives.

I shall have the pleasure of addressing you at the several meetings which I purpose holding among you.

I am your faithful servant,
THOS. WEARNE.

Gentlemen,—I beg to inform you that I am a candidate for re-election for the above electorate at the forthcoming election.

TO THE ELECTORS OF SOUTH SYDNEY.

Gentlemen,—Having been absent from the colony for the past three weeks, and finding that Sir Henry Parkes has adopted the unprecedented course of unduly precipitating the elections, thereby preventing that discussion and consideration so necessary at the present time, I have resolved not to contest the election, and thereby allow those gentlemen whose opinions I can agree with, and who have been announced as candidates some time previous to the dissolution, to have a contest without the increased danger of their candidature being weakened by a division of votes. I thank those gentlemen who so generously proffered me their support.

TO THE ELECTORS OF HARTLEY.

Gentlemen,—The dissolution of Parliament being now an accomplished fact, I beg to offer myself as a Candidate for Election as your representative, having been requested by several members of your community to do so.

My past experience of six years in the Legislative Assembly justifies me in believing that I can faithfully do my duty to a constituency favouring me with its confidence, and I may be allowed to refer to the part taken by me in those years as indicating the course I may be expected to pursue in the future.

At general elections there are usually prominent questions at issue between different political parties; on this occasion no such issue is placed before you. I shall not, therefore, within the necessarily limited space of newspaper columns, attempt to express my opinions generally, but I shall take an early opportunity of calling meetings and addressing you throughout the electorate, when I shall be glad to explain my views on the leading questions of the day.

I have the honour to be,
Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
R. P. ABBOTT.

NOTHING NEW UNDER THE SUN.—SAM SLICK in his method of foisting his clocks on the gullible "blue noses" has had a host of imitators. A good article, well advertised, will always command a ready sale, and be sought after; but inferior ones require what they lack in merit to be made up by means of forced sales, and require taking from house to house, and left with people almost against their will, or better judgment.
THE AUTOMATIC SILENT SEWING MACHINE of the WILLCOX and GIBBS' COMPANY has made a name for itself through the length and breadth of the land, after years of well-tried experience, for its excellence of construction, durability, simplicity, and all the requisites of a true family machine, hence it recommends itself, and draws the custom that inferior machines require to run after.
